Augustus Thomas' great play, "Alabama," will be presented at Music Hall, Wednesday night. With the merits of the "Alabama" company the theatre-goers of this city are familiar. Nearly all of its members are actors of established and National reputation, and most of them are popular favorites in this city. Mr. Thomas' play has unquestionably placed him in the front ranks of the dramatists of the country. Its success in the east has been unqualified, and it has been universally accepted there as the distinctly American play. "Colonel Preston," is an old southerner who, fifteen years after the war, still hates the north. He has double reasons, for not only has his cause been defeated, but his only son "Harry" gave allegiance to the Union and fought on that side, and is supposed to have been killed. The old man still lives on his old plantation at Talladega. A railroad is to run through the little town, and its projection brings to the place a northern railroad man, "Captain Davenport," accompanied by a young northern surveyor. The former, who is in reality the supposed dead son of "Colonel Preston," conceals his identity for some time, fearing that his father still cherishes resentment. The play opens in the home of "Mrs. Page," who, before marrying "Danny Page," had loved "Harry Preston," but they had been separated by cruel parents. "Young Preston" had also married afterwards. but after leaving for the north his wife had died and left a child, "Carrie Preston," of whose existence her father has thus far been kept in ignorance. These threads of the story are deftly interwoven and gathered in a logical and coherent way in the final scene.

The Odd Fellows and even fellows will enjoy W. S. Cleveland's Massive Double Minstrels together at Music Hall Friday night W. S. Cleveland, of minstrelsy, has ambition and energy enough to supply a surplus to a half dozen managers. He is always up and doing and always doing the very bigest of thing in the largest and most generous of manners, because he is built in that way. William can't help it. No sooner does he do one big thing, that sets everybody a talking, than he is at it again, planning, conniving and arranging for something still greater. Now he has about eighty performers massed in one gigantic show—a white company, a coon compay. Do you catch on? "Just as black as black can be," and a section of Japan, and as if that was not enough three bands of music herald the coming of the quadrupled show in a great gorgeous street pageant.

Edward E. Rice's stupendous burlesque "Excelsior Jr.," with its seductive charms and wealth of spectacular accessories is at the Broadway theatre for the last week. Vivacious and irresistible Fay Templeton still heads the cast. Happy little Arthur Dunn the Multum in parvo comedian has a fresh box of jokes, and continues to terrorize the highways of the Alps in the role of a bold and fearless "Knight of the road." Seymour Hess as "Wm. Tell," displays his skill as the invincible archer of history, as well as being head in Coster Monger ditties, assisted by charming Marie Cahill. Mr. Arthur Bell interprets "Courier Gyde," a role in which he has made a decided hit, in fact his portrayal can be said to be the most artistic of any who have yet attempted it. La petite Beyo introduces a new dance feature which is quite a sensation in terpsichorean art.

An Easter Wedding.

One of the prettiest home weddings of Easter week, was that of Miss Anna May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Laston, of Far Hills, N. J., to William Prout, of Newark, which was solemnized at the residence of the bride's "Catalpa Farm" at high noon Thursday, April ninth. The large parlors were tastefully decorated with plants and flowers, and were illumined with wax candles. As the bridal party passed through the rooms to where a large floral bell was suspended from an archway. Mendelsohn's wedding march was played by Miss Lily Jones. The bride wore a handsome gown of white silk, trimmed with white lace and chiffon, and carried Easter lilies. She was attended by Miss Belle Hammond, whose gown was of white swiss, trimmed with white lace and ribbon, and who carried a bouquet of white orchids and pink roses. The groom was attended by his brother, Fred Prout, Joseph Layton and Frank Allen, of Scotch Plains, acting as ushers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Walker Jones, of Bedminster church, immediately after which a reception was held, at which there was dancing. The happy couple departed on a late train for an extended trip, which will include Boston and other eastern cities. They received a number of handsome and costly presents. Nearly a hundred friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony, and united in wishing the newly married couple God-speed. Guests were present from Scotch Plains and Plainfield.

NEW MARKET.

Mrs. Jackson is entertaining Miss Velma Crandall, of Alfred, N. Y.

Miss Mary Dunn, formerly of this place, but now of Newark, visited friends in town Sunday.

The surveying of the county road between the Dunellen borough line and Stelton has been completed.

At the First-Day Baptist church Sunday morning the right hand of fellowship was extended to twelve new members.

A meeting of the Borough Commissioners was held last Thursday evening for the purpose of organizing, and resulted in A. S. Coriell being reelected president, W. J. Davis, treasurer, and J. R. Dunham, clerk. The only other business transacted was to order that the dirt roads should be given a thorough scraping and overhauling.

WESTFIELD.

The New York Police Department telephoned to Westfield a day or two ago to know if anyone in the town could identify the men who broke into the post office recently, as the police had in custody a couple of men who were suspected of post office robbery.

L. M. Whitaker was set upon by a mastiff dog as he was walking along Central avenue Saturday afternoon. It was with great difficulty that he beat the animal off and escaped with only torn clothes. The dog is owned at Picton, but roams at large in Westfield, and is dangerous, as it has an ugly disposition.

WRONG AND RIGHT EATING.

One Makes Us Weak; The Other Makes Us Strong.

Wrong eating makes us weak, because it dosn't nourish us. It poisons us, because it sets up poisonous fermentation in our stomach and the poisons go into our blood.

Wrong eating is eating indigestible food, or eating more than our stomach is able to digest.

Right eating is eating digestible food, food that the stomach is able to digest, food that will nourish you when it is digested.

Right eating strengthens and invigorates the body, gives endurance, increases weight and restores health.

Wrong eating can be made right by taking the Shaker Digestive Cordial. This preparation, made by the Shakers from simple herbs, roots and wine, is delicious, refreshing and strengthing to the body. It is a powerful aid to digestion.

It does not act by strongly stimulating the stomach, but with its own digestive ferments acts on the food in the stomach, and reduces, instead of increasing, the work which the stomach has to do.

This is why it increases your strength, why it will cure you of all the bad effects of indigestion and of insufficient nourishment, and purifies your system of all dangerous indigestive poisons, when nothing else has been found to relieve you.

At druggist. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

Write for interesting book to The Shakers, 30 Reade street, New York.

CANOVAS DEL CASTILLO.

Famous in Spain as a Diplomat, Scholar and Political Leader.

Senor Antonio Canovas del Castillo, prime minister of Spain, is one of the most eminent literary men of Europe, besides being a really good stateman. Since he formed his ministry a year ago last June he has earned praise from the Spanish people. It was Canovas who ordered Concas, the geographer, to apologize to Minister Taylor recently for having spoken abusively of the United States, and it was by his orders that special detachments of police were put into service recently to prevent any serious attack on the legation of the United States. All this was thoughtful and wise. The premier was born in 1830, and his public life began in 1851, when he became editor of the Patria. Three years later he was named deputy for Malaga, and has been in the cortes ever since that time. He has had some diplomatic experience. In 1856 he was charge d'affaires at Rome. He it was who was largely concerned in drawing up the concordat between Spain and the holy see. He has been in turn governor of Cadiz, director general of the administration and under secretary of state for the interior. In 1864 the queen called him to the ministry, and he was minister of finance and of the colonies. Passing through the revolution, his greatest triumph was to uphold legitimate and constitutional monarchy in the constituent assembly of 1868 in the face of the triumphant revolution. For this he has become the supreme director of the Alfonsist party, and his honors in that capacity have been sufficient to make up a small history in themselves. In spite of extraordinarily busy public and political life he has found time to write numerous books on moral and political science, which have placed him in the forefront of the profoundest thinkers of Europe and have won for him large honors from several continental monarchs. Take him all around Senor Canovas is one of the brightest, ablest, most intellectual supporters of the monarchical idea in the world to-day.

ANTONIO CANOVAS DEL CASTILLO.

NAPOLEON THE FOURTH.

A Boy Who May Some Day Become Emperor of the French.

In a big old chateau just outside of Paris lives a 14-year-old boy who may some day be the emperor of France. The latter country is so unsettled in its politics, and there are so many of its inhabitants who would rather be ruled by an emperor than by a president elected by the people, that it is not wholly impossible that the youth here described may not some day be an imperial successor to the throne of the great Napoleon I. Indeed, the boy is none other than Napoleon IV., legitimate son of the late prince imperial.

Very little is known in or out of France about the little fellow who has a kingly prospect. One thing is certain, Empress Eugenie is very fond of Napoleon IV., whom she tenderly calls her grandson, and it is she who is providing the boy's education—an education that is fitting him for statesmanship, politics and diplomacy. Although he may never sit on the throne of a new French empire, it is just as well, so his guardians think, to have the boy in perfect trim for the high position which he and his followers covet.

The young Napoleon IV. is a black-haired lad, manly in his bearing, and of robust health. The greatest possible pains is taken in his training, and special tutors are engaged to teach him special studies. Even if he can never become a great monarch, he will at least be a polished gentleman and scholar. The boy lives modestly with a Dr. Evans, whose son he is supposed to be, and who is looking after the would-be king's health and training. Once a month the boy's mother visits him, sometimes in the company of Empress Eugenie. The mother of the new Napoleon is a bright little English woman, who sings divinely, and is loved even by the silver-haired old empress.

Such is the true story of Napoleon IV. He may yet be one of the foremost figures in France. He is the last hope of the Napoleons. Will he ever realize his lofty ambition? Future history will record the facts.

Runovers in Paris Streets

French law favors the drivers and carriage folk, and not the pedestrians; and as a result it is said there were more people killed in the streets of Paris last year than died from all the diseases that Pasteur devoted his science to combat.

"Look here, Henry!" said Uncle Levelhead, addressing his nephew, "if you intend to amount to anything in this life you must stop wavering from one thing to another and confine yourself to some specialty."

"I don't know about that," returned the young man.

"Well, I do! If you hope to succeed you must emulate the example of the postage stamp, the usefulness of which depends upon its ability to stick to one thing till it gets there."—Truth.

Hard on Forrest.

Forrest, the actor, once visited a lunatic asylum before producing "Lear," to study the insane. He watched one of the male patients for some time, during which the man kept saying: "I wonder how long? I wonder how long?"

Finally Forrest interrupted him. "What is it that you wonder so long?"

The man turned on him with a laugh. "I wonder how long a fool like you will stand here looking for something he can't see!"—Amusing Journal.

Kind Words Never Die.

"What do you suppose I'll look like when I get out of this," snapped a young lady at the conductor of an overcrowded cable car.

"A good deal like crushed sugar, miss," said the conductor with a beaming smile. And the lady hung on to the strap and rode three miles further with the look of an angel on her face.—Texas Siftings.

Unfortunate.

Castleton—I happened to run into Pendash's office yesterday just as he was making out an application for life insurance. Old man, I wouldn't have had that happen for anything.

Ringway—Why? Was it such an interruption?

Castleton—Oh, no. But he introduced me to the agent.—Brooklyn Life.

3,000 DEATHS A DAY.

Startling Statistics in Regard to Consumption.

Some Idea Also of the Proportion of Cures—Analysis of the Dread Disease.

When we visit a factory where there are the most delicate and most dangerous machines, we are amazed to notice how indifferent the workmen are to the danger about them. Saws and knives work rapidly, and yet no one seems to think of danger. Long association with danger causes indifference to it.

If the statement were made that there was a contagious disease abroad in the land which was killing people at the rate of 3,000 a day in Europe, thirty a day in New York State, and nearly 100,000 in one year in the United States, every one would be aroused to action. Yet such a condition exists to-day. Consumption is a contagious disease, and the above figures concerning it are taken from recent reports. But we have become so familiar with the disease in our midst, that we do not fully understand its terrible nature.

Yet it is surprising how many recover from this disease. Even after the germs of consumption cause serious damage to the lungs, thousands recover. As yet, no specific is known for the disease. The treatment consists in giving aid to the body in its efforts to destroy the disease germs. For two centuries, cod-liver oil has occupied the first place in the list of remedies. The next valuable remedies are the hypophosphites. Some rely on one alone, but as both are recognized as of great value, we think it best to combine them. Thus you are sure of getting every help which the best remedies known to medical science can afford. In Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, the oil is emulsified, that is the oil is broken up into minute globules of fat. The oil is digested and thus saves the weakened body from doing this work. What will Scott's Emulsion do for those with weak lungs?

If taken before the germs of consumption have secured a foothold in the lungs, it will so invigorate and nourish the body that the disease will be successfully resisted. In this way it prevents consumption. Even after the lungs are diseased, the body emaciated, and the health greatly affected it will often enable the system to come off victorious. And even in the last stages of the disease, when all hope of recovery has been abandoned, it lessens the severity of the attack, and makes the last days more comfortable. Scott's Emulsion brings hope and health to the great majority, while it brings comfort and relief to all.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

Why had she selected him from among them, when she could have modeled the others like wax to her purpose? Why? And yet with the question came a possible answer that he hardly dared to think of; that in its very vagueness seemed to fill him with a stimulating thrill and hopefulness. He quickened his pace. He would take the letter and yet be master of himself when the time came to open it.

That time came three days later, in his tent on Three Pine Crossing. As he broke open the envelope he was relieved to find that it contained no other inclosure, and seemed intended only for himself. It began abruptly:

"When you read this you will understand why I did not speak to you when we met last night; why I even dreaded that you might speak to me, knowing what I ought to tell you even at such a place and moment—something you could hear from me alone. I did not know you were in Washington, although I knew that you were relieved; I had no way of seeing you or sending to you before, and I only came to Mrs. Boompointer's party in the hope of hearing news of you.

"You know that my brother was captured by your pickets, in company with another officer. He thinks you suspected the truth, that he and his friend were hovering near your lines to effect the escape of the spy. But he says that although they failed to help her she did escape, or was passed through the lines by your connivance. He says that you seemed to know her, that from what Rose, the mulatto woman, told him, you and she were evidently old friends. I would not speak of this, nor intrude upon your private affairs only that I think you ought to know that I had no knowledge of it when I was in your house, but believed her to be a stranger to you. You gave me no intimation that you knew her, and I believed that you were frank with me. But I should not speak of this at all, for I believe that it would have made no difference with me in repairing the wrong that I thought I had done you, only that as I am forced by circumstances to tell you the terrible ending of this story you ought to know it all.

"My brother wrote to me that the evening after you left the burying party picked up the body of what they believed to be a mulatto woman lying on the slope. It was not Rose, but the body of that very woman—the real and only spy—whom you had passed through the lines at daybreak. My brother thinks she was accidentally killed in the first attack upon you by her own friends, and so fell a double martyr. But only my brother and his friend recognized her through her blackened face and disguise, and on the plea that she was a servant of one of their friends, they got permission from the division commander to take her away, and she was buried by her friends and among her people in the little cemetery of Three Pines crossing, not far from where you have gone. My brother thought I ought to tell you this; it seems that he and his friend had a strange sympathy for you in what they appear to know or guess of your relations with that woman, and I think he was touched by what he thought was your kindness and chivalry to him on account of his sister. But I do not think he ever knew, or will know, how great is the task that he has imposed upon me.

"You know now, do you not, why I did not speak to you when we first met. It seemed so impossible to do it in an atmosphere and a festivity that was so incongruous to the dreadful message I was charged with. And when I had to meet you later—perhaps I may have wronged you—but it seemed to me that you were so preoccupied and interested with other things that I might perhaps only be wearying you with something you cared little for, or perhaps already knew and had quickly forgotten.

"I had been wanting to say something else to you when I had got rid of my dreadful message. I do not know if you still care to hear. But you were once generous enough to think that I had done you a service in bringing a letter to your commander. Although I know better than anyone else the genuine devotion to your duty that made you accept my poor service, from all that I can hear you have never had the credit of it. Will you now try me again? I am in more favor here, and I might yet be more successful in showing your superiors how true you have been to your trust, even if you have little faith in your friend Matilda Faulkner."

For a long time he remained motionless with the letter in his hand. Then he arose, ordered his horse and galloped away.

There was little difficulty in finding the cemetery of Three Pines crossing—a hillside slope, hearsed with pine and cypress and starred with white crosses, that in the distance looked like flowers. Still less was there in finding the newer marble shaft among the older lichen spotted slabs, which bore the simple words: "Alice Benham, Martyr." A few confederate soldiers, under still plainer and newer wooden headstones, carved only with initials, lay at her feet. Brant sank on his knees beside the grave, but he was thrilled to see that the base of the marble was stained with the red pollen of the fateful lily, whose blossoms had been heaped upon her mound, but whose fallen petals lay dark and sodden in decay.

How long he remained there he did not know. And then a soiltary bugle from the camp seemed to summon him as it had once summoned him before—and he went away—as he had gone once before—to a separation that he now knew was for all time.

Then followed a month of superintendence and drill, and the infusing into the little camp under his instruction the spirit which seemed to be passing out of his own life forever. Shut in by alien hills on the border land of the great struggle, from time to time reports reached him of the bitter fighting and almost disastrous successes of his old division commander. Orders came from Washington to hurry the preparation of his raw levies for the field, and a faint hope sprang up in his mind. But following it came another dispatch ordering his return to the capital.

He reached it with neither hope nor fear, so benumbed had become his spirit under this last trial, and what seemed to be now the mockery of his last sacrifice to his wife. Though it was no longer a question of her life and safety, he knew that he could still preserve her memory from stain, by keeping her secret even though its divulgence might clear his own. For that reason he had even hesitated to inform Susy of her death, in the fear that in her thoughtless irresponsibility and impulsiveness she might be tempted to use it in his favor. He had made his late appointment a plea for withholding any present efforts to assist him. He even avoided the Boompointers' house, in what he believed was partly a duty to the memory of his wife. But he saw no inconsistencies in occasionally extending his lonely walks to the vicinity of a foreign legation, or in being lifted with a certain expectation at the sight of its liveries on the avenue. There was a craving for sympathy in his heart, which Miss Faulkner's letter had awakened.

Meantime he had reported himself for duty at the war department, with little hope, however, in that formality. But he was surprised the next day when the chief of the bureau informed him that his claim was before the president.

"I was not aware that I had presented any claim," he said a little haughtily.

The bureau chief looked up with some surprise. This quiet, patient, reserved man had once or twice puzzled him before. "Perhaps I should say 'case,' general," he said, drily. "But the personal interest of the highest executive in the land strikes me as being desirable in anything."

"I only mean that I have obeyed the orders of the department in reporting myself here, now and before," said Brant, with less feeling, but none the less firmness, "and I should imagine it was not the duty of a soldier to question them, which I fancy a 'claim' or a 'case' would imply."

He had no idea of taking this attitude before, but the disappointments of the past month, added to this first official notice of his disgrace, had brought forward again that dogged, reckless, yet half-scornful, determination that was part of his nature.

The official smiled. "I suppose, then, you are waiting to hear from the president," he said, drily.

"I am waiting orders from the department," returned Brant quietly, "but whether they originate in the president or commander in chief, or not, it does not seem for me to inquire."

Even when he reached his hotel this half savage indifference which had taken the place of his former incertitude had not changed. It seemed to him that he had reached the crisis of his life where he was no longer responsible, but could wait superior alike to effort or expectation. And it was with a merely dispassionate curiosity that he found a note the next morning from the president's private secretary informing him that the president would see him early that day.

A few hours later he was ushered through the public room of the white house to a more secluded part of the household. The messenger stopped before a modest door and knocked. It was opened by a tall figure. The president himself. He reached out a long arm to Brant, who took it hesitatingly on the threshold, grasped his hand and led him into the room. It had a single, large, elaborately draped window, and a magnificent medallion carpet, which contrasted with the otherwise almost appalling simplicity of the furniture. A single, plain, angular desk, with a blotting pad and a few sheets of large foolscap paper upon it, a waste paper basket, and four plain armchairs, completed the interior, with a contrast as simple and homely as its long-limbed black-coated occupant. Releasing the hand of the general to shut the door, which opened into another apartment, the president shoved an armchair towards Brant and sank somewhat wearily into another before the desk. But only for a moment; the long, shambling limbs did not seem to adjust themselves easily to the chair; the high, narrow shoulders drooped to find a more comfortable lounging attitude, shifted from side to side, and the long legs moved dispersedly. Yet the face that was turned toward Brant was humorous and tranquil.

"I was told I would have to send for you if I wished to see you," he said, smilingly.

Already mollified, and perhaps again falling under the previous influences of this singular man, Brant began somewhat hesitatingly to explain.

"You don't understand. It was something new to my experience here to find an able-bodied American citizen with a genuine healthy grievance who had to have it drawn from him like a decayed tooth. But you have been here before. I seem to remember your face."

Brant's reserve had gone. He admitted that he had twice sought an audience—but—

"You dodged the dentist! That was wrong." As Brant made a slight movement of deprecation the president continued: "I understand; not from the fear of giving pain to yourself, but to others. I don't know that that is right, either. A certain amount of pain must be suffered in this world, even by one's enmies. Well, I have looked into your case, Gen. Brant." He took up a piece of paper from his desk, scrawled with two or three notes in pencil. "I think this is the way it stands: You were commanding a position at Gray Oaks, when information was received by the department that either through neglect or complicity, spies were passing through your lines. There was no attempt to prove your neglect; your orders, the facts of your personal care and precaution, were all before the department; but it was also shown that your wife, from whom you were only temporarily separated, was a notorious secessionist; that before the war you yourself were suspected, and that therefore you were quite capable of evading your own orders which you may have only given as a blind. On this information you were relieved by the department of your command. Later on it was discovered that the spy was none other than your own wife disguised as a mulatto; that after her arrest by your own soldiers you connived her escape—and this was considered conclusive proof of, well, let us say, your treachery."

"But I did not know it was my wife until she was arrested," said Brant, impulsively.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Tom Muir, of West Fourth street, visited Elizabeth on his wheel Sunday.

Morris Sorensen is the first man in Plainfield to ride a yellow enameled Cleveland track wheel.

Fred J. Pope and Thomas U. Smith went to Cranford Sunday on their wheels to visit friends.

Vacation tours a-wheel promise to be a fad this season that ought not only be extremely popular, but profitable.

The Victor Wheelmen will take a run to Newark on Sunday, April 26th, under the leadership of Capt. Israel Jones.

W. Gordon Williams rode to White House on his wheel Saturday night in one hour and thirty-two minutes in spite of the bad roads.

In the next League of American Wheelmen bulletin, a notice from the New Jersey Division will appear offering a reward of $25 for the recovery of a stolen wheel belonging to any member of the New Jersey Division and the arrest of the thief.

Chief Consul Gentle, of New Jersey, and Chief Consul Potter, of New York State, have practically decided on chartering a special train for the benefit of the members of their divisions who wish to go to Louisville for the National L. A. W. meet.

John Keefe, formerly employed by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, but now the ready salesman of the Keer & Martin Cycle Company, of Newark, has become quite an expert trick rider. He is now filling a week's engagement at Waldmann's Theatre, Newark, as a trick rider.

The century run of the Twenty-second Regiment Cyclers, of New York, to Patchogue, which will occur on Sunday, May 3d, bids fair to be an important event. Several military officials of high rank have signified their intention of attending and personally observing the practicability of the wheel as a military conveyance. The special features of the run will be the starting of three distinct divisions—namely: slow, fast, and racing.

A new work has been found for cycle clubs to do. At the recent annual meeting of the Red Bank Wheelmen a good roads committee was appointed, whose duty it will be to ride every week over the roads of Shrewsbury township, and report the bad places to the township committee, with suggestions that those places be improved. At the same meeting the club decided to make application for membership in the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey.

It is not in the least necessary for a puncture to drive the average rider into a state of panic, says The New York Times, and if he will but take a moment or two to do the job properly, he will be amply repaid for his trouble in having a permanent repair. In the first place, make sure that the plug has a blunt edge patch of ample surface, the more ample the stronger the mending will be. It is not necessary to attempt to put a very large patch into a very small hole. To complete the operation, see that the puncture hole and the plug patch are clean—scraping with a common penknife will serve the purpose—and then with a cement of good consistency insert the plug, inflate the tire, allowing the former a moment or two to properly settle, cut off the projecting stem, and ride away.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Ed Campbell, of Avon Park, shot a fish-hawk at New Brooklyn pond last week that measured four feet from tip to tip.

George P. Smith is entered to represent the High School at the Trinity School games next Friday in the shot-putting contest.

An athletic club has been organized in Roselle, and as soon as the organization is perfected it will enter a team in the amateur base ball league.

Among the entries for the athletic games of the Drisler School Athletic Association of New York on Berkeley Oval, Friday, April 24th, are three High School athletes. Geo. P. Smith will put the shot, Herbert Richardson will contest in the running events, and George Coard in bicycle races.

WITH ROD AND GUN

Fishermen are certain that this year will be an exceptionally good one for suckers. Each fisherman on his return home reports phenomenal luck. Thomas Fahey, who spent a day at New Market, returned with a very large catch. The fish are exceptionally large, the average weight being about 1½ pounds. George Fisher, of West Second street, tried his luck at New Market, yesterday, and returned home with 23 fish.

Gov. Griggs Saturday afternoon considered the last two games bills. The act of most importance is the one which fixed a general open season for game throughout the State. The new law makes the open season as follows for the whole State: Rabbits and quail, from November 10th to January 1st; woodcock, the month of July and from October 1st to December 10th; snipe, March, April and September; ruffed grouse, October 1st to December 10th; reed and rail birds, September; squirrels, September and from November 10th to December 10th; plover and dove, August and September. An important change in the law provides that possession of game is prohibited absolutely except during the open season, and for thirty days thereafter. Gov. Griggs has announced that he would sign the bill. The Governor disapproves of the bill providing for a reduction in the number of wardens from twenty-five to fifteen.

LAWN TENNIS.

The lawn tennis season, which will open in a few weeks, on the earth courts at least, promises to be an unusually busy one for New Jersey. The national committee has announced these dates for the clubs in this State: May 2d, Princeton Interscholastic championship, at Princeton; June 10th, Middle States championship, at Orange; June 17th, New Jersey State championship, at Ridgewood; July 6th, Seabright Cricket Club, open tournament; August 3d; Norwood Park Casino, Long Branch open tournament. In addition to these dates the Orange, East Orange, Summit, Plainfield, Montclair and Newark clubs will arrange club and open tournaments.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The head-pin tournament at the Crescent Wheelmen's alleys has been declared off on account of the approach of warm weather.

TWO FIRES AT ONCE.

Neither Were Large Conflagrations And Were Luckly Extinguished.

Quite a little excitement was caused this afternoon by two alarms of fire, one being sent in while the fire department was answering the other.

The first was sent in from Box 18 at 2:45. It was the large dog kennels of C. R. Wright, 73 Leland avenue. The cause was unknown. There were no hydrants about, so the chemical engine was used to extinguish it.

The second alarm was sent in from box 23 by Henry Drake. It was the two and one-half frame dwelling house of Michael Ettinger, 413 Cottage place. The roof caught from a spark from a passing locomotive. The roof was burned off.

Hiram Semer kept a little store downstairs. The damage from fire and water was about $200. Semer's stock was ruined.

Mrs. Ettinger became wild with fright, thinking her children were in the building. She had to be dragged out several times.

If Not Cleveland, Who?

That's what the New York World wants to know. It seems hard guessing, doesn't it? But it's easy compared with the one we propound:

IF NOT GILCHESTER CYCLES, WHAT & WHY?

This is a hard one, because there is no answer to it that can carry any weight. A $100 wheel for $85. Who gets the $15? Let us talk to you about it.

ON TENEMENT HOUSES.

A Practical and Interesting Lecture Given in the Crescent Avenue Church.

Last evening the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church was well filled with people who had come to listen to and see what Mr. Arthur W. Milbury, of New York, had to tell and to exhibit. The attraction was a stereopticon lecture given by Mr. Milbury, illustrating his work in New York city in the tenement and lodging houses. The first picture cast upon the scene was one of the Saviour, the man who came upon the earth and spent his life time in the work of elevating the poor and needy.

Then three stanzas of Coronation were to be seen upon the canvas and with Miss French at the piano, everyone present was asked to join in singing the familiar hymn.

After the singing of this hymn, the lecture began. The first illustration was one showing a block of tenement houses in New York, with the walls of the several buildings so close, that an air chamber of only eighteen inches was left between the buildings, thus allowing little, if any, fresh air into a large number of the rooms of the houses.

While everyone's mind was thinking of the horrible situation in which these people live, Mr. Milbury gave some amazing statistics. In speaking of the death rate of these people, he said that where the death rate should be only twenty-one out of one thousand, as it is in the healthy parts of the city, it is nearly three times as large, being sixty-two out of one thousand. The death rate of children in healthy localities is fifty-seven in a thousand and in the tenement regions it is 104 in a thousand.

Several pictures of old New York followed in quick succession, among which was a scene in Mulberry Bend, a place which will soon be of the past, as it is being torn down and a beautiful park will be placed there for the benefit of the poor.

Mr. Milbury said: "New York is especially blessed by nature, being supplied with the greatest facilities for parks of any of the large cities."

Several pictures of the lodging houses in England were shown, displaying a great contrast between the English and the American houses. In London there cannot be found a single dwelling house that can be placed on the same level with the poorest of those in America, as in truth the poorest accommodations in London are far superior to the best of the New York tenements. In London the tenements are owned by large trust companies who have built their houses in a scientific way, having all rooms of the house opening into the pure air and warm sunshine in both front and rear. These houses rent for about 37 cents a week per room, and have all modern improvements. The companies are paying about 4 per cent. dividends, laying aside 2 per cent. every year as a sinking fund, and keeping their buildings in first-class repair. In fact they pay better than any railroad investment.

"Why cannot the American people do the same?" asked Mr. Milbury. "Well, they can and they are doing, or rather beginning to do it, and it is not long before America also will take a great step forward in this line."

Mr. Milbury's work is chiefly in the tenement and lodging house work and he is greatly interested in the building of new and the abolishment of the old tenement houses. At the close of the lecture a collection was taken up and given to Mr. Milbury to aid him in his work.

New Bridge at Findern.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met at Somerville yesterday and decided to erect a handsome substantial bridge at Findern. It was reported that the work on the bridge at Neshanic was progressing favorably.

A New Factory Rumored.

The Daily Press has been informed on good authority that work on a new factory will be started in this city in about two weeks. It will require the employment of about 200 men.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

DEMOCRATS ON TOP NOW

YESTERDAY'S ELECTIONS RESULTED FAVORABLY FOR THEM.

In Elizabeth Mayor Rankin Was Elected, But the Rest of the Republican Candidates Were Defeated.—Other Results.

The charter election in Jersey City yesterday resulted in a sweeping Democratic victory. The Democrats elected their two candidates for Street and Water Commissioners, and seventeen of the eighteen Aldermen. The total vote cast was 22,302, which is a falling off of 8,000 from the vote of last spring.

The Democrats were greatly rejoiced that the city has been redeemed and that the people have abandoned the Republicans, who got into power through the sham cry of reform.

In Elizabeth Mayor Rankin was victorious by 314 majority. P. J. Ryan, Democrat, was elected councilman-at-large by 241 majority. The common council will now stand eight Democrats and five Republicans. Last year that body was Republican. The board of education is also Democratic, whereas before it was Republican. Three Republican freeholders were elected. The election was not marked by any exciting incidents, though a large vote was cast.

The Democrats carried Newark by storm, even in Republican strongholds. The reform administration has been routed on every side. James M. Seymour, who ran against the present Mayor two years ago and was defeated by 4,700, was elected yesterday by 4,500.

In Rahway the Republican city ticket was elected, including a school commissioner-at-large and a water commissioner-at-large.

In Trenton the election resulted in the success of the reform excise ticket by over 500 plurality. The result will be a stricter enforcement of the liquor laws and a reduction in the number of saloons.

In New Brunswick the election resulted as follows: For alderman, First ward, Edward T. Runyon, Democrat; Second ward, Joseph Miller, Republican; Third ward, Henry C. Housell, Democrat; Fourth ward, Charles A. Oliver, Democrat. Indications are that the Democrats have elected C. A. Dunn, assessor; William C. Jaques, alderman-at-large, and William E. Florence, collector.

The number of Republicans who were scratching Mayor Rankin did not seem to be as large as was at first counted upon by the Democrats. A feature of the election was the presence around the polling booths of twenty-five Pinkerton detectives from New York, who were taken to Elizabeth by the frightened Democratic managers to prevent alleged attempts to influence voters with money, although there was no evidence of any such effort.

BACKED OFF THE CAR.

An Employe of D. C. Ivins & Co. Sustains a Painful Injury.

Edward Dooley, of East Fourth street, an employee of D. C. Ivins & Co., the lumber and coal merchants, of Watchung avenue, met with an accident yesterday afternoon which will in all probability disable him for work for some time. He was unloading lumber from a car and in lifting a heavy piece, backed off the edge and fell to to the coal sheds below, a distance of about fifteen feet. He fell squarely upon his back. Some of his fellow-workmen ran to where he had fallen and found he was badly bruised about the back and hips and he was taken to his home on East Fourth street. Today he is able to walk about with the aid of a cane, but he will not be able to resume work for some time, as the injury is a very painful one.

Nimble Nut Crackers.

Four young lady members of the Obiter Dicta club, a reading society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of this city, namely, the Misses Ernestine Smith, Ida Randolph, Louize Lewis and Louize Clauson, with Frank Hubbard and Everitt Kimball, Monday night cracked and shelled thirty pounds of nuts which was made into candy yesterday, and will be sold tonight at the Spring sociable held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

Saw the Field Marshal.

W. D. Murray, of West Ninth street, made a flying trip to Albany Monday when he argued a case in the Court of Appeals, the highest court in New York State. While Mr. Murray was speaking, Governor Morton and the distinguished Japanese visitor, Field Marshal Yamataga, came to the door and the case was stopped while the Chief Justice was introduced.

—Car No. 5 of the street railway was disabled on the Somerset street branch last night by the burning out of the fuse.

A DELIGHTED AUDIENCE.

An Enjoyable Programme Rendered at the Congregational Church.

It was a highly delighted audience that left the Congregational church last evening after attending the recital held there under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. The programme was all that could be desired and, although the mercury seemed to have a special longing for the top of the thermometer, the evening was a most enjoyable one. An enthusiastic audience comfortably filled the church and heartily applauded each number.

The programme published in Monday's Press, was followed out exactly. The opening selection was by that well known instrumental trio, Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, and they rendered the selection with a finish that told of their complete command of their instruments.

Her simple but expressive manner of speaking and her pleasing method of delivery made Mrs. Herbert C. Williams, of Elizabeth a favorite from the start. Her choice of selections was good and that the audience enjoyed them was shown by their applause. William E. MacClymont, is too well-known in this city to need comment as is also P. Ludwig Conde. Both rendered their selections in their usual excellent manner and deserved the hearty applause they received.

The fine contralto voice of Miss Katheryn Krymer, of Brooklyn, has been heard in this city before, but it was never heard to better advantage than it was last night. Her encores, "Little Doris" and "I Want Yer Ma Honey," were particularly well received.

Banjo music is always popular in this city, but never more so than when rendered by such excellent players as William J. Edwards and George B. Wheeler, of Bayonne. Their time was perfect and they played together most delightfully. Mr. Edwards showed himself as good an artist on the mandolin, and his solo on that instrument called forth loud applause that would not cease until he gave another selection.

The entertainment was gotten up by the social committee, of which Miss Adeline Parsons is chairman. Considerable credit is also due to some of the older members of the church who aided the success of the social.

THE GAY INDIANS.

Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe to Celebrate Their Anniversary Tomorrow.

Business men and others were surprised yesterday afternoon by receiving a call from the runners of Paugh-Caugh Naugh-Sinqne Tribe of Indians, announcing to them and the citizens of Plainfield that the event of the season would take place tomorrow evening at the Columbia Cycle Academy, when the second anniversary of their tribe would be celebrated by a masqued ball and Indian peace dance. All were asked to attend and show to the visiting Indians of this reservation that the Indians with the long name know how to entertain their pale face friends. Go and join with them; you will find that the large dancing surface will be as free to you as it will be to the Indians.

It is not necessary that your costume should be an Indian one, as all kinds will be there and many new and original designs will be seen. Innocent fun and guessing the novelty will play no small part in the second anniversary of the tribe.

Reception for the New Pastor.

The members of Grace M. E. church who have always proved themselves to be very hospitable gave further evidence of it last evening when they gave their new pastor, Rev. H. C. Johnston, a reception in the church. It was one of those exceedingly pleasant informal gatherings which is a feature at this church. There was a large number of people present who became better acquainted with their new leader and judging from appearances a great amount of good work will be accomplished in the future. The women in charge of the refreshments, which interspersed the good time, were Mrs. J. H. Carney, Mrs. Hoagland, Mrs. Sheppard, Mrs. William Lunger, Mrs. James Lunger, Mrs. Loomis, Mrs. Charles Hummer and Mrs. Andrew Lutkins.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. For sale at 50c per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

VOLUNTEERS TO RALLY.

A Big Meeting to be Addressed by Major Pattie Watkins.

Even though the weather may be warm and sultry on Thursday evening, every person interested in the new movement of the American Volunteers will find great enjoyment and profit at Reform Hall. An interesting programme has been planned and several officers of the Volunteers will be present and speak of the new work.

The chief feature of the meeting will be an address by Major Pattie Watkins, who is considered one of the leading spirits of the new movement and is ranked as second only to Mrs. Ballington Booth, and is now in charge of the battalions of New York and New Jersey. She is the one who secured Cooper-Union for the use of the Army. It was she who secured the first permit from Mayor Gilroy to hold open-air meetings in New York. Major Watkins, who is known as the "Welsh Nightingale" on account of her singing, will render several selections at the meeting.

The new uniforms of the Volunteers will be worn for the first time and the new flag of the army will be presented.

Captain Minns, who is one of the leading elements of the army and in command of the Plainfield post, will be present with several others of almost equal rank.

DORETHA DIX, PHILANTHROPIST.

An Interesting Paper on Her Read Before the Branch Alliance.

The Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and other Liberal Christian Women held their last meeting for the season in the Unitarian church yesterday afternoon. After reports had been read by the religious news committee and mission secretary, the class subject, "Dorothea Dix," was taken up. A most excellent paper was prepared by Mrs. Fitch, of Erie, Pa., and read by Mrs. W. F. Adams. She was born in Maine, April 4th 1802, and was brought up in Boston by her grandmother. When she reached a proper age she taught school in Boston and Worcester. Her chief work was interesting herself in improving the condition of the insane poor. For this purpose she traveled all over the country, and presented her cause before many Legislatures. As a result many asylums were established in a number of States. She continued her work in Europe, and helped Florence Nightingale in the Crimean war. The asylum in the Isle of Jersey was established through her efforts. She was a nurse and organizer of hospital service during the Civil war, after which she gathered bodies of slain soldiers and superintended the erection of a monument. New Jersey offered her a home for life in the State hospital, which she accepted. Her death occurred in 1887. An interesting informal discussion followed, after which a vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Fitch for the admirable paper.

BAPTIST PARISH MEETING.

Annual Reports Made and New Officers Chosen for the Year.

The annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church was held last evening in the Sunday-school room of the church. J. M. Hetfield was chosen chairman, and J. Herbert Case, secretary, in the absence of O. B. Leonard, who was detained on account of the death of his sister. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Treasurer, Alex. Gilbert, presented his annual report. It showed that over $6,000 had been received and expended and there is now a balance of $47.65 in the treasury. The trustees estimated that $6,500 would be needed for 1896. Martin I. Cooley and L. V. F. Randolph were elected trustees for three years, and John D. Runyon was chosen trustee for two years to fill the vacancy caused by the declination of Geo. Chapman. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

A Pleasant Reception.

The Watchung Avenue Social club held a reception last evening at the home of Miss Emma Angleman, 226 East Fourth street. Prof. Guttman furnished music for dancing which was continued until after midnight. Among those present were: Miss Gertie Skillman, Miss Lina Sargant, Misses Mamie and Susie Schaefer, Miss Annie Negley, Miss Mary Duvier, Miss Emma Angleman, Mrs. G. M. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Angleman, and Messrs. Al Squires, Art Ford, Will Clifton, Walt Drake, Henry Ryno, Gilbert Apgar, Frank Schuck, Fred Meeker and George Schaefer.

—The Young People's Association of the Liberty Corner Presbyterian church gave a pleasing entertainment and social in the church last evening. A number of Plainfield people were present.

EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

REV. FATHER SMYTH TENDERS A RECEPTION TO ST. MARY'S WORKERS.

The Choir and the Dramatic Society, Together With the Plainfield Orchestra and Friends, Have a Pleasant Evening.

During the past month the choir of St. Mary's church worked very hard preparing their special Easter music. They spared no pains, sacrificed engagements and gave up all enjoyment that the Easter music might be as near perfect as possible. Those who attended service Easter Sunday at St. Mary's church were assured that the efforts of the choir were not in vain, the musical part of the programme being one of the most elaborate and successful of all rendered in the city on that day.

The Plainfield Orchestra, consisting of ten members, who assisted the choir with the Easter music, also came in for their well deserved and generous share of commendation. The play recently presented in Music Hall, entitled "Shamrock and Rose," in which the parts were taken exclusively by members of St. Mary's church, was as great a success as the Easter music in the church, but the play was not presented without a vast amount of labor and earnest efforts by those taking part.

These three different groups had put forth their efforts successfully in the interest of St. Mary's church, and Rev. Father Smyth, of the church, determined to give them a small return for their services and last evening they were tendered a reception in the Parochial school at the corner of Sixth and Liberty streets.

The guests, to the number of sixty, assembled in the small hall of the school and were served by a number of members of the Ladies' Sewing Circle of St. Mary's R. C. church. In the centre of the hall stood a large table which was loaded down with tempting viands and the delicious delicacies of the season. Banquet lamps, with shades of many colors, shed a mild glow of light over the assemblage, while the snapping of the bon-bons and the merry laughter of the banqueters made the scene one of pure pleasure, and was a fitting return for the earnest efforts which those present had put forth, without even thinking of any compensation in the interest of the church.

When the inner man had been satisfied, the assemblage adjourned to the hall above, where a programme of a musical and literary nature occupied the balance of the evening. M. J. Cashin proved a most successful master of ceremonies, and under his supervision the following programme was rendered: Piano solo, Miss Smith; vocal duet, Miss A. Keely and T. J. Comerford; vocal solo, Miss May Flanagan; recitation, M. Higgins; contralto solo, Miss Tessie Keely; tenor solo, T. J. Comerford; remarks, M. J. Cashin; vocal duet, Miss Flanagan and T. J. Comerford; recitation, C. J. Ward; selection by quartette composed of T. J. Comerford, F. W. Wharton, R. Wright and M. J. Cashin, piano solo, Miss E. Kelly; remarks, Rev. Father Murphy.

Between each number of the foregoing programme, the banqueters enjoyed a dance, music for which was furnished by a full orchestra, under the direction of Prof. O'Reilly. While the dancing was being enjoyed, Father Smyth did the honors of the evening. The Rev. Father feels especially grateful to M. J. Cashin, director of the choir and Miss St. Leger, organist, for the special efforts which they put forth. The dancing and merry-making concluded about midnight.

The members of the Ladies' Sewing society, of St. Mary's church, who were the patronesses of the affair, were: Mrs. J. L. Slevin, Miss Annie Slevin, Mrs. Conway, Mrs. B. Grady, Mrs. McElroy, Miss Burdon, Mrs. Daniel McCarthy, Mrs. Knowlton, Miss Phillips and Miss Butscher.

Death of Miss Cornelia Leonard.

The community will be shocked to learn of the death of Miss Cornelia Leonard, daughter of the late James and Mary Leonard, which occurrred yesterday afternoon. She had not been ill very long and her confinement was not thought to be a serious one. She was well-known in this city and has lived here all her life, having been born here. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 from the residence of her brother, O. B. Leonard, 915 Madison avenve.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

GUILD TEA AND SALE.

Grace P. E. Church Women Conduct a Profitable Events.

Despite the summer heat and sultriness that made yesterday almost unbearable, the tea and sale given by the ladies of Grace P. E. church yesterday afternoon and evening in the chapel, was well attended and it proved a great success.

The room was cool and the tempting sights of cooling drinks and dainties attracted the passers by. The decorations, although not elaborate, were very tasteful and consisted mainly of red bunting draped and festooned about the sides of the room. The tables also presented a very pretty appearance. A handsome display of flowers, mostly red and white, with their dark green leaves, looked very artistic against the white-covered stand. Those in charge of this table were Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. Pendleton Rogers, Mrs. Harry Stockton and Miss Dryden. Dainty little decorated cups and saucers contained chocolate which was sold at the next table by Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank and the Misses Holly. The receipts at this table were $12.25. Cakes, of all kinds and description, made a tempting picture on the snowy linen cover of another table. Behind it, Mrs. Gilford Mayer, Mrs. T. S. Wheeler and Mrs. Howard Tracy sold the homemade good things.

Smilax, red flowers and ribbons gave a very pretty appearance to the candy table where a delicious appearing display of select candies, many of then homemade, was for sale. This table was looked after by Mrs. August Kleinecke, Miss Dryden, Miss Richardson and Miss Grace Langdon.

Despite the heat, the tea table attracted many. It was prettily decorated and the wafers were arranged in tempting display. The ladies in charge were Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Mrs. Charles Lawson, Mrs. Van Boskerck, Mrs. Daniel T. Van-Buren, Miss Egan and Miss Peterson.

At the fancy table, fancy articles and pictures of the church were for sale. Mrs. Clay and Miss Tweedy were in charge.

The cooling lemonade was just the thing and the visitors appreciated the fact for they crowded around and kept the aides at the table busy supplying their needs. Miss Florence Waring, Miss Nancy Lawson and Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart presided over this table.

Mrs. O. T. Waring was in general charge of the sale which was given for the benefit of the fund for repairing the chapel.

In one corner of the room three Belgian hares and two white rabbits were on sale. Miss Lela Cruikshank and Miss Edith Arens had them in charge.

Handsome banquet lamps were placed on the different tables and, in the evening, shed a soft light over the room.

FOR THE FRESH AIR FUND.

A Pleasant and Profitable Experience Social of King's Daughters.

A pleasant and profitable "experience social" was held last evening under the auspices of Advance Circle, King's Daughters, of the First Presbyterian church, at the home of Mrs. Howard Pope, on West Fifth street. The sixteen active members each earned one dollar and then told in rhyme how they earned it. Some of them made aprons, cake, pin cushions, filled and cleaned lamps, mended gloves, patched coats, and looked after the sick. Much amusement was afforded in listening to the different experiences. In addition to the $16 collected, $1 was donated by a friend. The amount will be given to the Tribune Fresh-Air Fund. There were about forty persons present, including the honorary members. After the experiences were related, games were played, a social time enjoyed, and refreshments, consisting of chicken salad, sandwiches, coffee and cake, were served. The affair lasted from 8 to 11.

Claimed He Was Attacked.

An Englishman stopped in Randolph's pharmacy early Monday morning for some medicine. He said that while on his way to town, passing through West Second street, he was held up by three men. He ran off and the men followed for a short distance when they stopped and he saw nothing more of them. He did not know the men and could not now describe them. He refused to give his name.

An Ex-Councilman Seriously Ill.

Owing to a severe mental strain in connection with business, ex-Councilman Fred Slater, of Jackson avenue, contracted brain fever a few days ago. Since that time he has been critically ill. Yesterday Drs. Carman and Fritts held a consultation and could not note any improvement in his condition. Borough Clerk J. K. Arnold sat up with Mr. Slater last night.

CAPT. REED'S STATUS.

Peculiar Conditions Under Which He Will Receive Promotion to Commodore's Rank.

Washington, April 15.—Capt. Allan V. Reed, commander of the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H,, whose peculiar status as a naval officer is now pending in the senate for settlement, and who reached Washington yesterday, will remain here a week awaiting the action of the senate and the consequent course of the navy department. Capt. Reed stands at the head of the list of captains, but his examination for promotion to the rank of commodore developed accusations that he was not qualified for advancement. President Cleveland recently sent Capt. Reed's nomination for the higher rank to the senate, with a proviso that should it be confirmed, Capt. Reed would be given a year's sea duty to test his qualifications, promotion or retirement to follow according to whether the test was satisfactory or unsatisfactory. It is rumored at the navy department that if the senate agrees to the president's proposition by confirming Capt. Reed, he will be assigned to the command of the cruiser San Francisco, now on the European station.

Special Appropriations Carried by the Bill Passed by the House.

Washington, April 15.—The fortifications and coast defense bill which was passed without division and practically without debate yesterday by the house carries specific appropriations amounting to $5,842,337, and authority is given to the secretary of war to make contracts involving the further expenditure of $5,542,276, making the total authorized expenditure in the bill $11,384,613. The following shows the aggregate amount appropriated and authorized by contract under each subdivision of the bill, namely: Gun and mortar batteries, $5,260,000; bids for fortifications, $250,000; preservation and repair of fortifications, $50,000; plans for fortifications, $5,000; sea walls and embankments, $17,975; torpedoes for harbor defense, $100,000; armament of fortifications, $5,502,673; proving ground, Sandy Hook, N. J., $38,000, Watertown, Mass., arsenal, $43,500; Watervliet, N. Y., arsenal, $3,105; Benecia, Cal., arsenal, $4,500; ordnance and fortification board, $100,000; Fortress Monroe sewerage system, $9,860.

COL. LUDLOW'S RECALL.

Nothing Significant in It, and He Is Relieved at His Own Request.

Washington, April 15.—There is nothing significant, as has been stated, in the recall of Col. William Ludlow, corps of engineers, U. S. A., as military attache of the United States embassy in London. The change has been made on Col. Ludlow's request preferred last summer, when he was in Washington, in connection with the business of the Nicaraguan canal commission, of which he was a member. It was understood that upon completing the work of investigating the great canals of the world he would be relieved.

VICTORY FOR BICYCLISTS.

The Election for a Path from Asbury Park to Trenton Carried by the Wheelmen.

Asbury Park, N. J., April 15.—The first election in New Jersey to vote on an appropriation for the construction of a cycle path took place yesterday in Asbury Park, and the wheelmen carried the day by a vote of 215 to 36. The path will be six feet wide and will extend from Asbury Park to Trenton, a distance of fifty miles. It is thought that the path will be built before the end of the coming summer.

Nashua, N. H., April 15.—Frank Demaris, an old war veteran, was arrested yesterday on a charge of aggravated assault. He drew a revolver and fired a shot at his wife, the bullet passing through her shoulder inflicting a serious wound. Demaris said that he has had trouble with his wife for more than a year.

BRADLEY IN THE LEAD

Hot Time Expected at Kentucky Republican Convention To-day.

M'KINLEY MAY FINISH ON TOP

Silver Men in Control of the Missouri Democratic Convention and the Gold Advocates Intend To Make a Bitter Fight—Other Political Doings.

Louisville, April 15.—Gov. W. O. Bradley is this morning uppermost in the contest for the republican instructions for president, but there is such a strong sentiment in favor of McKinley that there is no telling which one will win out to-day. Bradley had the better organization and won the instructions in a majority of the district conventions. The big fight is going to be on temporary organization and as there are enough contests to sway the results, a lively time is expected. The state convention will meet in this city at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The fifth, or Louisville district, will cause trouble by reason of the bolt of the A. P., A., who are solid for Bradley, he being a member of the organization. Gov. Bradley is his own manager while mayor George Todd is representing McKinley.

SILVER MEN IN CONTROL.

Lively Battle Among Missouri Democrats Promised To-day.

Sedalia, Mo., April 15.—The democratic state convention meets here today and a bitter fight is anticipated. It will undoubtedly be one of the most important conventions the Missouri democrats have ever held. The city is crowded with politicans from all parts of the state. Silver men will control the convention. Gov. Stone, ex-Congressman Bland and Senators Vest and Cockrell will be selected as delegates-at-large to the Chicago convention. But when in conformity with precedents the congressional delegation presents the names of their chosen delegates to the Chicago convention, should the convention decide to reject such names as are considered objectionable to the silverites, all kinds of trouble may be looked for. The St. Louis contingent is divided and will present the names of pronnunced sound money advocates for delegates. This morning the cry of "no quarter" is being sounded by the silver men and it is given out that the mandate of the people of Missouri must be obeyed and nothing less than a solid free silver delegation from this state shall be sent to Chicago.

M'KINLEY ENDORSED.

But Centre County, Pa., Republicans Go Back on Congressman Arnold.

Bellefonte, Pa., April 15.—At the Centre county republican convention here yesterday afternoon there was a spirited contest over the endorsement for, congress and Congressman Arnold failed to receive the endorsement, he receiving 50 votes, while 72 were cast for W. F. Reeder, of this county. The Arnold people left the hall, claiming that they were unfairly treated. The district is composed of five counties. Two delegates to the state convention were chosen. The resolutions adopted by the convention endorse McKinley and his policy of protection.

Watseka, Ill., April 15.—The republican congressional committee for the Twelfth Illinois district selected delegates to the national convention and instructed them for McKinley.

REV. DR. CLEVELAND OUT.

Dismissed from a Presbyterian Church for Preaching Politics.

New York, April 15.—A special to a morning paper from Watertown, N. Y., says that Rev. William N. Cleveland, brother of Grover Cleveland, has been dismissed from the Presbyterian church at Chaumont. Dr. Cleveland has been pastor of the church for the past five years. Complaint was made against him by part of the congregation because he preached sermons that were in favor of democratic principles. The committee to whom the matter was referred expressed its appreciation of the high Christian character of Dr. Cleveland and regretted the necessity of dismissing him.

New York, April 15.—A largely attended meeting of the New York Press club was held last night in honor of the memory of Col. John A. Cockerill. Addresses reviewing the life and work of the deceased were delivered by Foster Coates, Murat Halstead, Charles W. Price and others.

Instructed for Pattison.

West Chester, Pa., April 15.—The democratic committee instructed state and national delegates elected to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of ex-governor Robert E. Pattison for president.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OF LITTLE CONCERN

Arrest of Burmuda Officers Don't Worry the Cubans.

WILL BE TRIED IN NEW YORK CITY

Their Cases To Be Transferred to the United States Court There---Preliminary Hearing at Philadelphia To-day.

Philadelphia, April 15.—In Cuban circles in this city the action of the Spanish representative here in instituting criminal proceedings against the owner and officers of the steamer Bermuda for an alleged violation of the neutrality law in carrying war supplies to the insurgents is given little thought. Mr. Hart, the owner of the Bermuda, will be arraigned again this afternoon when the case will be transferred to the United States district court in New York. Captain O'Brien and his mates came over from New York and they will be arraigned with Mr. Hart and all will undoubtedly be held for trial. The information upon which the warrants were sworn out was made by Jose Congosto, the Spanish consul at this port. Dr. Congosto is said to have received the evidence upon which he made the information from six or eight of the seamen of the Bermuda, who are said to be dissatisfied with the treatment they received on the voyage, and are probably taking this method to avenge themselves. When Mr. Hart was arraigned last evening no evidence was taken. Assistant District Attorney Ralston appeared for the commonwealth and asked that Mr. Hart be bound over for further hearing this afternoon. Mr. Ralston suggested that Mr. Hart's bail be fixed at $10,000. Capt. W. W. Kerr, counsel for Mr. Hart, characterized the request as outrageous, as Mr. Hart is a reputable citizen. The commissioner then held him in $500 bail. The defense was ready to fight strenuously any attempt to have the cases tried in the United States court here. Capt. Kerr contends that under the recent ruling of Judge Butler in the Horsa case, arraignment at the bar in this district would be tantamount to conviction. The government made no objection to the cases being transferred to New York. The accused have no fear of their acquittal under the rulings of the New York court. This is the second time Mr. Hart has been arrested on the charge of filibustering, and it was only a day or so ago, as was mentioned at the time in these dispatches, that he was acquitted in New York.

FREE AFTER FIFTEEN YEARS.

John Somers, Once Sentenced to Death, Paroled by New Jersey Pardon Board.

Trenton, April 15.—The court of pardons has paroled John Somers, who murdered a man named Mussey in Atlantic City sixteen years ago. Somers was convicted and sentenced to be hanged, but the sentence was subsequently commuted to imprisonment for life. The G. A. R. have interested themselves in his case, and it is due to their efforts that Somers goes free. They contended that his crime was homicide at the worst and that the fifteen years he had served in prison was sufficient punishment.

FOLGER'S APPOINTMENT.

His Assignment to Duty Amounts Practically to a Vindication.

Washington, April 15.—That commander Wm. Folger, U. S. N., has been restored in the good graces of the navy department is shown by the issue of an order assigning him to duty as inspector of the eleventh lighthouse district with headquarters at Detroit, Mich. Commander Folger was recently accused of a too close connection with the Harvey Steel company while chief of the bureau of naval ordnances. His deposition was read in a suit concerning this alleged connection, and he gave verbal testimony before the senate committee on naval affairs on the subject to the effect that he did not enter the employ of the company while chief of the bureau and that his connection with it subsequently was during a period when he was on leave of absence. The assignment of Commander Folger to duty practically amounts to a vindication. He will succeed commander W. W. Mead who has been ordered to the Norfolk navy yard as equipment officer. The changes will occur on April 30.

IVES DEFEATS DALY.

The Champion Wins the Second Game of the Series at Boston.

Boston, April 15.—The contestants last night in the second game of the second series of the international billiard tournament at Bumstead hall were Maurice Daly, the ex-champion, and Frank C. Ives, the present champion. It was a cushion-carrom game, 300 points up. The hall was well filled with lovers of the sport, many of whom came in the expectation of witnessing some of the brilliant plays which have made both men famous, but they were disappointed. The game resulted in a victory for Ives, but it took him fifty-four innings to complete the journey. The final score was: Ives, 300; Daly, 250. The highest runs were Ives, 85; and Daly, 29; and the averages were Ives, 5 54; Daly, 4 38-55.

OLIVER CASWELL'S DEATH.

Probably the Most Noted Blind and Deaf Mute in the Country.

Newport, R. I., April 15—Oliver Caswell, 60 years old, who is dead at his home in Jamestown, was probably the most noted blind and deaf mute in this country, except Laura Bridgeman. He had been afflicted since he was two years old. At the age of 14 he attracted the attention of Dr. Samuel B. Howe, husband of Julia Ward Howe, who, together with Laura Bridgeman, taught him to read and converse. He was a bright scholar and of a practical mind. He was greatly interested in prominent men, and some years since was invited by Dom Pedro to visit him on the occasion of the latter's visit to Newport.

Portsmouth, N. H., April 15.—The schooner William K. Parks arrived last night and Capt. Lake reported that on April 10, when twenty miles off Barnegat Light, he sailed through a great quantity of wreckage, among which were hundreds of cases, supposed to contain drygoods and milinery articles. A heavy sea was running at the time and the crew were unable to secure but one case of goods which proved to be filled with ladies' and children's straw hats and corsets of foreign manufacture. The box was consigned to a firm at Falmouth, Jamaica.

It will then go the governor after it passes each house.

THEIR LOSSES HEAVY

Details of the Fierce Battle Near Lechuza, Cuba.

THE SPANIARDS ADMIT DEFEAT

Attacked by a Large Body of Insurgents Under Maceo — Completely Routed, They Take Shelter on a Fortified Plantation.

Havana, April 15.—Further details of the engagement near Lechuza between the Alfonso XIII. batallion under command of Col. Debos, and the insurgents under Maceo, show that the Spanish column occupied two hours in advancing from Mariel to the point where it met the main body of insurgents. The retreat to the San Claudio estate, which is some distance west of Mariel, occupied seven hours. On their retreat the troops were exposed to a constant fire from the rebels in their rear and were frequently compelled to form squares to resist the charges of the enemy. It was necessary to use cannon to open a way for the retreat of the vanguard. The wounded Spaniards were embarked upon a schooner under the fire of the Alerta. According to the military authorities here, Col. Sanchez Echevarria, who had received orders to act in combination with Col. Debos and Gen. Inclan, failed to arrive in time to assist the other bodies of Spanish troops. The authorities say that had he arrived in time Maceo's force would have been badly whipped. Col. Echevarra has been relieved of his command and ordered to appear for trial before a court martial.

Col. Debos' Report.

Col. Debos reports that his battalion, in combination with other bodies of Spanish troops, left Mariel, in the province of Pinar del Rio, for the purpose of giving the enemy battle. They met the advance guard of the insurgents, consisting of a force of 200 cavalry, who opened fire upon the government column. The Spaniards continued their march toward Lechuza, although opposed at every step, and every elevation being occupied by them at the cost of a fight, Upon arriving in the vicinity of Lechuza they found the insurgents gathered in strong force, and the rebels made an attempt to surround the Spanish column. The Spanish troops fought with great desperation against heavy odds, says Debos, but were defeated with losses of many killed and wounded. Divining the intention of the enemy to encircle his column, Col. Debos ordered a retreat. The Spanish column retired to the San Claudio estate on the north coast, where the troops fortified themselves, awaiting the arrival of other government columns.

Spaniards Protected by a Gunboat.

Gen. Inclan arrived with his column very opportunely, and the troops under Col. Debos were also protected by the gunboat Alerta, which kept the enemy at bay. Col. Debos estimates that the forces of the insurgents who charged upon his command numbered 5,000 men. The official report says that the losses of the enemy must have been very great, as many men were seen to fall before the fire of the Spanish troops. The government column, according to the official report, lost four men killed and one officer and thirteen soldiers wounded, but the fact is that the government losses were very heavy, the details being withheld by the authorities. A civilian who volunteered to carry the news of the predicament of the government column to the nearest fort ran the gauntlet of the rebel fire and was compelled to jump into the water twice to save himself. Gen. Inclan reported that upon his arrival at Col. Debos' camp he compelled Gen. Maceo to retreat from San Claudio.

Insurgents Attack Workmen.

A band of rebels attacked a number of laborers who were employed in cutting sugar cane on the Constencia estate. The guerrillas who were guarding the estate went to the aid of the laborers, and in the fighting that ensued four of the guards and seven workmen were killed. Four men were wounded. The rebel loss is unknown. The colonel of the Luzon battalion reports an engagement between his command and a rebel force between Rodriga and Amara in the province of Santa Clara. The rebel loss, according to the report, was twenty-one killed, while only two troops ware wounded.

TO PRESERVE BATTLEFIELDS.

Movement for Making Reservations of the Chief Ones in Virginia.

Washington, April 15.—A meeting will be held at Fredericksburg, Va., tomorrow of representative men of the state, called by the mayor, for initiating a movement for setting apart as public reservations the great battlefields of the state, principally those at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, the Wilderness, and other important points. Summer is rushing spring pretty fast.

The old-time Jersey Democracy is getting back into line.

The re-election of Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, is a personal victory, inasmuch as nearly all the other officers elected were Democrats.

Governor Griggs yesterday signed the bill making it a misdemeanor to ask candidates for office to buy picnic and sociable tickets. Sweet revenge is this for the politicians.

The Democrats of New Jersey are coming back to their party. That was made evident in the local elections held throughout the State yesterday, and is an encouraging sign for the National struggle that will take place next November. It must be conceded that the Republicans have lately carried New Jersey by the Democrats who did not vote rather than by the Republicans who exercised the right of suffrage. A long control in State affairs naturally filled the Democrats who had obtained influence and prominence in party affairs with a confidence that they were invincible to defeat, and a certain element, arriving at this conclusion, indulged in acts that met with a sharp rebuke not only from their political opponents but from their own party members. The knowledge that there was some derelictions prompted many to believe that nearly all charges of Democratic incompetency were true, and this idea, together with the political strategy of the Republicans, landed the candidates of the latter party into nearly all the State and municipal offices at stake during this time. Actual experience proved that the Republicans had won by making mountains out of mole hills, and that while there was some incompetency during Democratic administration, it was remedied as much by the Democrats as it was by the Republicans, and many of the wrongs which were alleged to exist had no entity at all, but were coined campaign arguments. Considering this fact and the fact that the objectionable features of party management has been removed, the inherent Democracy of the Jerseyman has begun to assert itself on the eve of a great National contest when the State has never swerved from the party of Jefferson and Jackson, and the elections of yesterday is an echo which warms the heart of every Democrat. It means that New Jersey will be for the Democratic Presidental candidate of 1896.

Arm Badly Lacerated.

L. C. Randolph, a farmer, living at Mt. Pleasant, met with a serious accident Monday afternoon at his home. He has a buzz-saw which he operates to cut wood for his own use, and while at work with it his left arm caught in the the teeth. The flesh midway between the wrist and elbow was lacerated, leaving the bone intact. He was brought at once to Dr. Long's office in this city and it was necessary to take twenty stitches in the cut. It was pronounced a most miraculous escape from loss of the forearm and hand. Mr. Randolph is improving favorably, and the doctor thinks the arm will be saved.

The Salvationists Tonight.

Enthusing speakers and a brass band will be the attractions at the Salvation Army tonight. Ensign March was formerly connected with the local corps, and while here she was very popular. She is an entertaining and sincere talker and no doubt a large number of her friends will turn out to hear her. The Salvationists are continuing their good work in this city in the even tenor of their way, and should be supported.

PROTECTION, NOT REVENUE.

A Well-Known Plainfielder Writes on the Issue of the Hour.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Very much has been said in Congress as well as outside of that body, by the Protectionists, of the necessity for increasing our present duties in order to collect a large revenue for the Government.

Who believes that would be the result? Is that the object? Not at all, the object is protection, pure and simple.

We have a right to judge the future by the past. The first year of the McKinley tariff the receipts fell off $12 761 431. Certainly that was not very encouraging in what were considered "good times," and when the circulation was being largely increased by Government purchase of silver.

Now compare the above with the first year of what the Protectionists call a free trade tariff, when the increased receipts from duties were $19,891,716, notwithstanding that the slow and uncertain action of Congress had almost created a panic in business circles.

What the country wants and ought to have for the greatest good to the greatest number, is a revenue tariff, and that very much lower than the present rates, mainly on articles we cannot produce and that are too bulky to be conveniently smuggled. In this respect we might learn something from England. She raises a large revenue from eight articles, abandoning her former policy of protection fifty years ago.

Compare her present commerce with what it was at that time, and it will be found considerably more than double, while the condition of her laboring classes has greatly improved, even the farm hands, who were so much opposed to free trade in bread stuffs, are now getting nearly double the wages they formerly received, and at the same time can purchase the necessaries of life at a very much reduced cost. I am aware the manufacturers endeavor to make us believe the rate of wages depends on the amount of protection.

Did wages advance when the McKinley tariff went into effect? On the contrary: at least three manufactories lowered their wages where one advanced them.

Take the Trenton potteries as an example, they were among the first to reduce them, but many others followed.

What has been the effect of what is called a low tariff on mechanics' wages the past few months, say since it went into operation? The last statement I saw, and that was sometime ago, said that over a million of hands had received increased wages and very many were getting a second advance.

Wages, like all other commodities, are regulated by the supply and demand.

If the Protectionists are as anxious to protect the labor of the country as the profess to be, why not put a tax on the foreigners that are coming here by thousands, instead of taxing the workers that are here for everything they consume.

We exclude the Chinese, who are neither paupers nor beggars, but good laborers and servants, while we admit beggars and tramps from all the rest of the world. Great Britain is the largest manufacturer in Europe, and in her material resources surpasses other nations there, but in that respect this country is far in the lead of them all.

Look at our coal in inexhaustible quantities of every quality, and as for minerals of all kind (tin only excepted) where is the country that can at all compare with this?

Where do such bodies of superior iron ore exist, that can be mined and the product loaded on cars for less than ten cents per ton for cost of labor?

The facilities for all mining, as well as manufacturing, have been greatly improved within the past few years, as is shown by the Quincy copper mine.

In 1875 it cost that company for every pound of copper they produced 15.70 cts.; in 1894 the average cost was 5.68 cents.

This decrease in cost is not on account of any increase in richness of the mine but entirely owing to the improved machinery and general manner of working.

In a subsequent communication it will be shown that in the United States, taking the manufacturing as a whole, and the amount produced into account, the labor costs less than in Great Britain. Mahlon Vail.

THEATRICAL.

"Alabama" is purely a southern play, true to Southern life in every respect, and is a story of peace and love twenty years after the war. Henry Watterson of the Louisville "Courier-Journal" said of "Alabama:" "It is the olive branch of peace. Its acceptance as a successful play by both communities is proof that the war is over and its phases can be discussed without engendering ill feeling. It is a sermon to the American people, and its lesson after all is charity." From a literary standpoint, "Alabama" is a gem. It is absolutely devoid of claptrap or catchpenny sensation, but it is nevertheless an intensely interesting play and holds the audience spell-bound. The fame of Clement Bainbridge's company is wide spread. It includes Clement Bainbridge, Scott Cooper, George B. Miller, Edward B. Kelley, Robert Conness, Dwight Allen, Charles Moore, W. N. Wadsworth, Ethel Irving, Zoe Halbert, Julia Folland and Adelaide Sawyer. At Music Hall tonight.

That high-class minstrelsy occupies a distinct place in the field of amusements and that it is not a peculiar fancy of a bygone generation is unquestionable. This opinion seemed fully warranted by the large and enthusiastic audiences that gathered at the opera house yesterday afternoon and night to laugh and grow merry over the witty sayings and ludicrous specialties and sweet singing of W. S. Cleveland's talented minstrel organization. The approval of the audience was frequently vociferously expressed at almost every feature of the unique and variegated entertainment. The sumptuous costumes and stage setting of the first part were greeted with merited and prolonged applause, and paved the way to a hearty reception of the participants.

The witticisms of John H. Blackford, Frank Cushman, Wm. Henry Rice, Dan Allman, Gil. Garay and Billy Woods were deservedly applauded, and are minstrel artists of pronounced merit and are masters of the art of entertaining. The variety of features that followed the adjournment of the first part was of a high order and exceedingly lively and interesting. And those wonderful Japanese! They are the greatest lot of gymnasts, balancers, jugglers, etc., that ever left the empire. To the lovers of minstrelsy the performance of Cleveland's allied shows last evening left very little to be desired and is a success of its kind and fully merited the approbation of the audience.—Dallas News. At Music Hall Friday night.

"The Last Stroke," the new Cuban drama now running at the Star Theatre, New York, is beyond question the strongest melodrama that has been seen in New York this season. Commodious as the Star Theatre is, it has been packed to the doors every night, and the New York papers unite in say that it has been many a day since a play has elicited such tremendous outbursts of enthusiasm. Several of the scenes are so strong dramatically and so patriotically inspiring that the audience is moved to cheers. The piece is magnificently mounted. All the scenes were gotten up especially for this engagement at the Star, and the production is a most complete and elaborate one in all its details. The company is a very strong one and is headed by that able actor Frederic De Belleville, whose portrayal of the Spanish spy is commended on every hand as the most finished bit of work that he has ever done. John T. Sullivan is another valuable member of the cast.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

At a meeting of the Baptist church Monday night it was voted to increase the number of deacons by two. F. W. Westcott and G. E. Hall were chosen to fill those two offices.

The people of this place were startled yesterday afternoon to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. Robert Walpole, which occurred at her home on Park avenue. It was known that she had been ailing for the past day or two, but it was not known that she was dangerously ill. Sunday last she was taken with pains in her head and was confined to the bed. Dr. Westcott was called and prescribed for her. The pains disappeared during the night and Monday Mrs. Walpole did some rather hard household duties about her home. Yesterday she was again taken to her bed with the pains in her head, and as the day progressed they became more severe. Along in the afternoon her daughter was attending to her when Mrs. Walpole cried out that she could not stand the pains, and sank back in bed insensible. Her daughter thought that she had only fainted and commenced bathing her forehead, but as she did not revive after sometime, and her body commenced to grow cold, it was seen that something serious was the matter. Dr. Westcott was sent for, but as he was not at home, word was sent for Dr. Long, Plainfield. She was dead, however, before he arrived at her side. Mrs. Walpole was about fifty-five years of age, and was much thought of among her acquaintances for her kindly disposition. Besides a husband, she leaves eight children, all but two of whom are married.

OLD CARROLL MANSION.

One of the Most Interesting Residences at Washington.

It Has Just Been Purchased by Chief Justice Fuller—Clay, Webster and Taney Were Frequent Visitors in This Historic House.

Chief Justice Fuller has just purchased a home in Washington which is one of the old landmarks of the capital. It stands at Eighteenth and F streets, in that section of the city largely given over to the old residents, and is called the "Carroll mansion." In the neighborhood of the mansion are the homes of Gen. Miles, Secretary Herbert, and only a block off is the famous old "Octagon" house, which was once inhabited by the Taylors. On the corner of G and Eighteenth is the dingy old building now used as a place for the war records office, but which was in days gone by the home of Jefferson Davis, when he held a position as a member of the president's cabinet.

The Carroll mansion was built in 1830 by a gentleman named Ringgold and was purchased later by Mr. William Thomas Carroll, at that time clerk of the supreme court. This gentleman was a nephew of old Daniel Carroll, of Duddington. Mrs. Carroll, widow of William Thomas Carroll, lived in this house for many years and did not die till a few months ago. Belonging to the Carroll family of Maryland, a family which is one of the most prominent in America, the Carrolls were leaders in the society of that day, and during all the administrations prior to the late war it was at this house that the finest entertainments were given. Old Daniel Carroll owned the greater part of Washington, but his lands lay in the east, and he held them so high that he drove buyers to the west, where now the fashionable section is situated. When the house was built the grounds around were extensive, and there were but few houses near. Large gardens and dirt drives then filled what is now asphaltum streets and row on row of brick houses.

In the Carroll mansion such men as Clay and Webster were frequent visitors, and old Justice Taney used to come every Sunday to dine with the family. The father of Mr. William Thomas Carroll was Charles Carroll, of Belleview, the grandfather was Charles Carroll, of Carrollsburg, who was a first cousin to Charles Carroll, of Carrollton. The family of Carrolls are descendant from one of the early kings of Ireland. William Carroll had eight children, the only surviving girls being Mrs. Bowles, Mrs. Brown and Countess Esterhazy, who resides in Philadelphia.

While originally on a level with the street, the mansion is now on a terrace formed by the cutting down of the streets during the time that the city was beautified by the direction of Shepherd. The house is a large, square, red brick, with a high wall, which incloses an old-fashioned garden on the right side. In the front hall one finds the stairway leads down to the front door, and all of the numerous rooms are grouped about this central stairs which form a sort of an open court in the center of the house from top to bottom. The mansion was furnished in things which have been in the family for years, but most of them have been disposed of at private sale to the members of the immediate family.

It is not known why Chief Justice Fuller wished to desert the popular part of the city in which he now resides for the sober and more somber quarter in which the old Carroll mansion now stands. His present home is a fine one, on the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Eighteenth street, right in the heart of the fashionable section of town and surrounded by many magnificent homes of diplomats and wealthy private citizens.

Carmens in Real Life.

Seville, Spain, has been having a picturesque and exciting strike of the 5,200 cigarreras employed in the tobacco factory. They rose in their wrath one morning, smashed the windows and everything they could lay hands on, and then paraded the streets. For ten days the stores were closed, the women harangued and buttonholed the passers-by, and won the whole town over to their side. At last the government made some concessions, and the women went back to work before any blood was spilled, though two officials came near being torn to pieces by the maddened "Carmens."

Emperor William's Bumps.

An English phrenologist who has examined the head of Emperor William II. says that there is nothing unusual about it. "It is," he says, "a medium head, of the military type, such as can be found by the score in the army. The bumps of self-love and combativeness are abnormally developed. He will never let himself be stopped by an obstacle. There is no power on earth that could exercise the least pressure upon him. His self-love is so great that it would not surprise me if he should proclaim himself infallible. He would be perfectly sincere in so doing."

She Wanted to Know.

The new servant girl came to her mistress crying and holding on to her finger.

"What's the matter?" asked the lady of the house.

"I stuck one of the forks into my hand, and if it's plated ware I'll get lockjaw."

"Don't be alarmed," said the lady, "all my silver is genuine. I don't keep any plated ware."

Next morning the servant girl and the silver were both missing.—Tammany Times.

There Are Many of Him.

At last she had rebelled. Mildly.

"They tell me you lead a double life," she said, looking straight into the eyes of the confused man before her.

"Me?" he gasped.

"Yes, you. I hear that when you are away from home you are as pleasant and good-natured a man as can be found anywhere."—Indianapolis Journal.

After "Hiawatha."

He killed the noble Majudkis;
With his skin he made him mittens.
Made them with the fur side inside.
Made them with the skin side outside
He to get the warm side inside
Put the cold side, skin side, outside,
Put the warm side, fur side, inside.
That's why he put the fur side inside,
Why he put the fur side inside,
Why he put the skin side outside,
Why he turned them inside outside.

COPYRIGHT, 1894, BY BRET HARTE.

The president knitted his eyebrows humorously. "Dont let us travel out of the record, general. You're as bad as the department. The question was one of your personal treachery, but you need not accept the fact that you were justly removed because your wife was a spy. Now, general, I am an old lawyer, and I don't mind telling you that in Illinois we wouldn't hang a yellow dog on that evidence before the department. But when I was asked to look into the matter by your friends I discovered something of more importance to you. I had been trying to find a scrap of evidence that would justify the presumption that you had sent information to the enemy. I found that it was based upon the fact of the enemy being in possession of facts at the first battle of Gray Oaks which could only have been obtained from our side, and which led to a federal deserter, that you, however, retrieved by your gallantry. I asked the secretary if he was prepared to show that you had sent the information with that view, or that you had been overtaken by a tardy sense of repentance. He preferred to consider my suggestion as humorous. But the inquiry led to my further discovery that the only treasonable correspondence actually in evidence was found upon the body of a trusted federal officer, and had been forwarded to the division commander. But there was no written record of it in the case."

"Why, I forwarded it myself," said Brant, eagerly.

"So the division commander writes," said the president, smiling, "and he forwarded it to the department. But it was suppressed in some way. Have you any enemies, Gen. Brant?"

"None that I know of."

"Then you probably have. You are young and successful. Think of the hundred other officers who naturally believe themselves better than you are, and haven't a traitorous wife. Still, the department may have made an example of you for the benefit of the only man who couldn't profit by it."

"Might it not have been, sir, that this suppression was for the good report of the service—as the chief offender was dead?"

"I am glad to hear you say so, general, for it is the argument I have used successfully in behalf of your wife."

"Then you know it all, sir?" said Brant, after a gloomy pause.

"All, I think. Come, general, you seemed, just now, to be uncertain about your enemies. Let me assure you you need not be so in regard to your friends."

"I dare to hope I have found one, sir," said Brant, with almost boyish timidity.

"O, not one," said the president, with a laugh of depreciation. "Some one much more potent."

"May I know his name. Mr. President?"

"No. For it is a woman. You were nearly ruined by one, general. I suppose it's quite right that you should be saved by one. And, of course, irregularly."

"A woman!" echoed Brant.

"Yes! One who was willing to confess herself a worse spy than your wife—a double traitor—to save you! Upon my word, general, I don't know if the department was far wrong; a man with such an alternately unsettling and convincing effect upon a woman's highest political convictions, should be under some restraint. Luckily the department knows nothing of it."

"Nor would anyone ever have known from me," said Brant, eagerly. "I trust that she did not think—that you, sir—did not for an instant believe that I—"

"O, dear, no. Nobody would have believed you! It was her free confidence to me. That was what made the affair so difficult to handle. For even her bringing your dispatch to the division commander looked bad for you — and you know he even doubted its authenticity."

"Does she—does Miss Faulkner—know the spy was my wife?" hesitated Brant.

The president twisted himself in his chair, so as to regard Brant more gravely with his deepest eyes, and then thoughtfully rubbed his leg. "Don't let us travel out of the record, general," he said, after a pause. But as the color surged into Brant's cheek, he raised his eyes to the ceiling and said, in half humerous recollection:

"No, I think that fact was first gathered from your other friend—Mr. Hooker."

"Hooker!" said Brant, indignantly, "did he come here?"

"Pray don't destroy my faith in Mr. Hooker, general," said the president, in half weary, half humorous deprecation. "Don't tell me that any of his inventions are true! Leave me at least that magnificent liar—the one perfectly intelligible witness you have. For from the time that he first appeared here with a grievance and a claim for a commission, he has been an unspeakable joy to me and a convincing testimony to you. Other witnesses have been partisans and prejudiced. Mr. Hooker was frankly true to himself. How else should I have known of the care you took to disguise yourself, save the honor of your uniform and run the risk of being shot as an unknown spy at your wife's side except from his magnificent version of his part of it! How else should I have known the story of your discovery of the Californian conspiracy, except for his supreme portrayal of it, with himself as the hero. 'No, you must not forget to thank Mr. Hooker—when you meet him.

"Miss Faulkner is at present more accessible; she is calling on some members of my family in the next room. Shall I leave you with her?"

Brant rose, with a pale face and a quickly-throbbing heart, as the president, glancing at the clock, untwisted himself from the chair, and shook himself out at full length, and so gradually to his feet. "Your wish for active service is granted, Gen. Brant," he said, slowly, "and you will at once rejoin your old division commander, who is now at the head of the Tenth army corps. But," he said, after a deliberate pause, "there are certain rules and regulations of your service that even I cannot with decent respect to your department override. You will, therefore, understand that you cannot rejoin the army in your former position."

The slight flush that came to Brant's cheek quickly passed. And there was only the unspeakable sparkle of renewed youth in his frank eyes as he said: "Let me go to the front again, Mr. President, and I care not how."

The president smiled, and, laying his heavy hand on Brant's shoulder, pushed him gentle toward the door of the inner room. "I was only about to say," he added, as he opened the door, "that it would be necessary for you to rejoin your promoted commander as a major general. And," he continued, lifting his voice, as he gently pushed his guest into the room, "he hasn't even thanked me for it, Miss Faulkner!"

The door closed behind him, and he stood for a moment dazed, and still hearing the distant voice of the president in the room he had just quitted, welcoming a new visitor. But the room before him, opening into a conservatory, was empty save for a single figure that turned half timidly, half mischievously toward him. The same quick, sympathetic glance was in both their faces; the same timid, happy look in both their eyes. He moved quickly to her side.

"Then you knew that—that—woman was my wife?" he said, hurriedly, as he grasped her hand.

She cast a half appealing look at his face—a half frightened one around the room and at an open door beyond.

"Let us," she said, faintly, "go into the conservatory."

It is but a few years ago that the humble chronicler of these pages moved with a wondering crowd of sightseers

"Let us," she said, faintly, "go into the conservatory."

in the gardens of the white house. His attention was attracted by an erect, handsome, soldierly looking man, with a beard and mustache slightly streaked with gray, who, with a stately lady on his arm, was pointing out the various objects of interest to a boy of 12 or 14 at their side.

"And although, as I told you, this house is reserved only for the president of the United States and his family," said the gentleman, smilingly, "in that little conservatory I proposed to your mother."

"O, Clarence, how can you," said the lady, reprovingly; "you know it was long after that!"

THE END.

CHARACTER IN HAIR.

What the Various Qualities and Colors of It Denote.

Men with fine light hair are smart, conceited, and if they do not marry until late in life are apt to grow cross and selfish. If a girl wishes to select a husband she should examine his hair very closely before accepting him, because it is a fine indication of what his disposition is. Men with fine brown hair, light or dark, make the best husbands. They are quick, thoughtful, and less apt to be selfish than very light or very dark-haired brothers.

Those whose hair turns gray prematurely are nearly always good fellows. They are a little nervous, but are brainy, sympathetic and very honorable. The hair turns white from being over-scrupulous in money matters and friendships oftener than it does for grieving over one's shortcomings.

Nearly all red-headed people are smart, whether the hair is coarse or fine, but when you do run across one that isn't, he is the stupidest person under the sun. The women with pale blonde hair, of the coloress, ashy kind, are impulsive, loving, fickle. They are not to be depended upon, but are usually good company while they like you. On the contrary, those with dark-brown hair are very loyal. They are full of sentiment and easily affected. They enjoy keenly and suffer in proportion.

Women with fine black hair are high strung, and those with coarse black hair, if they are smart, are nearly always mean. All women with dark hair are more tempestuous than those with light hair. The dark eyes and complexion that go with the different shades of dark-brown and black hair denote strong feeling. They are also more faithful than light-haired women, and, dear me, they bubble over with sentiment.—Philadelphia Times.

Humors of Missouri Campaigning.

Congressman Raney, of Missouri, ran against a man named Fox, who is credited with being one of the shrewdest political workers in Missouri. Besides being a clever politician, Fox is a convivial sort of a personage, and when the campaign was well under way, one of Raney's friends, who is a noted fox hunter in his part of the state, sagely observed:

"You look out, Rainey. The man you're runnin' ag'in' is a very sly old Fox."

"So I'm told," said Rainey; "but I understand foxes don't run well in rainy weather."

"That mought be so, too," drawled the fox chaser, with a sly wink of appreciation; "but if you can make him take water it'll be the first time, that's all."—Washington Post.

Mrs. Brown, of Sycamore avenue, has purchased a lady's Cleveland Swell Special from the F. L.C. Martin Cycle Company.

Wickham Beekman, of West Eighth street, has purchased a blue-rimmed Columbia wheel from the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer, has added an electric motor, power pump, tank, and a lathe to his cycle emporium, and is now better equipped to handle his increasing trade.

The carpenters and other workmen who are preparing the salesrooms of the Jersey Wheel Company for use, will complete their work today and the goods will be unpacked and arranged at once. The salesrooms will be opened Saturday.

The Arcanum Wheelmen, of Jersey City, are engaged in a laudable effort to secure a bicycle path from Jersey City Heights to the main ferry. A conference will be held in the near future with other bicycle clubs, and an effort will be made to organize an Improvement Association to bring the bicycle path to a successful issue.

Mr. Volkman, champion bicyclist of Pond's. who lowered the twenty-five mile record on the Manhattan track, is now training to race Wm. Schaefer in a 12 mile race, and also issues a challenge to race any man from Scott's or Potter's. Mr. Volkman lowered the record between this city and Harlem, covering the distance in 2½ hours.

There has never been so great a demand as at present for the topographic sheets published by the United States Geological Survey. The requests come from bicyclists all over the country, who put the maps to profitable use in tracing routes. The maps show not only the roads, rivers, county divisions, railroads and the usual landmarks, but give the topography of the country, a feature of special value to the wheelmen.

It is apparent to every one that a very large number of bicycle accidents will occur this summer, says the New York Sun. They are inevitable. The tremendous increase in the number of persons who use the wheel, their limited experience and the crowded roads will doubtless cause many unavoidable accidents. For every careful rider there seems to be a careless one. A drive in Central or Prospect parks affords food for wonder that there are not more frequent accidents. There is a division of opinion as to the merits of brakes and the indications are that the brake question will be fought all over again in the summer.

The members of the League of American Wheelmen are discussing the advisability of having the organization adopt some means for the recovery of stolen bicycles. The president, Mr. Elliott says: "Many members of the league have written to our official organ asking whether the organization could not adopt some practical means of recovering stolen wheels. I would say that I have been for some time negotiating with a responsible concern with a view to securing this protection at a greatly reduced rate, and the result is an entirely satisfactory arrangement, which will enable league members to feel that their wheels are protected against theft for the low price of $1 a year.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The arrival of spring will put a stop to indoor athletics and gymnastic work, and the exhibition held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night was in a way the close of the winter season of indoor exercise. The exhibition was given by the business men's and evening classes before a fair-sized audience, much larger than would be expected on such a warm night. A bar-bell drill came first, and then followed light work on the German horse and parallel bars. The movements were all well performed and heartily applauded. Then followed a game of basket ball. As the business men's team was not all present, a game was arranged between the regular Y. M. C. A. team and a "scrub" team. The regulars same out victorious, but only by the hardest kind of playing. The team work of the regulars assisted them materially, while the other side, having never played together before, were somewhat handicapped in that direction. The game was a close one and kept the audience in a continual state of excitement. Doane and Maxson, of the business men's team, were the mainstays of the scrubs, working well together. Colthar also did well. On the other side the team work of the Moraller brothers was fine, while Lederer made quite a hit with his long runs and dodges down the side of the room. All put up an excellent game, despite the heat. The regular team consisted of Jessup, Lederer, M. Moraller, E. Moraller and Bonny. The make-up of the scrub team was Doane, Maxson, Williams, Colthar and Long. The score was 11 to 4 in favor of the regulars.

—The 2:07 train from New York this afternoon carried a Steinway piano, to be used at the concert of the Monday Afternoon Club tomorrow evening, but owing to the fact that the United States Express company's men could not get it out of the cars it was taken up the road. It will probably be returned in time.

Sure Sign.

When you see a rabbit's track in the snow you may be certain the rabbit has been there. Circumstantial evidence of that kind is equivalent to proof.

A country minister, according to an exchange, remarked to his wife Sunday noon:

"There was a stranger in church this morning."

"What did he look like?" asked the wife, who was a woman first and a minister's wife afterward.

"I didn't see him."

"Then how do you know there was a stranger there?"

"I found a dollar bill in the contribution box."

Bound to Succeed.

A citizen stepped into an uptown pharmacy and called for a couple of pills, which he swallowed.

"How much?" he asked.

I'll have to pay for this.

STATE ENDEAVORERS PROGRAMME.

Speakers Who Will Address the Big Convention in October.

A meeting of the Christian Endeavor programme committee was held last week. The programme is completed as far as it is possible to make arrangements at this time. On the first evening, Wednesday, October 7th, there will be the annual address of the State President and a sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmdage, D. D. On Thursday morning the session will be devoted to evangelistic work. Reports will be given by the unions in which special work has been engaged in during the year. The last period will be given to an address by Rev. B. Fay Mills. Thursday afternoon will be devoted to missions. The address will be given by Rev. Courtlandt Meyers, D. D. The evening of Thursday will be given to good citizenship, addresses being given by His Excellency, John W. Griggs, Rev. Chas. H. Parkhurst and Hon. Theodore Roosevelt. On Friday morning representatives from the Theological seminaries of the State will give addresses, as also Rev. I. J. Lansing, D. D., of Boston, and Rev. F. E. Clark, D. D. Friday afternoon will be devoted to junior work and committee conferences. At the closing session on Friday evening there will be committee reports, the consecration sermon and consecration service led by Rev. B. Fay Mills. The committee make the announcement thus early in order that more than usual preparations may be made by the Endeavorers of the State to attend this convention. No effort will be spared by the local committee to make this the best convention New Jersey has ever had.

Liberty Given to a Man Who Was Thought to be Honest, But Was Not.

Jesse Eckart, of Brooklyn, who has been stopping for the past week with Mr. and Mrs. George Kirch, of Somerset street, played a very clever trick on the latter Tuesday afternoon. He very politely took a new black suit of clothes, a derby hat and a pair of shoes belonging to Mr. Kirch's son, Philip, and left, as it is supposed, for his home. At the time there was no one at home but Miss Marguerite Kirch, as her father had gone to Bound Brook.

Eckart, during the winter, was employed by Mr. Kirch as a driver, and as the latter had secured a more experienced man Eckart was laid off sometime ago, but he returned about a week and stopped with Mr. Kirch who allowed him to go about the house and do as he pleased and little did he expect that he was dishonest.

Mr. Kirch has written to Eckart's mother telling her that unless her son returns the stolen goods by Friday he will have a warrant issued for his arrest. The man wore the new clothes and left his old suit behind.

SHAKESPEARIAN RECITAL.

Edward C. Abbott Gives Talented Impersonations at the Park Club.

A cultured and refined audience greeted Edgar C. Abbott, of Boston, at his first recital of the series last evening at the Park Club.

Mr. Abbott in an introductory lecture on the play, clearly outlined the plot, gave its sources, analized the characters and described the motives that moved them to action.

He began with the first scene of act one, and gave the play, impersonating all the characters by change of voice and gesture; he excelled in the oration of Marc Anthony, bringing out forcibly the fire and pathos of the speech and thrilled his hearers at the splendid climax of the oration. The scene between Brutus and Cassius was given as strongly as the oration of Marc Anthony.

Mr. Abbott subordinates even the dramatic features of his recital to the interpretation of the thought of the great dramatist, which he brings out clearly in every line he recites, and unites finely the art of the actor and the literary skill and scholarship of the lecturer.

"Hamlet" will be given next Thursday evening, April 23d.

What the Explosion Was.

The blasting of some very large rocks at Smalley Bros' stone quarry, at Washingtonville, this morning, startled the community and everyone was inquiring the cause of the loud report. An extra large amount of explosives were used to do the work.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

SUNSHINE AND FESTIVAL

ONE OF SUMMER'S EVENTS HELD IN THE SEVENTH-DAY CHURCH.

The Cooling and Sweet Articles Met With a Ready Sale, and the Treasury Increased—Names of Those in Charge

The Spring Festival at the Seventh-Day Baptist church last evening came most opportunely. The warm weather, although it kept many away, made those that did come only too anxious to partake of the cooling drinks and the frozen delicacies that were on sale. The Sunday-school room, in which the festival was held, was tastefully decorated with orange and white bunting. The young women who assisted at the different tables were all charmingly gowned in white, and with their orange aprons added to the pretty effect.

In the centre of the room there was a triangle shaped table loaded with delicious home made candies, displayed in tempting array. Miss Louise Lewis and Miss Ida Spicer presided over this table.

Small articles are often the best, and so it was with the lemonade table, and the large bowl of that cooling drink had to stand the continual attacks that were made on it by the visitors. Miss Mabel Maxson presided over it.

The platform at one end of the room was transformed into a flower booth, and here potted plants and cut flowers were sold by Miss Louise Clawson and Miss Mineola Tomlinson, assisted by Miss Edith Titsworth.

Pretty decorations and charming aides attracted many to one of the little class rooms at the other end of the room, where they were persuaded to drink chocolate or tea and purchase dainty little tea cups and saucers. Mrs. Frank Clawson poured the tea while Mrs. D. E. Titsworth presided over the chocolate. Miss Bessie Randolph and Miss Mertie Randolph assisted at this booth.

In the next class room the visitor found an old German kitchen where milk, buttermilk and pot cheese were on sale. To make it more realistic, the buttermilk was kept in a churn. The room also contained a number of curious old relics of Germany, many dating back to 1778, and from then until 1804. A pewter set, kindly loaned by Mrs. Gottheil, was among the oldest and was examined with considerable interest. There were some old fashioned blue and white dishes shown while the light, instead of coming from the electric lights, was furnished by several candles stuck in candle sticks of "ye olden times." Miss Ida Randolph and Miss Ruth Maxson, attired like German peasants, were in charge of this quaint old stall.

Last, but not least, were the refreshment rooms where those that had been persuaded to drink the hot tea or chocolate, might cool off by enjoying the ice cream and cake that was served. The good things were prepared in the kitchen by Mrs. J. G. Miller and Mrs. J. P. Allis, while the waitresses were the Misses Grace Lewis, Myra Clark, Ernestine Smith, and Maud Mosher.

The festival was given by the Christian Endeavor Society and the committee from that society deserves lots of credit for the very pleasant evening they arranged so successfully. The committee consisted of Miss Elizabeth Allis, chairman, Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, Miss Lou Clawson, Miss Maud Mosher, and Dr. Frank Clawson.

WILLING TO DIVIDE.

The Poultry Show People Anxious to Come to Plainfield in December.

President Parker, of the Garden State Poultry Association, was in town on Tuesday and met Mr. Wiseman of the Columbia Cycle Academy. The question of the association bringing their exhibit to Plainfield was thoroughly discussed, and while Mr. Parker's visit was not official, he stated that if the citizens of Plainfield would raise the rent for the week for the exhibit he thought the association would come here and be willing to divide the proceeds with the hospital. The proposition has been placed before the Board of Directors of the hospital and at their meeting on Friday, April 24th, they will discuss the same.

Mr. Parker also said that the association was looking for a central place to locate permanently and it might be that Plainfield would be chosen.

—Fred and Harry Townsend killed eleven small snakes yesterday in the swamp back of their home on Coddington avenue.

—Rev. Mr. Gibson, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, gave an interesting talk before the Young Men's Praying Band at their meeting in the Boehm building last week.

CHURCH ELECTIONS.

Park Avenue Baptist and First Presbyterian Churches Hold Meetings.

There was a very large attendance of members at the annual parish meeting held in the First Presbyterian church last evening. F. H. Martin was selected chairman and Howard A. Pope, clerk. W. H. Shotwell and Howard A. Pope were elected trustees for three years; C. E. Bond for two years, and John Abbott for one year. The report of the treasurer, W. H. Shotwell showed the receipts and expenditures for 1895 to be about $6,500, and there is now a balance of about $500 in the treasury. The church was reported to be in excellent condition, and the members expressed themselves as being much encouraged with the present affairs of the church.

Following the regular mid-week prayer service held in the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening, the annual parish meeting of the church and society was held. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, served as moderator, and I. B. Hill, as clerk. The choice of trustees for two years resulted in the election of the following: J. Wesley Johnson, A. D. Thompson, I. B. Hill and Augustus Runyon. A. W. Day, treasurer, presented his annual report, showing a net balance of $159.16 in the treasury. The report gave clear evidence that the church is in a first-class condition, spiritually and financially. The attendance at the meeting was very encouraging.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church and society was held last night. The reports of the officers were received and the officers for the next year elected. The church election resulted as follows: Deacons, A. J. Clarkson, L. B. Morgan and A. C. LaBoyteaux; official board, H. C. Nomer, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich and Rev. M. E. Dwight; clerk, J. A. Robinson. The election in the society was as follows: Trustees, W. B. Wadsworth, L. C. Batson, G. W. Rockfellow, J. E. Morse, J. E. Stewart and J. M. Whiton; clerk, George Fuller; auditor, John M. Burnett. A number of questions were discussed, including the continuance of the choir, but no action was taken in any and they were left to the discretion of the board of trustees.

TAKEN BY SURPRISE.

A Party of George Graves' Friends Make a Pleasant Time For Him.

An enjoyable surprise party was tendered to George Graves, of 206 Liberty street, last evening, by a party of his young friends. The party was arranged by George Reynolds, of 319 West Second street, and the merry party gathered there before proceeding to the home of their unsuspecting friend. When they had arrived at his home, they found that he had not yet returned from business. When he finally came he was surprised beyond measure by the merry company present. The evening was passed in a delightful manner with games, singing and dancing. A repast was enjoyed as the clock was striking the hour of midnight and a few hours later all departed for their homes.

Among the surprisers were: Miss Jennie Hill, Miss Lida Pangborn, Miss Mabel Hockridge, Miss Medora Ulrich, Miss Mamie Koller, Miss Mabel Thompson, Miss Mildred Terrill, Miss Fannie Mills, Miss Josie VanNatti, Miss Flo Taynor, Misses Mary and Kate Graves, Miss Mabel Schenck, Miss Susie Schaefer and Messrs. Will and Clarence Thorn, Maurice Sutphen, George Reynolds, Carman Sutphen, William Trembath, Fred Vanderweg, Arthur and Percy McVoy, Ralph Tolles, Harry and Ferd. Dencklau, George Graves, Will Reynolds, Will Swick, Harry DeMeza, Ben Schenck, Will Swaim and Chas Dunlap.

DROVE INTO THE TRENCH.

An Oak Tree Man Tried to Get Out of the Trouble and Got Into It.

F. S. Emmons, a young man from Oak Tree, had an experience in this city last evening that he will no doubt bear in mind for considerable time. He was driving a horse attached to a light road wagon through Front street when the alarm sounded for the fire in the rear of Compton's bakery. Some one told him to drive in Frank Linke's alley out of the way of the fire apparatus. Instead of stopping as soon as he was within the alley, he attempted to drive through to Second street. Linke resides at the Second street end of the alley, and yesterday workmen dug a trench about four feet deep to connect his house with the sewer. Mr. Emmons did not see the excavation and drove straight into it. With the help of George Cole, Billy Sullivan and Bill Osborn, who partly filled the trench with dirt, the horse was gotten out with nothing more than a cut on one hind leg.

Miss Bessie Titsworth, of West Seventh street, is confined to her home by a severe attack of diphtheria.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

Republicans Elect National Delegates to St. Louis Today.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, April 16.—The Republican State convention for the election of delegates to the national convention to be held in St. Louis in June, was called to order in Taylor's opera house this noon by Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State committee. Senator Stokes was chosen to preside over the convention. John Y. Foster, of the State committee, Augustus Barbour, of Gloucester, and Scott Snyder, of Monmouth, were chosen secretaries. After making the preliminary organization, the convention elected as delegates to St. Louis Senator Sewell, ex-Congressman A. Kean, G. A. Hobart and Franklin Murphy.

The features of the platform will be planks endorsing protection and sound money and it is not improbable that Garrett A. Hobart will be endorsed for the Vice-Presidency. The delegates will probably support McKinley.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR M'CLURE.

Charles Corwin is Discharged on a Writ of Habeus Corpus.

Charles Corwin, one of the principal witnesses in the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Annie Boate against her husband, who was arrested for perjury as he stepped from the cars at Asbury Park while on his way to attend the taking of testimony before a notary public there, was discharged from crstody upon the application of Counsellor W. K. McClure his attorney. The discharge was granted by the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Monmouth, upon the ground that the arrest was illegal and that perjury had been committed. The complete facts will appear in tomorrow's Daily Press.

PROMINENT VOLUNTEER WORKERS.

Major Pattie Watkins and Captain Lindsey to Speak in This City Tonight.

Major Pattie Watkins, who was in command of the famous Bowery Corps of the Salvation Army for three years, and Staff Captain Fred Lindsey, the skilled cornetist, who until recently was treasurer of the same corps and leader of the Bowery Brass Band, will lead the meeting of the Volunteers at Reform Hall tonight.

They will be accompanied by Captain Grady and Lieutenant Macomber. Major Watkins, who is a trained musician, will sing a number of the Volunteer songs. She will also present the colors and swear in the local post. A parade will precede the meeting.

Bitten by a Horse.

Miss Sadie Hand, daughter of Charles H. Hand, of East Fifth street, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon. Mr. Hand's horse was standing on some sewer pipes in front of his office on Watchung avenue, and Miss Hand attempted to get the horse off of the pipes before any damage resulted. While doing this the horse bit the third finger of her right hand. She suffered considerably with pain, but proper treatment was given, and no bad symptoms have been noted.

Town Improvement Women to Meet.

An adjourned meeting of the Town Improvement Association will be held Friday at 10 a. m. in the W. C. T. U. rooms. Mrs. James Scrimgeour, president of the Brooklyn Health Association, will speak. Business of importance will also come before the meeting and a large attendance of the women of Plainfield, interested in town improvement, is desired.

—Jersey and North River shad, all sizes and prices. Nothing but first-class goods sold at Rogers' market, West Second street.

—The shredded wheat biscuit and shredded cereal coffee served free at Neuman Bros' grocery are really delicious. The young lady in charge will be pleased to serve all Press readers with a dish of the shredded wheat or a cup of the shredded coffee.

The congregation and friends of Trinity Reformed church are reminded of the consistoral sociable tomorrow evening.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

The marriage of Miss Annie Flatley to Patrick Harrington was solemnized in St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Rev. Father Murphy officiating. The bridemaid was Miss Kittie Kelly and the best man M. J. Flatley. The bride wore a gown of white silk, trimmed with lace and ribbon, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridemaid wore a gown of swiss, trimmed with pink ribbon and lace, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Harrington proceeded to their new home, 461 West Sixth street, and last evening held a reception. The house was filled to its utmost by the guests. Dancing was the feature of the evening and continued until an early hour this morning. Music was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Prof. Guttman. The newly-married couple received many handsome and useful presents.

Among the guests present were the Misses Gannon, Miss Keogh, of Governor's Island; the Misses Regan, Miss McCue, Miss McCluskey, Miss McKenna, Miss Flatley, the Misses Churchill, the Misses Kane, Miss Kelly, Miss Reynolds, Miss Dixon, Miss Cooney, Miss Egan, Miss Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Kane, Mr. and Mrs. Nugent, Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. Regan, Sr., Mr. and Mrs Regan, Jr., and Messrs. Martin Flatley, of Newark; Martin Regan, Sr., Martin Regan, Jr., Dixon, Daniel Fitzpatrick, Thomas McCue, Michael Egan, Patrick Kane, Patrick Connolly, John Conneff and Thomas Kane.

SMITH—MILLS.

The marriage of Miss May Mills, daughter of D. A. Mills, of 104 Summit avenue, and Edward A. Smith, of Brooklyn, was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride, Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiating in the presence of only the immediate members of both families. The bride was becoming in a gown of white French organdie over pink silk, and carried white and pink roses; the bridemaid, Miss Lillian Mills, sister of the bride, was gowned in Dresden silk and carried pink roses. E. R. Mills, brother of the bride, was best man, and Agnes Marguerite Van Norden, a little niece of the bride, acted as flower girl. She was gowned in white swiss, trimmed with white satin ribbon. A reception and supper followed, after which Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for a short wedding tour. They will reside in Brooklyn on their return. Many costly and useful presents were received by them from their relatives and friends.

SKULLY—CAUFIELD.

The marriage of Miss Katherine Caufield, of West Seventh street, to William Skully, of Jersey City, took place in St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Rev. Father Murphy officiating. The best man was Mr. Kenney, of Jersey City, and the bridemaid Miss Mary Ellen Kane, of this city. After the ceremony the couple left for Jersey City, and last evening held a reception which was attended by a large number of friends from this city.

TWO SCORE AND FIVE.

A Birthday Surprise Given to George McGinnis by His Wife and Daughter.

A birthday surprise party was arranged and given last night by Mrs. Geo. McGinnis and her daughter, Miss Nellie McGinnis, of 208 Somerset street, to Mrs. McGinnis' husband, George S. McGinnis, it being the forty-fifth anniversary of his birthday. It was a complete surprise in every respect. Excellent vocal and instrumental music helped to pass the evening most pleasantly. Mr. McGinnis received a number of handsome presents. At a late hour refreshments were served, after which the guests departed for their homes wishing Mr. McGinnis many happy returns of the day. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Kirch, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Mundy, Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Lance, Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno, Mr. and Mrs. Joel Hedden, Mr. and Mrs. George S. McGinnis, Mrs. K. Bolsterli and Miss Nellie McGinnis.

Couldn't Walk Straight.

John Mulry found that he could not reach the train to go to New York yesterday afternoon so Roundsman Frederickson assisted him to the rookery. Mulry appeared before Judge DeMeza this morning on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. Sentence was suspended.

LAST NIGHT'S FIRE.

It Was a Barn in the Rear of Compton's Bakery—Horse Burned to Death.

When flames were seen shooting upward last evening apparently from the rear of the Compton building on West Front street, many thought that at last the Plainfield fire department would have a big conflagration to deal with.

The fire appeared to be in the very heart of the business section, but after the firemen had hurried through the dark recesses of Compton's alley and located the blaze, it proved to be in a shed belonging to S. C. Conklin, in the rear of the Compton building.

The alarm was sent in by Patrolman Cooney from box 12 at about 9:45 o'clock. The chemical engine was the first to reach the scene and had a stream on in short order. There was a corrugated iron roof to the shed, which confined the fire mostly within the building, and the stream from the chemical engine did excellent work, extinguishing most of the fire.

A stream from the hose completed the work. There was a horse belonging to Mr. Conklin kept in the shed, and an effort was made before the department arrived to lead him out, but he broke away and rushed back to the shed, while his would-be rescurers were driven back by the flames. When the firemen had finally made an entrance it was discovered that the horse had been smothered by the smoke. Although the shed was a frame one and was partially filled with hay, the progre s of the flames was stayed and most of the frame work saved.

At about 2:50 o'clock this morning, another alarm was sent in from the same box. The walls of the shed were filled with hay and straw. The fire had smouldered here until it burst out anew. This time the remains of the shed were given a thorough soaking. While this was being done, the stream was accidentally turned on C. K. Compton's candy factory near by. The water entered under the door and found its way into the stock room and part of the contents were destroyed by the unexpected flood. The damage to Mr. Compton's stock is estimated at between $100 and $200. Mr. Conklin's loss, including the horse, will not reach $100. Both were insured.

The fire is supposed to have been caused by rats, who gnawed the matches that were kept there.

MEMORIAL DAY DETAIL.

The Programme Arranged by the Joint Committee Last Night.

The Joint Memorial Detail from the G. A. R. posts and the Woman's Relief Corps met in G. A. R. Hall last evening, and formulated plans for the coming celebration. Principal H. M. Maxson, of the Public Schools, Revs. Fathers Smyth and Murphy, were present. The last two represented the Parochial School.

It was decided to have a parade in the morning of Decoration Day at 9 o'clock, and the school children will participate, the last three named gentlemen promising to do all in their power to make the parade a success. The Plainfield Cornet Band will also assist. The various cemeteries will be visited and flowers will be placed on the soldiers graves. In the forenoon the Sons of Veterans will go to Scotch Plains accompanied by the band, and appropriate exercises will be held there over the grave of the late John Hand. The citizens, fire companies and school children will assist in the exercises. Stages will be provided for this occasion. In the afternoon there will be a short parade, to be followed by a public memorial meeting in Music Hall, to be addressed by several prominent men. A large chorus of school children will render music, as will also the band.

The W. C. T. U. will, as usual, furnish the veterans with small bouquets tied with white ribbon.

Another meeting of the detail will be held soon.

Invaded by Indians.

The palefaces were astonished last night to see a number of Indians invade the quietude of Plainfield, who were preceded by Guttman's band. No danger was anticipated, however, for it was but a parade to advertise the big masque ball and peace dance of Paugh Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe of Red Men to be held in the Columbia Cycle Academy this evening.

JERSEY REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Dingley and Boutelle Renominated for Congress — McKinley Supporters Meet Almost Under the Eaves of Morton's Residence.

Trenton, April 16.—The republican state convention for the election of delegates to the St. Louis convention will convene in Taylor's opera house in this city at noon to-day. The hotels this morning were crowded with politicians, the more conspicuous ones present being Senator W. J. Sewell, Gov. Griggs, Congressmen Gardner and Parker, ex-Congressmen Kean and Buchanan, Elias Ward, Franklin Murphy and Gerrett A. Hobart, who is a candidate for vice-president of the United States. Senator Stokes of Columbia will preside over the convention and the temporary secretaries will be John Y. Foster, J. Herbert Potts and A. S. Barber. The delegates to St. Louis will be Senator Sewell, ex-Congressman A. Kean, G. A. Hobart and either Franklin Murphy or Elias Ward. The state committee was in session the greater part of the night discussing propositions for recommendation to the committee on resolutions. The features of the platform will be planks endorsing protection and hard money.

MAINE REPUBLICANS.

Will Declare for a Gold Standard at Their Convention To-day, It Is Said.

Portland, Me., April 16.—The Maine republicans at their convention to-day, according to a prominent leader, will adopt a hard and fast sound money plank for theig platform. After recognizing the value of silver for subsidiary money, the plank will go on to state that the money standard of the world is gold, that no nation has a double standard, and that such a standard would be impossible without complete international agreement; the free coinage of silver would be dishonest, in that its intrinsic value at the ratio of 16 to 1 would only be about one-half its face value, and would, therefore, constitute a menace to the business interests of the country. For these reasons the payment of all government obligations in gold is advocated.

DINGLEY RENOMINATED.

Second (Me.) District Republicans Praise Their Representative in Congress.

Auburn, Me., April 16.—The second congressional district republican convention has nominated Hon. N. Dingley, jr., of Lewiston as candidate for representative to the fifty-fifth congress. Resolutions were adopted thanking Mr. Dingley "for his wise and successful leadership of the republican majority on the floor of the house of representatives, presided over so ably by Hon. Thomas B. Reed, whose nomination for the presidency we most earnestly favor."

Heated McKinley Meeting at Albany.

Albany, April 16.—Almost under the eaves of the executive mansion in this city some McKinley followers held a mass meeting in Odd Fellows hall last night. About 100 people were present. About one-half of that number were Morton followers who endeavored to break up the meeting. Every time Morton's name was mentioned they shouted themselves hoarse. Finally the police had to be called in to eject them. Resolutions were adopted denouncing political bosses and endorsing McKinley. A committee of ten was appointed to form a McKinley club.

Bradley Downs McKinley.

Louisville, Ky., April 16.—The Bradley and McKinley forces locked horns here in the republican state convention for the control of the state delegation to the St. Louis convention, and the fight ended in a decisive victory for Bradley. There were several rows during the day. The committee on resolutions will report to-day.

For Silver and Anti-Administration.

Denver, April 16.—The delegates selected by the democratic state convention yesterday are strongly for silver and anti-administration, the federal office holders having failed in their efforts to divest the organization of the convention.

Missouri Democratic Convention.

Sedalia, Mo., April 16.—The democratic state convention here endorsed ex-Congressman Richard Bland for president and declared for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1.

Boutelle Renominated.

Bangor, Me., April 16.—The fourth district republican convention yesterday afternoon renominated Representative Boutelle by acclamation.

Pattison Endorsed.

Lancaster, Pa., April 16.—The Lancaster county democratic convention endorsed ex-Gov. Pattison for president.

Formed To Furnish Excise Bonds.

Albany, April 16.—A defect has been found in the incorporation application papers of the Legal Surety company of the United States, which were sent to the state department of public instruction, and they have been sent back to New York city for correction. It is understood that the purpose of the company is to furnish excise bonds in this state.

Presented with a $10,000 Parsonage.

Somersworth, N. H., April 16.—Hon. Daniel G. Rollins of New York. has presented the Congregational society of Somersworth with a $10,000 parsonage on Prospect street.

TALKS TO WORKINGMEN.

Carlisle Points Out To a Large Chicago Audience the Dangers of a Debased Money.

Chicago, April 16.—Every one of the 5,000 seats in Chicago's great Auditorium was filled last night with people who came to hear the address of Secretary Carlisle on "Currency and Finances." Several hundred people stood through the entire address and several hundred more went away, being unable to gain admittance. The stage was occupied by about 200 officers of Chicago trade and leather assemblies, who had invited Mr. Carlisle to come to Chicago deliver the address. The secretary spoke at considerable length. He told the workmen that a great industrial disaster would surely follow the establishment of free and unlimited coinage of silver at the rate of 16 to 1, and that they and not the rich would be the greatest sufferers. That while the rich would suffer to some extent, their families would still have food, clothing and shelter, but with the working man this might be different. He explained the difference in the actual value between gold and silver, and pointed out many evils, which, he declared, would surely follow a debasing of our currency. His remarks were greeted with considerable applause,

STEAMER PROBABLY LOST.

Latest Theory Regarding the Wreckage Passed by the Schooner Park.

Boston, April 16.—From the description of the wreckage passed off Barnegat light by the schooner W. K. Park, now in port at Portsmouth, it is more than likely that a steamer has gone down. The wreckage was boxes of light merchandise for firms in Jamaica and this sort of cargo would not be carried on a vessel's deck, so that the theory that the cases might have been swept over from the deck of some steamer is not plausible. No wreckage from a vessel was seen by those on board the Park, but the broken boxes might have drifted miles from where the disaster occurred. No steamers have been reported missing, but as frequently their arrival at West Indian ports are reported by mail only, it might be weeks before it might be reported as overdue.

Official Trial of the Massachusetts.

Philadelphia, April 16.—The battleship Massachusetts has been formally inspected by the naval board preliminary to the official trial of the vessel on the 20th instant. No report was made, but it will be embodied in the report which the board will make on the official trial. The trial will be held over the usual course off the Massachusetts coast. The vessel made 15.5 knots on the preliminary trial and it is hoped to better this on the official one.

Sprague Homestead Saved.

Washington, April 16.—The threatened foreclosure of Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague's homestead "Edgemore" on the outskirts of Washington has been averted by the raising of a trust fund to which Senator Brice and Representative Sorg of Ohio each contributed $5,000. The amount, all told, is sufficient to lift the mortgage from Mrs. Sprague's beautiful home and to enable her to spend her remaining days in comfort.

An Aged Bank President Dead.

Portsmouth, N. H., April 16.—James P. Bartlett, for many years one of the most prominent banker, of this city, is dead, aged 76. He was first cashier of the New Hampshire State bank and afterwards president of the New Hamsphire National bank. His services covered a period of twenty-four years as cashier and sixteen as president.

Admiral Carter's Widow's Pension.

Washington, April 16.—The house committee on pensions has ordered a favorable report on the bill increasing from $30 to $50 per month the pension of the widow of Rear-Admiral Carter of the navy. Admiral Carter was probably the only man having the distinctson of serving in both the army and navy and reaching high grades.

Verdict for Libel Sustained.

New Haven, April 16.—The supreme court has handed down a decision in the libel suit of W. J. Atwater vs. the New Haven News, finding no error in the verdict of the superior court which rendered judgment for $500. The suit grew out of the investigation of the board of works a few years ago and was for $10,000.

For the Loss of the Elbe.

Rotterdam, April 16.—The owners of British steamer Crathie, belonging to Aberdeen, have been condemned to pay 565,500 florins ($226,000) damages to the North German Lloyd company for the sinking of the steamship Elbe by collision during the morning of Jauuary 30, 1895, with a loss of 335 lives.

NOT BEFORE JUNE 1

Evident That Congress Cannot Take an Earlier Adjournment.

DUPONT ELECTION CASE IN THE WAY

Bitter Attack Made in the House Upon Gen. Franklin, President of the Board of Managers of the National Soldiers' Home.

Washington, April 16.—Those members of congress who desired and expected an adjournment of congress as early as May 2 are disappointed because it is now evident that congress cannot finish its labors before June 1. The principal obstacle to early adjournment is found in the senate, where the Dupont case from the state of Delaware is likely to occupy considerable time, as there are half a dozen speeches yet to be made. When Mr. Gray, who is speaking on the subject to-day, shall have finished his remarks, the Dupont case will be shelved until the Indian appropriation bill, the naval appropriation bill and Senator Peffer's resolution for the investigation of recent bond sales shall be disposed of, when it will again be taken up and pressed to a conclusion. Practically without opposition and without taking a yea and nay vote, the senate, in executive session just before adjournment yesterday afternoon, ratified the treaty with Great Britain providing for the appointment of a commission for the assessment of the damages growing out of the seizure of vessels engaged in sealing in Behring sea There were one or two verbal but unimportant amendments.

House of Representatives.

The old fight against the re-election of Gen. W. B. Franklin as a member of the board of managers of the National Soldiers' home, and against the retention of Col. A. J. Smith as governor of the home at Leavenworth, Kan., which was renewed in the house yesterday, is on again to-day and will occupy the house until late this afternoon. The bitterest attack upon Gen. Franklin was made by Mr. Blue, rep., Kan., who desired that Gen. O. O. Howard should succeed Gen. Franklin. Mr. Blue bitterly arraigned Gen. Franklin's administration as president of the board of managers, declaring that he was virtually the board, dominating its policy and action. He charged, he said from the record, that Gen. Franklin was either grossly negligent, grossly incompetent, or was not honest. He held that he was responsible for the retention in office up to the present time of Col. Smith, whom he accused of drunkenness, frequent and continued, and of brutality to the inmates of the home under his charge. Gen. Franklin and Col. Smith were defended by several members. The house this afternoon will vote on the motion of Mr. Mahon, rep., Pa., providing for a joint congressional investigation of the charges of drunkenness against Col. Smith, that officer to be removed should a majority of the committee find the charges to be well founded. The house unanimously adopted the resolutions reported by elections committee No. 3, that Robert Moorman, rep., was not elected, and that R. C. Latimer, dem., was elected a representative from the third South Carolina district, and that the latter is entitled to his seat.

STORIES DIFFER AS TO THE VICTORS

Great Destruction Committed in Pinar del Rio Province—Torch Applied to Grinding Mills and Residences by the Insurgents.

Havana, April 16.—Col. Pintos reports that his command had a fight with a party of insurgents under Masso, near Pozo Redondo, in the Havana province. The engagement terminated in a hand-to-hand encounter in which the rebels fought desperately with machetes. The result, according to Col. Pinto's reports, was that the rebels lost ten killed, while the government force had only one man wounded. News received from a private source says the Spaniards lost over a dozen and the rebel loss was unknown. A party of guerrillas while foraging near Matanzas encountered a superior force of the enemy and a battle followed in which six of the guerrillas were killed and one was wounded. The column commanded by Lieut.-Col. Navarro came to the assistance of the guerrillas and the combined government forces routed the rebels. Another band of guerrillas while on a foraging expedition in the vicinity of San Antonio de las Vegas, in the province of Havana, was surprised by a party of rebels under the leader Castillos. They were attacked and only three of their number escaped, ten being killed and one wounded. It is said that Lieut.-Col. Debos and Captain Forsbe have been promoted for their valor in the recent battle near Lechuza. It is reported that some of Maceo's forces made an attack upon the trocha, near the south end of the line yesterday, but were compelled to retire by the gunboat Almendares and the launch Dardo, aided by a land force.

SUGAR ESTATES BURNED.

Great Destruction Going on in the Province of Pinar del Rio.

Washington, April 16.—An American who recently visited the province of Pinar del Rio and had an opportunity to realize for himself the destruction of property now going on in Cuba, reports as follows: The districts of Bahia Honda, Cabanas and Guanajay, in the province of Pinar del Rio, counted three weeks ago thirty-two sugar estates. Of thes seventeen were grinding and the other fifteen were only cultivating sugarcane. The majority of them were already working when the insurgents entered the province for the second time, but were compelled to stop. Of the above named thirty-two plantations, twenty-six have been completely destroyed by fire, that is to say, the sugar machinery houses, dwellings and other departments, composing the batey of a sugar plantation. The cane fields have not so far been burned to a great extent, but they have suffered very much, as the canes have been cut to feed the horses of both the Spanish and Cuban troops. Five of the estates whose machine houses have been destroyed, the machines are in such bad condition that, owing to the great cost it would be for their owners to repair them, it is very doubtful that they will be in a financial position to go over such big expenses. The destruction of these estates has been not only the ruin of their owners, but also of all the farmers who planted cane and, therefore, of the whole district and of Cabanas, which town has been also burned by the rebels.

Great Flood at Richford, Vt.

Richford, Vt., Apri 16.—The water is very high in the Mississquoi river, and great damage has been done in places. No mail was received over the Canadian Pacific railway from Boston yesterday on account of the track near Mansonville, Quebec, being submerged. The mills and factories at Enosburg Falls are endangered. The electric light plant there is damaged and the village is in darkness at night. Grave fears are entertained for the safety of the mills and factorie there.

Fears for the Safety of a Ship.

New Haven, April 16.—The brig Acacia, which left Porto Rico, Feb. 24, for this port, has not been heard from since March 28, and fears are entertained regarding her safety. March 1 the brig was sixty miles off Block Island, when the heavy gales of that period were encountered and she was blown off the coast. Several days later she was reported at Bermuda and on March 28 she started for New Haven, since which time nothing has been heard of the ship.

Boston, April 16.—Yesterday was the thirty-fifth anniversary of the day on which President Lincoln, through commander-in-chief John A. Andrew, ordered the Massachusetts minute men to be mustered on the Boston common, and an unusually large number of those who responded to the call celebrated the anniversary of that event yesterday in this city. They assembled in Horticultural hall principally for the election of officers. Two resolutions were adopted, one commending the bill now before congress providing for the establishment of a military park at Vicksburg, Miss., the other asking the Mississippi legislature for an appropriation for the proper celebration of this day next year. The veterans then marched to Faneuil hall where a banquet was served and addresses were made by president James H. Osgood, Col. Henry A. Thomas, mayor Josiah Quincy, Gen. D. W. Wardop, Gen. A. P. Martin and Rev. E. A. Horton.

REV. DR. CLEVELAND PROTESTS.

The President's Brother Will Fight Against His Dismissal.

Watertown, N. Y., April 16.—Rev. Dr. William N. Cleveland, brother of the president, who was dismissed from the church at Chauncht, of which he has been pastor, is proving himself a stubborn fighter. He has entered a protest to the presbytery against the dissolution of the pastoral relations, on the ground that it is against the will of the majority of the congregation, involves the condemnation of palpable offenses against the church, turns over the church to the control of a party unworthy to rule and without suitable influence in the community, and is against the true interests of religion and the church. The presbytery has entered the protest upon its minutes with a statement that in so doing it does not assent to the validity of the position assumed by Mr. Cleveland, and here the matter rests at present.

His majesty, in offering the toast spoke in the most cordial manner, but made no political allusions. After luncheon the kaiser started for Karlsruhe. He was accompanied to the railway station by Emperor Francis Joseph, where the two monarchs bade each other a most friendly farewell. It is understood semi-officially that military, as well as political, questions were discussed during Emperor William's visit to Vienna.

OUR ATHLETES LEAD

Americans Carry Off Eleven of the Prizes at Athens.

GREEKS CAME NEXT WITH TEN

Germans Won Seven, French Five, English Three, Australians Two, Hungarians Two, Austrians Two, Danes One and Swiss One.

Athens, April 16.—Banquets in honor of the visitors brought here by the Olympic games last week are still being given, and the city remains en fete. The total number of athletes who received prizes was forty-four, of whom eleven were Americans, ten Greeks, seven Germans, five French, three English, two Hungarians, two Australians, two Austrians, one Dane and one Swiss. The prizes were wreaths made from the leaves and twigs of wild olive trees growing in Olympia, thus following the precedent set in the ancient games. It was at one time proposed to substitute silver wreaths, but this plan was abandoned, it being thought far more appropriate to give the olive wreaths that centuries ago conferred such honor and distinction upon the victors in the Olympic games. In addition to the wreaths each winner was given a medal and a handsomely illuminated diploma. After the ceremonies attendant upon the prize awards were completed the international committee having the arrangement of the games in charge met at the residence of the crown prince and arranged for the holding of the next games in Athens in 1898.

Senator Sewell introduced in Senate yesterday a bill "to establish a military and National park upon the Palisades of the Hudson." The sum of $500,000 was asked to cover the condemnation proceedings and the purchase of land. This is the same bill that was introduced in the House by Mr. Schofield, of New York.

Plainfield plumbers may not wear diamonds next winter. The women of the town have arisen. Their rising takes the form of an organization to inquire into plumbing and municipal affairs, under the corporation title of the Town Improvement Association. Some of the members have had to walk while the plumbers rode in their carriages and spent the summer months at seashore and mountain. And now things will be different in Plainfield, or the pratical women of the T. I. A. will know the reason why. —Freeholder in New York Sun.

Complete returns from the Elizabeth charter election show that while the Democrats lost the Mayoralty they control the City Council and Board of Education by safe working majorities and gained one freeholder —says The World. With any other candidate than Mayor Rankin to head the Republican ticket that party would have been completely snowed under. Rankin's popularity pulled the most of the Republican freeholders ticket through, but this was all it could accomplish. The outcome of the struggle shows that with thorough organization, which was greatly lacking in this contest, Elizabeth can be counted on this fall to give a substantial majority to the Democratic ticket.

Few persons have the art of having the blues without inflicting them upon their friends. The consequence is that the average man makes himself a perpetual nuisance, a spoiler of dinner parties and good cheer in general. The view that it is better to be honest and show how you feel is an absurb one. This is one of those cases when it is imperative in the individual to play the hypocrite. It dosen't do to act as a germ centre for the diffusion of misery. If A is unhappy his condition is not bettered when he has reduced B to the same condition. Ever blessed is the man who is always the same. It does not matter what reasons he has for depression; for he manages to turn a smiling outside toward the world. This is a feminine accomplishment. Men have less of the art of concealment than women. This is one reason for the subjection in which woman holds humanity. The very knowledge that she does not feel as she looks only increases the mystery that surrounds her.—Evening Sun.

A WORTHY LOAN EXHIBITION.

Plainfielders Don't Seem to Appreciate the Camera Club's Efforts.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Does Plainfield know a good thing when she sees it? And why does she not see it? It is right here "in her midst." I mean the Loan Exhibition of the Camera Club, now being held in the Babcock building.

In addition to the masterpieces of the Camera "fiends," it is a choice display of articles beautiful, rare, costly and curious, culled from the homes of Plainfield's 400. It is an exhibition which the club has been urged for 'years to make. They have yielded; but few go to see it, and the result will be that "the condition which confronts" the club is a deep and deadly deficit in its treasury. If Plainfield were Washington, which happily it is not, this deficit might be cevered up by a sale of bonds.

But the exhibit. Every man, woman and child should see it. It is "a liberal education." A description cannot do justice to it. The eye must see it. I would like, however, to call attention to two of the curious and dreadfuls. The are Michael Angelo's "Lost Soul" and Mayor Gilbert's "Hideous Head." Or perhaps I should say, "The Lost Soul" by Michael Angelo, and the "Hideous Head of the Zanzibar Chief," which is the property of the Chauncey Depew of Plainfield Our witty and felicitous Mayor has a handsome head of his own, which, however, is not on exhibition. Either of the two subjects mentioned above is "worth the price of admission" and an hour's study.

If, as is contended by some, the actor must feel the part he portrays, must the artist experience what he paints? If so, it was a torturous day for Michael Angelo when he lined, in black and white, "The Lost Soul." I would like some of your thoughtful readers to make a study of this face and to tell us the sermon in it.

For an example of the "horrible, most horrible," however, commend me to the head of the Zanzibar chief or priest. "It takes the cake," although, as the features are decidedly cannibalistic. a succulent human thigh-bone would doubtless have been more inviting to its possessor.

According to the vogue in Plainfield of avoiding the good things within our reach, many a citizen would make a special trip to New York and pay a dollar to see such an exhibit, while he neglects to go to the Babcock building and pay his modest octrio ot a quarter.

No, I am not a member of the Camera Club, and this "unsolicited testimonial" is written "without fear, favor or hope of reward." If, however, the man is twice blessed who makes two blades of grass to grow where but one grew before, I shall die happy if I shall be the cause of making ten people visit the Camera Club Exhibit where but one has already gone. Patriarch.

THEATRICAL.

We are inclined to think that William S. Cleveland, the minstrel magnate, is overdoing the thing in the way of a big show, not that we wish to be understood as asserting that he has "bitten off more than he can chew," like the fellow who begs his tobacco, but that he is giving too much of a bill of fare in his menu, a surfeit of food for fun and fancy. Jus four times too much show for the money. Mr. Cleveland. A minstrel show alone is enough and her you go and quadruple the dose. 1. A white minstrel show. 2. A charcoal contingent—a genuine coon carnival. 3. A troupe of Japanese. Show enough in one night to last four, and as if that was not heaping high the dish you come along with three brass bands and shake up the town until every dollar in it threatens to roll into your treasury. William, we beg of you to halt, call a stop, put on the breaks and for goodness sake give some of the other managers a chance to live. If you keep on at the rate you are agoing you will get it all. The company will be at Music Hall tomorrow night.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

RALLY OF THE SALVATIONISTS.

Ensign March Present and Spoke Encouragingly to the Soldiers.

The Bowery corps of New York, headed by Ensign March and Lieut. Brown, assisted the Salvation Army corps in this city last night. The visitors numbered twelve, ten of whom composed the band. After a short street parade led by the local corps, the meeting was opened in the Elkwood building and was led by Ensign March,

Some of the testimonies given were as interesting as have been heard in this city for some time. One had been a gambler, another had been an anarchist, another a politician who had sunk all his money in politics and, in fact, each one testified to having been deep down in sin. At the close of the testimonies, Ensign March made an earnest appeal for all those who were unsaved. The Ensign is a very fluent talker and held the close attention of her audience throughout.

At the hall where she is located on Fourth avenue, New York, the attendance numbers between 5,000 and 6,000 a week. The corps numbers 165. Eighteen members of the corps went over to the new movement. They have about 1,600 conversions a year, seventy per cent of whom are genuine. The corps was founded on April 29th, 1893.

The Ensign regrets deeply the split in the army. She feels that Ballington Booth is wrong. He should have stood by his father and says his action will put the army back five years. She has the best of feeling toward the new movement and says there is plenty of room for both armies to work in.

From personal observation in her own field of work, she says that very few Americans have joined the new movement. She says if the people knew the inside workings of the order they would understand better and she feels sure that if such was the case, their sympathy would be with the old movement.

DOUGLASS MONUMENT.

To Be Erected at Rochester, N. Y., by the Negroes of America.

Monuments to public men, in the majority of cases, come into existence at a snail's place. It often takes a dozen or more years to raise the funds and complete the memorial after no end of committee reports and appeals for aid. An exception to these cases of tardy remembrance of the men whose deeds on earth entitle them to more than a mere obituary notice in the newspapers is the proposed monument to the late Frederick Douglass.

The colored men of the country have joined hands in the erection of a suitable monument to the noted leader of their race, and no time has been wasted in carrying out the project. The monument, according to the representative in New York city of the contractors, is now nearly ready for shipment to Rochester, N. Y., which city was chosen as the most suitable place for the memorial because Mr. Douglass lived there for a quarter of a century, and his body now rests there. He made Rochester his home during the war, and from that city carried on his campaign of negro education and the abolition of slavery. He there published his first paper, the North Star, and then Frederick Douglass' Paper.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS MONUMENT.

When the monument is dedicated, in a few months—the exact date is not yet known—it is proposed to make the event a memorable one in the history of the colored race in this country. Efforts will be made to secure the attendance of national and state officials, and there is talk of requesting Chauncey M. Depew to deliver the chief oration.

The pedestal for the monument is now being cut at Westerly, R. I. It is of Westerly granite and 9 feet high. It is to be surmounted by a bronze statue of the colored Moses 8 feet high, making the total height of the memorial 17 feet. Around the pedestal, which will be circular in form, will be four bronze panels, each of which will bear a suitable inscription. Between each of the panels will be carved in the granite a design representing a palm. Mr. Douglass is shown in the act of delivering an address. His head is uncovered, and he is adding emphasis to his statements with his outstretched right hand. His left hand holds the manuscript from which he has just been reading.

REPUBLICAN GAVEL.

Made for the St. Louis Convention from a Log Handled by Lincoln.

The gavel which will be used to call the next republican national convention to order is now on exhibition at republican headquarters in the Great Northern hotel, Chicago. It was brought to Chicago by W. B. Bartels, of Carthage, Ill., by whom it was tendered to Chairman Manley, of the national republican committee, for use at St. Louis, and accepted. It is made of wood taken from the log cabin built by Abraham Lincoln at New Salem, Ill.,

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION GAVEL AND ITS INSCRIPTIONS.

in 1832. The presentation speech will be made by Senator Berry, nephew of Jonathan Berry, who was Lincoln's partner when the log cabin was built.

The mounting, which was done by W. H. Winn, of Chicago, is symbolic of the two sides of the currency question, the ends of the mallet being respectively mounted in gold and silver. On the silver plate is inscribed: "Made by W. B. Bartels, Carthage, Ill., from a log of the cabin built by Abraham Lincoln at New Salem, Ill., 1832." The gold end of the mallet bears this inscription: "National Republican Convention, held at St. Louis, June 16, 1896, nominating —— for President."

Can Live Without Stomachs.

A London medical journal says the ancient idea that we owe our digestion chiefly to the stomach is being discarded, Koenig having shown that this organ may be completely removed from the living animal. Other German physiologists suggest that the proper function of the stomach is to render harmless all substances injurious to the bowels, the real digestive organs.

Polyglot Coroner.

An exchange tells a story of a coroner who was called upon to hold an inquest over the body of an Italian. The only witness was a small boy of the same nationality, who spoke no English.

The examination proceeded thus:

"Where do you live, my boy?"

The boy shook his head.

"Do you speak English?"

Another shake of the head.

"Do you speak French?"

Another shake.

"Do you speak German?"

Still no answer.

"How old are you?"

No reply.

"Have you father and mother?"

No reply.

"Do you speak Italian?"

The boy gave no sign.

"Well," said the coroner, "I have questioned the witness in four languages, and can get no answer. It is useless to proceed. The court is adjourned."

In a Nutshell.

"What's the reason there are so many divorces nowadays?" asked Mrs. Yerger, who was reading the morning paper.

"I have studied the subject thoroughly from every possible standpoint, and I think I can point out the true cause, and as long as that cause lasts there will be divorces," replied Col. Yerger.

"What is that cause?"

"Matrimony."—Texas Siftings.

Doubling the Number.

Lady—This house would suit me, but there are not enough closets.

Landlord—The number can easily be doubled.

Lady—Very well, then, I'll sign the lease.

Landlord (half an hour later)—George, send a carpenter to that house to divide each of those closets into two. —N. Y. Weekly.

One on the Dear Departed.

Aunt Martha—Try to be a man like your uncle was, my boy; never wasted his time, always careful and methodical. There's the clock he never missed winding up one night for the last thirty years.

Nephew Jack—Yes; I was looking at it to-day. It's an eight-day clock.—N. Y. World.

Reason for Vagueness.

"By the way," said the editor to the new man, "we don't credit statements to a well-known citizen on this paper. You must give his name."

"The trouble is," explained the new man, "that he is so well known that the statement would be discredited if his name were given."—Indianapolis Journal.

Good for Trade.

Kitchenmaid (at the crockery shop)—What! only one florin tip? During the past year I have broken three soup tureens, twenty-six cups, thirty-five saucers, five meat dishes and fifty-six plates.

Shopman—Well, then, here's another florin, but don't forget me, you know. —Stuiversblad.

SOMETHING NEW.

How Some People Follow Every New Fad.

But the Majority Prefer That Experiments Should Be Tried Upon Somebody Else.

Some persons are always so anxious for something new that it is astonishing they still continue to eat plain bread and butter. They have always thrived well on beef, eggs, and potatoes; but somebody writes an article for a scientific journal, and attempts to show that these foods are neither as cheap nor as nutritious as some other kind of food. Therefore, some persons drop this standard diet and take up whatever some young scientist directs. We cannot understand this. When anything has been thoroughly tried and tested, and found in every way satisfactory, why do some people persist in running after some new-fangled notion? Take cod-liver oil for instance. It has been used for two hundred years with most marvellous success, and in a large variety of complaints. Its success has been no greater in the past than it is to-day. More skillful methods of preparing it, and emulsifying it (for it is generally acknowledged that it should always be given in the form of an emulsion), gives assurance that its future use is bound to be even far greater than ever.

And yet some people talk about a "substitute for cod-liver oil"! Substitute? Why, it is almost laughable. It certainly would be so, were the question not such a serious one. There can be no substitute for cod-liver oil, for there is nothing at all like it known to medical science. When Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites has been used for over twenty years, and when thousands have testified to its curative properties, is it not strange that any one would think of trying an experiment with some new preparation of cod-liver oil? When you know you are safe in taking Scott's Emulsion, is it not too risky business to try something new? Do you think Scott's Emulsion could have stood these twenty years, and have a larger sale to-day than ever before, unless it had true, genuine merit. Where do you suppose these substitutes, which do not contain a particle of oil, will be twenty years from now? And where will all the fancy preparations, as the various wines of cod-liver oil, be at that time? It is perfectly safe to predict that before they are half as old as Scott's Emulsion is, they will be forgotten. Do not allow yourselves to be experimented upon; be satisfied with the best; and take advantage of twenty years of ever increasing prosperity.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor

MY QUEEN.

When and how shall I earliest meet her?
What are the words she first will say?
By what name shall I learn to greet her?
I know not now; it will come some day!
With the selfsame sunlight shining upon her
Shining down on the ringlets' sheen,
She is standing somewhere—she I shall honor
She that I wait for, my queen, my queen!

Whether her hair be golden or raven,
Whether her eyes be hazel or blue,
I know not now, but 'twill be engraven
Some day hence as my loveliest hue.
Many a girl I have loved for a minute,
Worshiped many a face I have seen:
Ever and aye there was something in it,
Something that could not be hers, my queen!

I will not dream of her, tall and stately,
She that I love may be fairy light;
I will not say she must move sedately—
Whatever she does it will then be right.
She may be humble or proud, my lady,
Or that sweet calm that is just between;
And whehever she comes she will find me ready
To do her homage, my queen, my queen!

But she must be courteous, she must be holy
Pure in her spirit, this maiden I love;
Whether her birth be noble or lowly,
I care no more than the spirits above.
But I'll give my heart to my lady's keeping,
And ever her strength on mine shall lean:
And the stars may fall, and the saints be weeping,
Ere I cease to love her, my queen, my queen!

A BOY'S ADVENTURE.

Night in an Ice Fort Surrounded by Wolves.

The Belated Traveler Frozen In and the Wolves Frozen Out, But They Keep Up the Attack Until Frightened Away.

IN the early days of northern Ohio, when settlers were few and far between, Frank Corwin, a Welsh lad of sixteen years, found his way thither and began his career as a laborer, receiving at first but two dollars a month, in addition to his board and home-made clothing. He possessed an intelligent, energetic mind in a sound and vigorous body, and had acquired in his native parish the elements of an education in both Welsh and English. The story of his life, outlined in a curious old diary containing the records of sixty-two years, and an entry for more than twenty-two thousand days, would constitute a history of the region, and some of its passages would read like high-wrought romance.

His first term of service was with a border farmer on the banks of a stream called Grand river, in Ashtabula county. It was rather crude farming, however, consisting mostly of felling trees, cutting wood and sawlogs, burning brush and digging out stumps, the ax and pickax finding more use than ordinary farm implements. Seven miles down the river, and on the opposite bank, lived the nearest neighbors, among them a blacksmith, who, in his trade, served the whole country for twenty miles around. One especial part of his business was the repairing of axes, called in that day "jumping," or "upsetting."

In midwinter Frank's employer left a couple of axes with the blacksmith for repairs, the job to be done within a week. At this time the weather is what is termed "settled," with deep snow and good "slipping" along the few wildwood roads. But three or four days later there came a "January thaw." Rain and a warmer temperature melted away much of the snow, the little river was swelled to a great torrent, breaking up the ice and carrying it down stream, and the roads became almost impassable. When the week was up the farmer wanted the axes; it was not possible for the horse to travel, and, after waiting vainly a day or two for a turn in the weather, Frank was posted off on foot to obtain the needed implements. Delighting in the change and excitement of such a trip, the boy started before noon, expecting to reach home again ere dark, as it was not considered quite safe to journey far by night on account of the wolves.

Three miles below, at a narrow place in the river, was the bridge, consisting of three very long tree trunks reaching parallel from bank to bank and covered with hewn planks. When Frank arrived here he found that this bridge had been swept away, but, pushing on down stream among the thickets, about half a mile below, he came upon an immense ice jam, stretching across the stream and piled many feet high. Upon this he at once resolved to make his way over to the road on the other side, for he was already wearied threading the underbrush. Grand river, which is a narrow but deep and violent stream, ran roaring and plunging beneath the masses of ice as if enraged at being so obstructed; but the lad picked his path in safety, and soon stood on the opposite bank. Away he hurried now to the blacksmith's, so as to complete his errand and return by this precarious crossing before dark. But the smith had neglected his duty, and Frank had to wait an hour or more for the axes. At length they were done, and, with one tied at each end of a strong cord, and this hung about his neck, he was off on the homeward trip. To aid his walking he procured from the thicket a stout cane. He had hardly gone two miles when the duskiness gathering in the woods denoted the nearness of night; yet, as the moon was riding high, he pushed on without fear.

But as he was skirting a windfall of trees, he came suddenly upon two or three wolves, apparently emerging from their daytime hiding place for a hunting expedition. Frank was considerably startled; but as they ran off in the woods, as if afraid of him, he took courage in the hope that they would not molest him. In a few minutes, however, they set up that dismal howl by which they summon their mates and enlarge their numbers; and Frank discovered by the sounds that they were following him cautiously at no great distance. Frequent responses were also heard from more distant points in the woods, and from across the river. By this time it was becoming quite dark, the moonlight penetrating the forest only along the roadway and in occasional patches among the trees on either side. Finally, just as he reached the ice-bridge, the howling became still, a sign that their numbers emboldened them to enter in earnest on the pursuit. The species of wolves once so common in the central states, and making the early farmers so much trouble, were peculiar in this respect—they were great cowards, singly, and would trail the heels of a traveler, howling for recruits, and not daring to begin the attack until they had collected a force that insured success; then they became fierce and bold, and more to be dreaded than any other animal of the wilderness.

In the emergency he thought of the axes, and, taking them from his neck, cut the cord, and thrust his walking stick into one as a helve, resolved to defend himself to the last. At this instant he espied among the thick, upheaved ice cakes two great fragments leaning against each other in such a way as to form a roof with something like a small room underneath. Here he saw his only chance. Springing within, he used the ax to chip off other fragments with which to close up the entrance, and almost quicker than it can be told had thus constructed a sort of fort, which he believed would withstand the attack of the wolves. At nightfall the weather had become colder, and he knew that within a few minutes the damp pieces of ice would be firmly cemented together.

Hardly had he lifted the last piece to its place, when the pack came rushing about him, snapping and snarling, but at first not testing the strength of his entrenchment. When soon they began to spring against it and snap at the corners of the ice, the frost had done its work, and they could not loosen his hastily built wall. Through narrow crevices he could look out at them, and at one time counted sixteen grouped together in council. As the cold increased he had to keep in motion in order not to freeze, and any extra action on his part increased the fierceness of the wolves. At times they would gather in a circle around him, and, after sniffing at him eagerly, set up a doleful howling, as if deploring the excellent supper they had lost.

Ere long one of them found an opening large enough to admit its head; but Frank was on the alert and gave it such a blow with an ax as to kill it. Soon another tried the same thing, and met with the same reception, withdrawing and whirling round several times and then dropping dead with a broken skull. One smaller than the rest attempted to enter, and, receiving the fatal blow, crawled, in its dying agony, completely into the inclosure, and lay dead at Frank's feet. For this he was not sorry, for his feet were bitterly cold, and even the warm carcass of the animal served to relieve them.

Toward morning, as the change of weather continued and the waters of the river began to diminish, there was suddenly a prodigious crack and crash of the ice-bridge, and the whole mass settled several inches. At this the wolves took alarm, and in an instant fled. Perhaps they might have returned had not the crackling of the ice repeated frequently. At length Frank became alarmed for his safety, lest the ice should break up in the current, and, bringing his ax to bear, soon burst his way out and fled to shore. But, not seeing the ice crumble, he ventured back to obtain the other ax, and then hastened home to his employer. During the day he skinned the wolves, and within a fortnight pocketed the bounty money, amounting in all to about one hundred and fifty dollars. With the money he made the first payment on a large farm, which he long lived to cultivate and enjoy, and under the sod of which he found a quiet grave.—N. Y. Recorder.

The Racing Board of the L. A. W. has issued an important notice to race-meet promoters. It reads as follows: "Every year about this time the various colleges and schools begin to develop racing men to represent them at the intercollegiate and interscholastic outdoor games. Racing throughout the United States is governed by the League of American Wheelmen, and the League of American Wheelmen requires that every track race be sanctioned. A man competing in an unsanctioned event is liable to suspension. Remember that every race on a track, be it one event or more, must be sanctioned. If you are to have any trials, send for sanction every time. For open races a fee is charged, but no fee is required for a closed club or school events; but in all cases send for sanction and save your men from suspension, which in one or more cases last year affected the standing for the school in points won at the championship meeting."

THE BRAVE MEN'S DANCE

GAY MASQUERADERS ATTEND PAUGH-CAUGH-NAUGH-SINQUE EVENT.

The Heat Kept Many Away, But Still There Was Enough to Make a Merry Night—Contortionists Acts Were Given.

The second anniversary of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque tribe of Red Men was celebrated in the Columbia Cycle Academy last night in a gay manner with a masque ball and Indian peace dance. The warm weather had much to do with the attendance and the crowd was not as large as was expected, though there was over 200 there. But what it lacked in numbers it made up in merriment, and thus served the purpose of the projectors who had aimed to give their friends, an event elite in a way, and yet of sufficient freedom from social conventionalties to be enjoyable to those people who love to put on the mask and delve into that mystery which surrounds the wearer. The heat, however, made it a trifle disagreeable for many of the dancers to wear their masks. After the programme started the fantastic toe-trippers did not wait the hour of 12 to unmask, but sacrificed the pleasure of traveling incognito for their personal comfort. The costumes were novel, while the gaudy dress of the Indian braves of the tribe gave the affair the necessary color of a peace dance.

The tuneful music of the orchestra under the direction of George Rogers, was a feature that made the dancing enjoyable. The programme was made up of popular selections of the day, and frequently at the conclusion of a number the applause was such that it was necessary for the orchestra to repeat the selection.

The early hours of the evening passed quickly away and as the hour of midnight approached, all were on the qui vive to learn what the novelty was to be. Great secrecy was maintained by the committee as to the attraction they had secured. At midnight, John H. Carney, who was the general director of the affair, mounted the platform at the head of the hall and announced that Thomas Schaefer would give an exhibition of baton throwing and club juggling. Mr. Schaefer did a creditable act and received liberal applause. He was followed by two elongated individuals who appeared from behind the scenes in the dress of Mephostophles. They were the McDonough brothers, two famous contortionists from New York. They kicked and twisted their feet into every imaginable shape, and made a great deal of fun for the audience. After this, the grand march was taken to supper, which was served under the direction of the tribe, and was of surpassing quality.

After supper the dancing was continued until the programme was completed.

The event was splendidly managed, for which credit is due to the following: General Director, John H. Carney; floor directors, Louis DeCamp, Wm Allen and Harry C. Runyon; reception, Thomas Osmont, J. W. Kline, William Young and Richard VanArsdale.

Some of the most noteworthy costumes and those which attracted favorable comment were: Miss Blanch Brizard and Miss Mamie Grimes, daisies; Miss Emma Neilor, Spanish dancer; Miss Kate Dixon, little Red Riding Hood; Miss Mary Sperry, night; Miss Mamie DeNise, Oriental lady; Miss Maggie McComas, fancy dancer: Miss Lizzie Gulick, flower girl; Miss Fannie Cose, tambourine girl; Miss Hulda Erickson, fancy; Mrs. Sharp and Miss Millie Snyder, school girls; Miss Bertha Rockfellow, Spanish dancer; Miss Mamie Sinker, ballet girl; Miss Louise Baker, Japanese lady; Miss Annie Baker, night; Miss Sutterlein, fancy dancer; Miss Minnie Kiely and Miss Huff, chorus girls; Miss Fannie Overmeyer, tambourine girl; Miss Mamie Schaefer, school girl; Miss Caroline Thompson, princess; and Messrs Art Ford, sailor; Walt Drade, Jack Robinson; Thomas Stephenson, full-fleged sport; Will Clifton, machinist; George Houseman, Bert Boe, Harry Drier, Thomas Schaefer and William Young, Indians; Charles Wilcox, summer sport; Michael O'Keefe, soldier; and Alfred Koechli, prince.

In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

FLAGS PRESENTED.

Major Pattie Watkins Conducts an Important Meeting of the Volunteers.

There was no lack of interest shown at the meeting of the American Volunteers at Reform Hall last night, and the large and extremely warm audience enjoyed the meeting as much as was possible considering the general humidity.

The purpose of the meeting was the presentatation of the standard to the local post. Major Pattie Watkins, well known as the "Welch Nightingale," Lieutenant Jennie Hughes, Captain Lindsay and Captain Grady were present from New York and assisted at the meeting.

A large street parade preceded the meeting. The visiting officers and the officers of the local post all appeared in the new and becoming uniform of the Volunteers. The women wore gowns of light cadet blue, with bonnets somewhat similar to the Salvation Army style, while the men were uniformed very much like the soldiers in the United States regular army.

The meeting was led by Major Pattie Watkins and the visitors were given several opportunities to hear her sweet and powerful voice. There was something attractive about her that held the attention of her audience and prevented any suggestion of tediousness. The opening exercises were quite impressive, and then followed remarks, testimonies and prayers by the officers and some of the local post. Major Watkins' remarks were listened to with interest, especially her experiences during her thirteen years of work.

Towards the close she presented a handsome American flag and one of banners of the Volunteers, which were, she said, to be carried side by side. Capt. Mimms, of the local post, replied with a few appropriate words. A collection was taken up during the meeting, and while the baskets were being passed Captain Grady sang "Only My Saviour," accompanying himself on his guitar. The meeting closed with an earnest call for volunteers.

WORK OF TOWN IMPROVEMENT.

A Brooklyn Woman Lectures Before Plainfield's Progressive Women.

At the meeting of the Plainfield Town Improvement Association held this morning in the Y. M. C. A. building, Mrs. James Scrimgeour, the president of the Brooklyn society, gave a very interesting address. Mrs. Scrimgeour told of the work of the Brooklyn society and explained the different work of the several committees. All the meetings of the society are open to the public, and to certain meetings of the association all the town officers are earnestly invited to be present. Even the meetings of the Board of Directors are open to the public.

Mrs. Scrimgeour then told what the work of an ideal society ought to be, and how they ought to do it. In speaking of the individual responsibility of the members she laid great stress upon the fact that much improvement could be made if only everybody would refrain from throwing scraps of paper, orange peels, banana skins, etc., into the streets.

After Mrs. Scrimgeour's address, Mrs. Scribner, president of the Philadelphia society, who was present, told of the workings of her society. There will be a meeting of the Board of Dicectors of the Plainfield association on Monday, April 20th, at 10 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Kimball on East Fifth street.

An Overland Party.

A riding party, on their way from Lakewood to Montclair, stopped at Plainfield Wednesday afternoon for rest and refreshments. They were accompanying C. W. Potter, the well-known riding master of Montclair, who was taking a number of his horses back to Montclair after wintering at Lakewood. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Potter, of Montclair; Miss Wilkinson, Schuyler S. Wheeler, Gano S. Dunn, and Robert Christy, Jr., of New York. Mr. Wheeler is the president of the well-known electrical company, the Crocker-Wheeler Company. They rode from Lakewood to New Brunswick on Monday and expected to make the rest of the distance yesterday.

THE ORIGIN OF MASONRY

A LECTURE ON THE GREAT FRATERNITY BY REV. C. H. W. STOCKING.

Its Corner Stone is the Belief in a Supreme Deity—The Haven to Which Many a Widow and Orphan Turns for Help.

While a large and appreciative audience was gathering in Masonic Hall last evening to listen to an illustrated lecture given by Rev. C. H. W. Stocking upon the subject "The Footsteps of Masonry," strains of music were sent forth from the organ by William G. MacClymont, filling the hall with melodious sounds.

Then the lecturer of the evening was introduced as Rev. C. H. W. Stocking, Grand Chaplain of the grand fraternity. Mr. Stocking's lecture was a history of the founding of the Masonic society and was, in part, as follows:

"When we talk about the Dames of the Revolution, we refer to a company of women who were searching for something high and noble as well as patriotic. They were a company with a pedigree and were renowned. It is a great pleasure for me to have the honor of relating to you the story of the founding of this grand and noble fraternity. The gourd may spring up in a single night, but the large oak has spent years and years in gaining strength, until at last its sturdy roots have penetrated deep into heart of the earth—until at last the beautiful tree stands. So it is with this fraternity, which has for years been making its way in the world, until now it stands as the greatest of all fraternities next to the church of the living and true God.

"George Washington was not an accident nor was the great Julius Cæsar; both these men were men of long pedigrees, men of families who were of noble birth, and of high calling. Just so it is with the Masonic Fraternity, it was no accident that this society was placed in the world. It was by divine direction that it was founded. Everything is the growth of centuries. Masonry is not a sapling sprung up in a few hours, nor is it a school where the young man seeks to learn the etiquette of society. Poverty has learned to smile in its face. Widows and orphans have learned to run to it for protection. The poor have been fed, the cold have been warmed by its aid, and tonight it lives with the unperishable renown.

"Not many years ago I stood beneath a great monolith, on the apex of which have been showered the arrows of the bright sunlight, making its emerald top blaze with brightness. Under its very shadows Plato sat involved in the study of Philosophy, under its very shade Socrates also sat, and millions upon millions of slaves have passed by it on their way to do homage to the conquerer.

"When this great monolith was raised from its foundation a short time ago, the corner stone was found, in the recess of which were found many things, among which was a strong proof that this monolith, 143 feet in height, was built by an ancient order of masons in the year 1310 B. C.

"This is one of the first records of the Masonic fraternity. I go down into this recess and what do I find there? First, an eye sculptured out of the granite looking out of its socket for thousands of years, only into the darkness. Second, a twenty-four inch guage carved on the top of a large bowlder. Were these things the play-things of the race which has so long since passed away? Obviously not. They are things symbolic of Masonry; placed there by God. The Masonic fraternity is the best friend a family can have, next to the church.

"In 1044, B. C., Solomon built the large temple at Jerusalem. It was in the building of this beautiful temple that the Masonic fraternity took form. To give you some idea of the cost of this temple let me say that the building was no larger than many of our own parish churches and the cost, as has lately been estimated, was three thousand, five hundred millions of dollars. No man was permitted to work upon the temple unless he acknowledged a supervising divinity, and until he had gained brotherly love. Secret passwords were learned so that they might know each other in the dark as well as in the light. The workmen thus banded together formed themselves into a secret fraternity, and it was out of these facts that the great Masonry has grown. That is the origin of Masonry and the fraternity has lived through all these centuries, continues to live and will undoubtedly prosper in the years to come."

After the lecture the lights were turned off and Mr. Stocking carried his audience on a pictorial tour through the Holy Land and some parts of Europe, exhibiting handsome views of buildings, some in ruins, others in good preservation, built by the ancient order of Masons. Some of the scenes were pictures of the most beautiful workmanship imaginable. At time the pictures were so real that those who gazed upon them could fairly feel the breezes of the ancient times fanning their cheeks.

TABLEAU ANNIVERSARY.

UNIQUE AND APPROPRIATE AFFAIR OF THE MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

The Woman's Club Illustrates the Subjects They Have Studied During the Year Past—Remarks By the President.

It is doubtful whether a more fashionable or brilliant assemblage of people has been seen at the Casino than that of last evening, when the Monday Afternoon Club celebrated their eighth anniversary. The cozy hall was graced by Plainfield's best society people, whose admiration for the club and its work is boundless. The temperature had not the slightest effect on the audience, that is, so far as the success of the event was concerned, and it can be said that the anniversary was a crowning triumph for woman and her art.

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, on behalf of the club members, made an exceedingly appropriate address in extending the hospitality of the club to the visiting friends. She said that there was some doubt in her mind as to whether the emblem of the club, the Sphinx, was a suitable one. The Sphinx was given credit for knowing all things, yet she kept her knowledge to herself. "If our club," she said, "was composed of Sphinxs we would hardly succeed. We think that we have struck a happy medium, and are perfectly willing to transmit to others what we learn.

"During the year the club has been studying noted Florentines, such as Dante, Michael Angelo, etc., and tonight we continue the study with illustrations, and we hope you will not be disappointed."

Miss Marion S. Dumont and Miss Ada G. Marsh gave the initial number on the programme. Faust,' Potpourri." by Gounod, and a more perfect rendition could scarcely be imagined. The harmony and unison was delightful. This was followed with a tableau, "A Scene from the Youth of Dante.' This was arranged by Mrs. A. Walter Haviland, and Mrs. C. A. Reed Mrs. J. R. Joy, Mrs. W. J. Roome, Mrs. D. M. VanVliet and Miss Scribner assumed the characters. The next number, a vocal selection, Trio, "Erra Stella," was given perfectly by Mrs. C. F. Abbott, Mrs. G. A. Chapman, Mrs. M. I. Cooley, Mrs. R. Lowry, Mrs. D. W. Pond, Mrs. W. J. Roome and Mrs. W. L. Saunders. Mrs. Irving Howard Brown was the accompanist. "Dante Mourning for Beatrice" was the title of the next tableau. This one was arranged by Mrs. F. O. Herring. Those impersonating the parts were Dante, Miss Scribner, and Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Mary Betts, Miss Lizzie VonBoskerck, Miss Nella Whlton and Miss Bessie Morgan. The last tableau in part first was under the direction of Mrs. Ed ward D. McCarthy. It was entitled, "Adoramus Te," Palestrina, Fanciulli che cantano, Bas Relief. Those taking the parts were Mrs. Lee Ashley Grace, Miss Emily Tracy, Mrs. G. P. Mellick, Miss Ellis, Mrs. E. C. Perkins, Mrs. Charles Lawson and Mrs. W. D. Murray. They were assisted by the female voices in the musical part.

Part second was introduced by Miss Ada G. Marsh, who rendered a piano solo, "Scherzo B minor," by Chopin. The selection was grandly given in every particular and deservedly won the hearty applause given. The tableau "Angels," arranged by Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, was a beautiful representation of the highest art. The parts were assumed by Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Hunter, Miss Bessie Morgan, Miss Florella Clark, Miss Lizzie VonBoskerck and Mrs. Gibb, and Mrs. Warren, of Fanwood. Mrs. W. L. Saunders had in charge the next Tableau "Tasso and Leonora d'Este," and the characters were taken by Mrs. J. W. Roome, Mrs. E. W. Hedges, Mrs. J. F. Harman, Miss Grace Cooley, Miss Newton, Miss Maude VonBoskerck. This was followed with a vocal selection, trio, "Tirsi non mi seccar," by the female voices. It was finely given, the rich full soprano and alto voices, blending in perfect harmony.

The last tableau was a scene from the last lines of "Romola," by George Elliott. It was under the direction of Mrs. McCutchen. The rich silk hand wrought tapestries, used in connection with the silver candlebra and candlesticks, made the scene one of great beauty. The tiger skin, rug and antique chair was kindly loaned by Mrs. F. O. Herring.

The parts taken were as follows: Romola, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman; Lillo, Mrs. W. L. Saunders; Tessa, Mrs. J. P. Harman; Minna, Mrs. Henry P. Stockton; Monna Brigida, Mrs. A. S. Patterson.

Mrs. McCutchen worked indefatigably and with pre-eminent success in CO-OPERATIVE GROCERY STORE.

The Members Will Save the Middleman's Profit on the Goods.

Co-operation promises to be a leading factor in the future of civilized countries. Co-operative stores have been in existence for sometime and now a number of citizens of Plainfield are planning to have one.

A meeting was held last evening at the Republican Club rooms on East Front street and the question of a co-operative association discussed informally.

The movement here is a voluntary one of a number of workmen in the Pond Tool Works and Scott and Potter Press Works, many of whom are English and Scotch and have seen the stores run very successfully there. A committee was appointed to draft articles of incorporation and report at another meeting Thursday night.

A Press reporter interviewed one of the promoters of the new association this afternoon and learned the principal features of the plan. The association will start a grocery and provision store and sell the goods at the regular market price. The profits will be divided quarterly among the members according to the amount they have purchased. Non-members will be allowed to purchase goods and will be allowed half the dividend. Anyone can become a member on payment of $5 a share. An interest of 6 per cent. will be paid on the shares out of the profits. The savings can be converted into shares as soon as they amount to $5, and then acure interest. The co-operative store will not try to compete with other stores nor work in opposition. It will be run on a strictly cash basis.

A BOROUGH FIRE.

Two Barns Burned and Endangered Two Dwelling Houses.

While George Scheelein was returning from the Red Men's ball to his home in North Plainfield, this morning about 3 o'clock, he noticed a brilliant illumination of the heavens. He at once came to the conclusion that it was a fire, and he went to Johnson's bakery on Somerset street, secured a fire-alarm key and sent in an alarm from Box 41. As quickly as possible the fire department responded to the alarm. They discovered that two barnes at the corner of Grove street and Greenbrook road were in a blaze. The fire had gained considerable headway and it was impossible to save the two structures. They did, however, succeed in saving the houses nearby, one of which belongs to Craig A. Marsh and the other to John Giddis. Both of them were badly scorched. The barn in which the fire started belonged to Mrs. Ann Stites, and the other was used by Chris. Lubeck. The supposition is that the barn was set on fire. Mrs. Stites' horse and Mr. Lubeck's two horses were rescued. The firemen laid two lines of hose and fought the flames persistently for sometime before they were subdued.

A Republican Conclave.

The Republican State Executive Committee met at Trenton last evening, and decided to hold the annual meeting of the league at Asbury Park about July 15th, at which time the nominees for President and Vice-President of the United States will be present, besides a host of other notable people, including Senators, Assemblymen, etc. At this time delegates will be chosen to attend the National Republican League Convention, which will be held at Milwaukee Aug. 25th. H. N. Spencer is mentioned as one of the delegates. Efforts will be made to make the convention one of the largest yet held.

A Regular Old-Fashioned Boom.

Edsall reports that the recent warm weather, together with the very extensive assortment of fine seasonable goods offered at the Commercial Palace, his trade amounts to a real old-fashioned boom. In many of the departments there is such a great rush that the present force of help is inadequate to wait on the people. He has made great preparations for another big rush tomorrow and tomorrow night. It will pay you to go and see what is offered.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

OUT ON A HABEUS CORPUS

MRS. BOATE'S PRINCIPAL WITNESS RELEASED FROM CUSTODY.

Charles Corwin Will Now, It is Said, Commence a Suit for $10,000 Against the Man Who Caused His Arrest.

The divorce suit brought by Mrs. Annie Boate, formerly of Terrill road, exclusive mention of which was made by the Press last January, promises to be a most interesting one. A suit for $10,000 damages has already resulted from it, and all sorts of other unexpected proceedings may be looked for.

The suit was instituted in the district court at Fargo, North Dakota, some time ago. The Fargo attorneys of Mrs. Boate, under her instructions, retained Counsellor W. K. McClure, of this city, to take the testimony of her witnesses before Justice Vincent W. Nash, a notary public of this city. The principal witness for the plaintiff, Mrs. Boate, was a young man named Charles Corwin, whose testimony was so damaging to the defendant's case that, unless disproved, it would certainly enable Mrs. Boate to obtain her divorce.

The testimony for the defence was taken before Charles Cook, a notary public at Asbury Park, where the defendant, Thomas Boate, keeps a bakery. Attorney Guerin, of the defence, produced three witnesses, endeavoring principally to destroy the testimony of Corwin. All three, however, under the severe cross examination which they had to undergo, seemed in a measure to coroborate instead of destroying Corwin's testimony.

The next step of the defence was to allege that Corwin, in his testimony before Justice Nash, had committed perjury, and as soon as Corwin stepped from the train at Asbury Park last Monday morning in company with Mrs. Boate and her counsel, a warrant of arrest was served upon him by a constable. Corwin was paroled in the custody of the constable and the taking of the testimony in the divorce proceeding went on without interruption until 2 o'clock, the time of hearing at the justice's court on the charge of perjury. At the trial, Counsellor McClure appeared for Corwin and objected to the warrant of arrest on the ground that it was not under seal and that the court had no jurisdiction over the prisoner for if any offense at all had been committed, it was committed in Union county and not in Monmouth county. The Court overruled the objections and the case went on. After hearing the testimony of the witnesses produced on the part of the State, no witnesses being allowed to be called by the defendant, the justice held Corwin in $300 bail, in default of which he was committed to jail.

Counsellor McClure immediately returned to this city, and the next morning, Tuesday, he prepared his petition for a writ of habeus corpus, stating the case very clearly. This petition, duly verified, was taken before J. Clarence Conover, judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Monmouth county, at his home in Freehold on Tuesday night. The judge instantly allowed the writ and ordered it sealed, making it returnable the next afternoon at 2 o'clock.

At the appointed time, P. T. Dodd, the Asbury Park justice of the peace, who had been subpœned to bring the record of the hearing before him, and all the other interested parties, appeared and the case was then argued before the court. Judge Conover discharged the prisoner on the grounds alleged by his counsel that the facts set forth as the cause of the arrest and detention were not sufficient and that the warrant was improperly issued and was illegal. The judge then ordered that Corwin be released from custody, and after he had received the congratulations of those present, Corwin, accompanied by his counsel, left immediately for home.

The next step will be a suit in the Supreme Court for $10,000 damages for false imprisonment brought by Corwin against the man who caused his arrest.

The divorce proceedings are still going on.

A REMARKABLE CASE

Drs. Lee and Whitten Again To Be Tried at New Haven.

ACQUITTAL BY A JURY NOT FINAL

Will Be Charged with Murder in the Second Degree—The Case Unequalled in the Annals of Criminal Jurisprudence for Its Complications.

New Haven, Conn., April 17.—The announcement that Dr. J. E. Lee of this city will be tried again for murder in the second degree in causing the death by malpractice of Maggie Schloss reopens a case which, with that of his alleged partner in the crime, Dr. Whitten, has hardly been matched in the country in its legal complications. Both Lee and Whitten were first tried in the city court here and acquitted. Then Lee was tried in the superior court on a similar charge, involving a second alleged crime and known as the "Miller case." He was acquitted by the jury, but the state's attorney, T. E. Doolittle, took the step unprecedented in this state of appealing to the supreme court, which, to the surprise of many lawyers, ordered a new trial in a decision which was widely commented on throughout the country. The chief ground of the higher court's finding was that the modified penalties of modern times justified a retrial after acquittal by jury in contrast with the practice of courts in earlier days, when penalties were very severe and when the courts consequently held that an accused person should not, after jury acquittal, be again imperilled. Next Lee was tried in the Schloss case, the jury disagreeing. Now the Miller case has been nolled and Lee will again be tried on the Schloss case. As for Dr. Whitten, the grand jury which indicted him testified that it did so by mistake, and this gave rise to a new set of complications. The case was carried to Judge Townsend of the United States court on technicalities, and he found against the accused, and was sustrined on appeal by the United States supreme court. Now Dr. Whitten sues the estate of State's Attorney Doolittle, who died a few weeks ago, alleging malicious prosecution and deceit both in the grand jury proceedings and the extradition from Massachusetts. There have thus already been five trials before four separate courts, and two trials yet remain, with further possibilities of appeal. The various trials, reaching over two or three years and involving much expert testimony, have cost the state an immense sum, but have established in Connecticut the legal rule that acquittal by jury is not final.

Walker and the other members of the naval board charged with the preparation of plans for the new battleships which congress will authorize, have decided to make a personal inspection of the workings of the battleship Indiana's armament to determine whether the arrangements of her batteries is faulty and whether necessity exists for making changes that will cause them to render better service without danger to the crew. The board will sail from Hampton roads, Va., on the battleship to-morrrw morning and proceed in her to New York, making the examination enroute. The trip to New York is not to accommodate the board, but to allow the Indiana to take on ammunition and stores and undergo some slight repairs at the Brooklyn navy yard.

RECEIVE A HEAVY VERDICT.

Dudley Porter and Others Win Their Suit Against James M. Sigafus.

New York, April 17.—The case of Dudley Porter of Haverhill, Mass., and others, against James M. Sigafus, in which the plaintiffs ask for $1,000,000, alleging that the defendant misrepresented the character of a gold mine in Riverside county, Cal., which he induced them to buy, was concluded late yesterday afternoon in the United States circuit court, the jury returning a verdict for the plaintiffs in the sum of $330,275. The defense was that the alleged misrepresentation arose from the incompetence or negligence of the expert and others whom the plaintiffs employed to inspect the mine. It was also alleged by the defense that the expert, Col. Eagan of California, had been made superintendent of the mine and had mismanaged it. A stay of judgment for thirty days was granted the defendant.

THREE TO DIE TO-DAY

Cruelties to Prisoners of War Resumed in Cuba.

SIXTEEN MORE AWAITING DEATH

Others Will Be Sent to Ceuta and Isle of Pines—Even Women and Children Seized Under Secret Orders and Thrust Into Dungeons.

Havana, April 17.—Captain-General Weyler, now that there seems no prospect of President Cleveland acting upon the resolutions passed by congress asking him to grant belligerent rights to the Cubans, is again indulging in cruelties to prisoners of war and executions. To-day three Cubans, charged with rebellion and tried and convicted by a court-martial, are to be shot to death in the Cabanas fortress. When the wives and children of the victims asked for permission to visit them before they met their doom they were refused. They will not be permitted to even have the bodies after death for burial. Of the thirty-two political prisoners now confined in Morro castle it is believed that at least half of them will be condemned to death either by shooting or garroting. Of the other half some will be sent to the penal colony at Ceuta and others to the Isle of Pines. It is not thought that any of them will be released, as it is the object of the authorties to intimidate and terrorize all those who may at heart favor the cause of the insurgents or enlist in their ranks.

Even Women and Children Not Safe.

Nineteen persons, mostly women and children, have been taken to Santiago de Cuba and placed in dungeons in the jail. The charge against them is not known, as the arrest was made by soldiers acting under secret instructions. They were simply seized and carried off to prison. Maceo, the rebel commander, still continues west of the military line extending from Mariel to Majana. Slight attacks at different points and reported. Private advices says that in most cases the insurgents were victorious, but the government colors all reports of engagements to suit its own ends.

From Government Sources.

The government has published the following alleged results of engagements with the enemy: Gen. Ruiz of San Andies de las Villas has captured the camp of the insurgents under Torres, the latter losing seven men killed. A column of Spanish troops near Lajas met an insurgent band and the latter lost nine killed and left behind them six rifles and a quantity of ammunition. A detachment of Spanish troops under Col. Estruch, while skirmishing in the province of Santa Clara, has had a brush with the insurgents, three of whom were killed. Gen. Echevarria has been relieved of his command and is now in this city trying to explain his inaction at the battle of Lechuza to the satisfaction of the captain general. It is understood that he claims to have acted as promptly as possible under the circumstances, and in view of the difficulties offered by the country his column had to traverse. Important letters to Gomez, Maceo, Aguirre and other insurgent leaders show that it is estimated that the loss of property by fire in the district of Artemisa, province of Pinar del Rio alone, is $3,000,000.

American Citizens Arrested.

Alberto Jesus Diaz, a Baptist preacher of Havana, and his brother, Victoriano Diaz, both American citizens, have been arrested on the charge of having in their possession compromising papers referring to the insurrection. The American consul general has reported the case to the state department authorities at Washington.

He went to Berlin with his father in 1860, and was decorated for bravery during the Franco-Prussian war. He came to this country in 1884. He was one of the best known caricaturists in the country.

The Boy Train Wreckers' Trial.

As soon as the case is called the doors to the court house will be locked. The jurors, witnesses and reporters will nearly fill the court house, which will not accommodate more than 300 persons. No women will be admitted.

Reorganization of the Army.

Your Spring clothing

Rather early to speak of it, but if it needs cleaning or dyeing, it isn't too early to have us do that work for you. This is our dull season—our employes are here ready for work. We'd like to have your goods now. We can give them better attention than in the rush of the spring season. Then we'll have to have more time or rush them at the expense of good work. Now we can take our time, do the work better than if hurried and you'll have the clothing all ready for warm weather.

Look in the closet or trunk and find your spring wear that needs cleaning and dyeing and bring it to us now, or better still, our wagon will call for it if you will send us word.

WRONG AND RIGHT EATING.

One Makes Us Weak; The Other Makes Us Strong.

Wrong eating makes us weak, because it dosn t nourish us. It poisons us, because it sets up poisonous fermentation in our stomach and the poisons go into our blood.

Wrong eating is eating indigestible food, or eating more than our stomach is able to digest.

Right eating is eating digestible food, food that the stomach is able to digest, food that will nourish you when it is digested.

Right eating strengthens and invigorates the body, gives endurance, increases weight and restores health.

Wrong eating can be made right by taking the Shaker Digestive Cordial. This preparation, made by the Shakers from simple herbs, roots and wine, is delicious, refreshing and strengthing to the body. It is a powerful aid to digestion.

It does not act by strongly stimulating the stomach, but with its own digestive ferments acts on the food in the stomach, and reduces, instead of increasing, the work which the stomach has to do.

This is why it increases your strength, why it will cure you of all the bad effects of indigestion and of insufficient nourishment, and purifies your system of all dangerous indigestive poisons, when nothing el e has been found to relieve you.

WARMLY WELCOMED

Arrival of the Pennsylvania Defenders at Washington.

MET AT THE STATION BY A HOST

Their Parade to the Hotel Was of a Very Creditable Character—A New Round of Receptions To Be Gone Through To-day.

Washington, April 19.—About all that are left of the Old Guard known as the First Defenders' association of Pennsylvania, the first to arrive in martial array in response to the call for troops at the outbreak of the civil war, arrived in this city last night and received a warm military as well as civil welcome from a host which met them at the railway station and escorted them along Pennsylvania avenue to their uptown hotel headquarters. The parade was of a most creditable character and the veterans as they passed along the route that many of them hardly remembered after the long lapse of years, received honored ovations from crowds that thronged sidewalks to see the troops march by. Arriving at their hotel they met many friends and were received with speeches of welcome and other demonstrations of warm kindness. The itinerary thus far has been one of great interest to the old soldiers, and after a good rest last night, which many of them greatly enjoyed after their long march, they started afresh to-day on a new round of receptions, welcomes, sightseeings and indulgences in reminiscences of war events a third of a century ago.

Boston, April 17.—The fourth and fifth games in the international billiard match were played in Bumstead hall yesterday and each was of the cushion-carrom style, 300 points up. The contestants in the afternoon game were Jake Schaefer and Maurice Daly, both ex-champions. After a series of brilliant shots on each side Schaefer came out victorious, making the required 300 points to Daly's 260. Last evening's game was between Frank Ives and Albert Garnier. A large number of spectators were present and the usual interest was manifested in the plays of the two champions. Ives went out in the fifty-first inning, the score standing: Ives, 300; Garnier, 208. FUR SEAL EXTERMINATION.

Views of the Minority of the Committee Against the Bill.

Washington, April 17. — Senators Sherman and Morgan from the committee on foreign relations, representing the minority report, have presented to the senate their views on the bill to prevent the extermination of the fur seals by ordering their destruction by officers of the government. Mr. Sherman based his opposition on the ground that the proposed destruction of the seals by the United States is a cruel act, not to be justified even though the same result may be brought about by pelagic sealing. The measure proposed is dictated, he says, by apparent spite, because some other power will destroy them in another way. "It is better," Mr. Sherman says, "to take the chances that Great Britain will give to the subject kinder and more generous treatment, and join with the United States in making new regulations to preserve seal life." Senator Morgan's views have heretofore been published.

NOT FOR M'KINLEY

New Jersey Delegates to St. Louis Go Uninstructed.

WILL WORK FOR GARRETT A. HOBART

A Convention Remarkable for Its Harmony—Summary of the Platform—Virginia Republicans Declare for the Ohio Man—Other Conventions.

Trenton, April 17.—The republican state convention held to elect delegates to the St. Louis convention was notable for its enthusiastic character, its harmony, and also its failure to instruct the delegates chosen to vote for McKinley. The sentiment of the convention was undoubtedly in favor of the Ohio man, but the desire of the New Jersey republicans to secure the nomination of Garrett A. Hobart for vice-president of the United States led them to send delegates without instructions. The delegates, through their chairman, Senator Sewall, promised, however, to support McKinley, if that seemed to be to the best interests of the party, and that, whatever Hobart's fate, the party in New Jersey would not be betrayed by its representatives. The platform adopted calls for a protective tariff, the upholding of the Monroe doctrine, recognizing the Cuban insurgents, stricter immigration laws, laws to revive the American ship industry, and the use of gold as money.

McKinley Mass Meeting.

Detroit, April 17.—A McKinley mass meeting, which was attended by 1,000 persons, was held here last night. Gen. Russell A. Alger presided and addresses extolling the Ohio man and his principles of protection were made by ex-Congressmen O'Donnell and Brewer, judge Robt. E. Frazer of the Wayne circuit court, and other local and state politicians. All of the speakers declared that Michigan would send a delegation to St. Louis that would vote for McKinley, first, last and all the time.

One for Reed, One for Allison.

Columbia, S. C., April 17.—The Sixth district republican convention elected G. S. Nettles and Dr. J. H. Levy delegates to the national convention. One is for Reed, the other for Allison.

Instructed for McKinley.

Roanoke, Va., April 17.—The republican convention of the sixth congressional district elected James McLaughlin of Lynchburg, and Everett Sproul of this city to the St. Louis convention to-day. Regular advertisers will confer a great favor if they will bring their changes to The Press office the evening preceding the day they wish their advertisement changed. Changes will not be ensured after 9:30 a. m. for the same day.

A Clay county, Mo., man beat his mule and was fined $35 and costs. Another brute in the same county beat his wife and was fined $3.

Tramps have cost Somerset county $455 for the year past. A good sized wood or stone pile at the county jail would eliminate that item next year.

The Hunterdon Gazette says that New Jersey is as thoroughly Republican today as she was Democratic before her recent political regeneration. Evidently The Gazette editor has not studied the election returns of Tuesday.

The troubles of the successful candidates in towns where elections were held on Tuesday have just commenced. Making promises to get into office and then keeping them after you are in is like eating quail for thirty days—there are few men that can do it.

All was not unity at the Republican State Convention yesterday. A desperate attempt was made to endorse McKinley, and it was only by the snap of Senator Sewell's whip that such action was not taken. Just at present McKinley seems to be the popular idol among the Republicans.

There were several contests in the county caucuses at the Republican State Convention yesterday. One of the principal ones was over the selection of the State Committeeman for Union county. It was the old fight between Foster M. Voorhees and John Kean. The Senator's friends insisted that he should be given the honor, and that Mr. Kean should be dropped from the State Committee. There was some lively hustling among the delegates, but before the vote was cast, it was plain that Mr. Voorhees had little chance of success. Mr. Kean was chosen by a vote of 22 to 11.

NIGHT PROWLERS.

Two Calls For the Police From Private Residences Last Night.

Although Plainfield is not supplied with regular police calls, the telephone forms a very efficient substitute and last night two calls came in. Fred Barker, the night operator at the central office of the telephone company, speedily summoned an officer with his police whistle and the calls were promptly responded to.

One came from a residence on Seventh street. Someone was heard to try the doors and windows, but the midnight prowler disappeared as soon as he heard the occupants of the house move about and the police could find no trace of him. The other call came from the residence of Abner Bartlett, Jr., and two suspicious characters were reported to be prowling about the neighborhood and attempting to enter one of the other houses. A previous attempt on the same house was exclusively mentioned in The Press several weeks ago. Sergeant Kiely detailed an officer to look for the prowlers but they were not to be found when the officer arrived.

Went Up Against a Hard Thing.

While working in the Pond Machine Tool Company's yard last Monday, Patrick Curran walked directly into a drill engine that was standing on the track. He fell and cut himself over the eye. He now has to stand the jokes of his friends, who declare that he tried to butt the engine off the track.

TABLEAU ANNIVERSARY.

the selection of her participants, the collection of accessories, and the grouping of the figures. All of the other tableaux were copies of paintings, while this tableau was the reproduction of a scene as described in Romola, taken from a rare portrait. At the conclusion the curtain was left drawn and the stage fittings presented a charming picture in themselves.

The illustrative readings by Mrs. Robert Lowry added greatly to the enjoyment of the tableaux. Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury was the accompanist. Each tableau was superb in every detail, and several encores were accorded them.

At the conclusion light refreshments were served. Those who received the guests were Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs. L. N. Lovell, Mrs. John Gray Foster, and Mrs. C. L. Goodrich.

SALVATIONISTS VS. VOLUNTEERS.

The Two Organizations Meet and Make Lots of Noise.

Pedestrians and business men on North avenue witnessed an amusing sight last evening about 8 o'clock. It is the habit of the Salvation Army corps to hold an open-air meeting on the vacant lot next to Roberts' livery stable every night at this hour. The handful of Salvationists were singing their hallelujahs, giving up fervent prayers and earnest testimonies, interspersed with which was a liberal amount of noise from the drums and tambourines. They were part way through their open air service when the American Volunteers, who were parading previous to their meeting in Reform Hall, turned into North avenue from Park avenue with a long line of supporters. They, too, had drums, and in addition a cornet, whose shrill blast the Salvationists soon heard. The original followers of the street campaign for sinners at this time were just about to hear a testimony. They realized, however, that the noise of the approaching Volunteers would drown the speaker's voice.

The Army contingent drummers pounded vigorously, the tambourines were thumped harshly and the hallejuahs rang out on the clear night air in a tone that indicated that they were at least going to make as much noise, if not as large numerically, as the Volunteers. The Volunteers marched by, and it was clear to be seen by the expression on their faces that they recognized the ludicrous spectacle presented by the noisy tactics of both organizations. After the Volunteers passed, the Salvationists quieted down and were about to resume their testimonies. But they didn't. The Volunteers only marched to the North Avenue station and there they wheeled about and countermarched back. The Salvationists saw this move and again the noisy demonstration was commenced and continued until the Volunteers had marched by. After this the Salvationists soon ended their meeting in the vacant lot and marched with uplifted heads and unconquered spirit to their quarters. The incident was witnessed by a large number of people who commented on the fact that this was the first time that the two opposing organizations had come together.

Gathering of Secret Societies.

A dime social was held at the residence of Mrs. H. W. Angleman, on East Fourth street last evening, which resulted in much pleasure and profit. There was a very large number of guests present including Sons of Temperance, I. O. O. L.; Rathbone Sisters; I. O. O. F. from New Brooklyn; Daughters of Rebekah; Daughters of Liberty from Elizabeth, Lucetta Council and Old Glory Council of this city. Music and games were the chief amusements and thus a pleasant evening was passed.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THEATRICAL.

William S. Cleveland has evolved another mighty mixture of mammoth shows and has gone himself four times better by organizing a quadruple affair that taxes talent, and sends his salary list up among the pictures. His latest scheme is a four-fold show—a white minstrel show, a black minstrel show, and a troupe of Japanese, and added to all three brass bands to let us know all about it. Adjectives lose their power in speaking of such an amazing aggregation, but a newsboy came pretty near it when he watched the turnout, about eighty strong, parade the streets and ex claimed "Jehosephat!" Well, so long as Billy Cleveland wants to squander his money in this way we are satisfied, and it pleases the public who are by a long odds all the while getting the best of the bargain. All the same it must be aggravating for the manager of Cleveland's Great Show to see so many people turned away, when by proper arrangement in advance the massive combine might quite as easily play in and fill two theatres a night instead of one. The companies are at Music Hall to night.

MEMORIES OF CONKLING.

Some of the Peculiarities of the Great New Yorker.

The Senator Would Permit No Hotel Employe to Knock at His Door—How the German Minister Lost a Rooster.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"When I was a very young man, I used to wait upon Senator Conkling," says an old hotel servant. "I was in the dining-room, and for awhile I was bell-boy in Wormley's hotel. While I was in the dining-room I attended to Senator Conkling during an entire session of congress. He was a very particular man, but he was a very kind man also. I soon learned to know exactly what he wanted, and when I went to the kitchen and gave an order, telling the cook that it was for Senator Conkling, a great deal of care and attention was paid to the order. Of course you know that in hotel kitchens generally the cook and the assistant cooks are very busy and sometimes attend to their work in a careless manner, treating everybody alike as nearly as possible; but when a man of high standing like Senator Conkling is a guest of a hotel they take great care in preparing things in a manner satisfactory to him.

"Senator Conkling was a plain sort of an eater, and he was not very hard to wait upon. In the morning, sometimes before he was dressed, he would call a bellboy and send a written order down to me. He was very fond of shredded codfish on toast with a poached egg on a separate plate. He would take the shredded codfish and toast, place them upon his large plate, and cut them into very fine pieces. Then placing the egg on top of the hash which he had made, he would break the egg and mix it all together. I remember one morning, when he seemed to be particularly pleased with his breakfast, he said to me: 'Jim, there is nothing better for the nerves than codfish; and an egg is very strengthening to a man who works as I do. I learned to make this breakfast for myself when I was a little boy. My mother used to fix it for me, and I have always enjoyed it.'

"Senator Conkling usually had a cup of coffee with his breakfast, but he very seldom drank more than half a cup at a time. He did not use any cream or milk with his coffee, but simply put in a very small lump of sugar. He was very fond of butter, and would not only spread the butter thick upon his bread which he was eating, but would very frequently call for an extra piece, which he would mix in with his codfish, toasted bread and poached egg.

"Senator Conkling never would tell any story about whether he was in the hotel or not. I used to take cards to him, and if he was willing to see anyone he would answer very promptly, but if he was not there would be no response at all. He left an order with me to shove cards under his door and never to knock. If the cards were from persons whom he felt obliged to see, he would open the door and say: 'Tell the gentleman to come up here.' If he did not want to see anybody, he would simply pay no attention to the cards, and I would go back to the hotel office and say that the senator was evidently not in, as he did not respond to my knock; but that I had left the card under his door so that he would get it when he came in. In this way a great many people were kept away from the senator, and he was not obliged to tell any stories or prevaricate.

"Senator Conkling had a standing order that none of the bellboys were to knock at his door at any time. He would not respond to any knocks and did not want to be annoyed. One morning there was a new bellboy who took a card up, and before he went there I told him simply to shove the card under the door and not to knock and annoy the senator. He merely laughed at me and said that he would present the card in his own way. He did so and knocked several times until the senator opened the door and asked him to come in and sit down. He gave the boy a chair and required him to wait there fully 20 minutes until the senator had dressed himself and was ready to come downstairs. He then took the bellboy by the ear, led him down to the hotel office and told the chief clerk that he did not want to be annoyed by that bellboy any more. He also told what he would do with him if he ever came to his room and knocked on the door again. He was a very large and a very strong man, and if the bellboy had offered any resistance Senator Conkling would have probably thrown him down the stairs, because he was in a very angry mood that morning and was particularly annoyed because the bellboy had kept rapping on his door until he was exasperated.

"Senator Conkling never liked to be disturbed by any noises about the hotel. The German minister had a house adjoining the hotel, and kept a very large rooster which annoyed the senator by crowing early in the morning. Senator Conkling never said anything about it to any occasion, just after he had taken h breakfast and was walking to the capitol, he met the German minister who wished him a good morning and hoped he was well. Senator Conkling replied: 'I am feeling very well, thank you, considering the fact that I was kept from sleeping by that miserable game cock you keep under my window.' The German minister apologized, and that afternoon killed his rooster.

"I have seen the senator often when he came down to breakfast besieged by callers who wanted to tell him something before he went into the dining-room. He always pointed to the parlor with one hand, saying: 'You go in there;' and then, pointing with the other hand to the dining-room, he would say: 'I am going in there.' He would not waste any time with them, but went right on in to his breakfast. I have heard men swearing at him, when he left them in that way; and then, when he would come out and go to the parlor to see them, they would greet him with bows and smiles, as though they were coming into the presence of a king.

"Senator Blaine used to stop occasionally at Wormley's, and maybe you don't know how those men hated each other. Sometimes they would meet in the halls, in the parlor, on the stairs or on the elevator; but they never noticed each other. I think that Senator Blaine used to like to go out of his way to meet Senator Conkling in the presence of other prominent people. Mr. Blaine was always smiling and talking to people. Mr. Conkling would always wear a severely dignified look, and would not speak to Mr. Blaine, or to any of the people with Mr. Blaine. Then, after Mr. Conkling had gone away, Mr. Blaine would smile and say: 'It is a pity Conkling is so rude and ungentlemanly;' and the people would agree with Mr. Blaine. In that way, by purposely meeting Mr. Conkling, and making him appear to be rude, I think that Mr. Blaine managed to increase the number of Mr. Conkling's enemies.

"There is one thing, however, that always struck me as singular. Although Senator Conkling was always dignified and severe with public men, he was polite to servants, if they treated him with proper consideration. On the other hand, Mr. Blaine would smile and bow to public men, but he never paid any attention to servants, and did not put himself out to be kind to us. Consequently, the servants all stood in awe of Senator Conkling, but they liked him, too. But, while everybody talked of what a great man Senator Blaine was, the servants did not praise him very much.

"There was one man that always stood on good terms with Senator Conkling, and that was Senator Morton, of Indiana. Those men were almost like brothers. Senator Conkling was never dignfied nor repellant with Senator Morton. I think that he was the only man with whom Senator Conkling ever walked arm in arm about the halls or in the parlor. When he was with Senator Morton and no one else was about, Senator Conkling was a different man. He would talk to Senator Morton, tell stories, and act as other men usually act when in the company of friends. He would laugh out loud when talking to Senator Morton; but he never showed any more animation than to occasionally smile when others were talking to him. He was the most dignified man I have ever known.

"There was another man whom Senator Conkling seemed to like very well, and that was Senator Edmunds, of Vermont. But their ways were very much alike. Both of them were very dignified. They were usually talking very earnestly together, and there was nothing of an jovial nature between them. They were simply prominent senators discussing public affairs in a confidential manner. Senator Edmunds was a large man with a full gray beard and a perfectly bald head.

"There was another public man who often called upon Senator Conkling. He came over from New York frequently, and whenever I shoved his card under the door Senator Conkling instantly responded and told me to bring the gentleman up to his room. It was Chester A. Arthur, and he was collector of customs at New York. I remember his name very well, because he seldom had any engraved cards with him, but always leaned on the hotel counter and wrote his own cards. He was afterwards vice president, and when President Garfield died he became president of the United States.

"Whenever Mr. Arthur went upstairs, Senator Conkling would be waiting for him at the door, give him a cordial welcome, and shut the door. Mr. Arthur used to stay there sometimes until long after midnight. One morning, at about two o'clock, he came down from Senator Conkling's room, and asked for a room for himself, but the hotel was full and he had to go elsewhere to get a bed. He was very cross about it; but it was his own fault. He had not registered nor asked for a room. I guess if they had supposed he would ever be president of the United States, the proprietor would have gladly given up his own room."

MINING CAMP SKETCHES.

How Obscure Localities Are Changed Into Cities.

The Process of Evolution Is the Same in Every Instance—Conditions Peculiar to the Mining Districts of America.

[Special Denver (Col.) Letter.]

The evolution of a mining camp is perhaps one of the strangest and most interesting features of western life. Towns spring up quickly and in the least expected places, like the usual castle in the wilderness to accommodate belated lovers—in fiction. In many instances these towns are as quickly deserted, but not at the command of any lady in white appearing in her ghostly garments. There is not a better object lesson than a deserted mining town—the empty stores and the abandoned mines tell the story of lost fortunes and innumerable hardships and privations in the pursuit of wealth. It also tells of blasted hopes and ruined lives. There are in the west hundreds of deserted towns that were once prosperous. When the mines were worked out, the people stampeded as if from a plague, and good frame residences and brick business houses were left tenantless to decay.

Life in a mining camp or town is more varied and exciting than elsewhere. A mining town of 20,000 population, which is styled a city in the east, is referred to as a camp. The population is also more varied, being composed of people of every grade in life—especially of the immoral and criminal class. No sooner does a wandering prospector discover a rich mine than others flock to his "diggings" like sheep in a panic.

Prospecting is generally done on government land, for, when a mine is located, the locator can get the land at the usual government price for mineral land, whereas, if gold is discovered on private land, the prospector must pay the owner his own price, or get off the "ranch." In the Rocky mountain regions nearly every ranch owner is also a prospector on a small scale. When his crops are "laid by" and he has nothing else to do, he goes out and digs for gold. Many of them make "spending money" by this extra work. One out of many "strikes it rich," when he throws aside his farming implements, stakes off a number of claims for himself and sells others to the incoming tide of prospectors. A town is then staked off, and, of course, is named for the lucky rancher. The lots at claims are each sold at from $50 to $200 or more, and the plodding rancher is now wealthy; is perhaps elected mayor, and given the honorary title of colonel. Within a few weeks the ranch is a lively camp, dotted with hundreds of tents and board houses called "shacks," and for three or four miles in each direction shafts are being sunk for gold. In the center of the district is the town, or "acmp," so-called because no one lives there—they only are camping, and no one intends to remain—after he has made the fortune he expects to get.

There are numerous instances in Colorado, and several during the present boom, where ranches have been turned into populous camps of several thousand people, with electric lights, opera houses, and gambling houses, and all within a few weeks. Yet, in the greater number of instances, the towns are the outgrowth of mines located by prospectors on government lands. In each case, however, the development of the town is by the same process, excepting perhaps that the rancher becomes rich by selling his lands and organizing a town, while the prospector is frequently swindled out of his location by adverse claimants, who allege prior discovery, and often prove it by perjured testimony of confederates.

While working a claim the prospector lives in a "dug-out"—a hole in the ground, curbed as a cistern, the roof being on a level with the ground, through which is a small door. When he strikes a bonanza, and the crowd flocks in, a mass meeting is called, a mining district is formed and a town staked off. The first public improvement decided upon is a saloon; next a hotel is considered; a mayor is elected, and the man with the greatest reputation as a killer is elected as "city marshal." It is soon seen that his office is not a sinecure. In a few days the usual country store is opened, then a blacksmith shop, and, of course, several gambling dens and the usual dance hall. In the first stages of the camp's life the houses are tents.

As the camp gives indications of solidity "shacks" are put up, and, with increased prosperity and firmness, frame dwellings of a more substantial nature, and even brick houses, are constructed. Before it reaches this metropolitan stage, however, the camp passes through a purifying ordeal of vigilance committees and a thinning out of the refuse element, male and female. When the camp is young and its existence uncertain, the rough element rules, though not always in the majority. As it becomes more prosperous, property becomes more insecure by the numerous robberies of the tough element. A few aggravated murders or incendiary fires lead to the formation of a vigilance committee and the purifying process begins. This is the history of every mining camp in the west of any considerable importance, and the history of others also which are now inhabited only by the graves of the outlaws who were hanged by vigilantes.

When a district is very prosperous there is the usual town site rivalry. Each "gulch" or mountain wants a town and a separate individuality. So that within a district of 12 miles square, Cripple Creek, for example, there are as many towns. Then they begin to fight, each trying to incorporate the other, and frequently there is bloodshed. The town site fights are instigated by real estate boomers, politicians who want office and lawyers who want litigation. The real business men (mine owners) do not want a town, and would wipe out all of the saloons and other resorts of that nature.

Adventuresses, elocutionists, "French teachers," and even teachers of dancing flock to the camps and do a land-office business in teaching deportment to the new rich, who abandon their old ways and attempt to lead a life for which they are unfitted, and cannot be acquired. The ranchman or the prospector who has developed into a millionaire at once moves into the city. He is too good to be a farmer, and as he generally has a family he moves the entire brood into the city and employs a corps of teachers to fit them for society. Their old associates are tabooed, and after awhile the west becomes too small, and they flock to New York or to Europe—and are laughed at.

Being located without reference to commercial advantages, the life of the average mining camp is short. Only when immensely rich mines are discovered does the camp grow into a city and bring commerce and railroads to it, instead of going to them. While 5,000 or 10,000 miners are at work, each receiving three dollars a day, the city is lively—the gambling houses, saloons and low resorts getting the larger portion of the large pay-roll. Add to this the speculators who buy worthless mines from sharpers, and the transient element that flock in and drop out, but not until after spending no trifling sum, for living is high, both as to altitude and price. Business is more overdone in a mining camp than elsewhere.

Everyone thinks that he can easily pick up a fortune where there is so much gold, and nearly everyone is disappointed. Life is also uncertain, not so much from the rough element as from sickness and whisky. The high altitude is a region of perpetual winter, snow and rain. The life is naturally an exciting one, and whether prosperous or the reverse whisky is taken as a stimulant or to quiet the nerves, which are usually at fever heat.

Summing up all this, from a financial standpoint, it is doubtful whether mining is profitable, generally speaking. When one man becomes a millionaire several millions become impoverished. There is more money lost at mining than is gained, taking all of the camps as a whole. The world hears only of the very rich camps—like Cripple Creek, Leadville and the now almost abandoned Virginia City. These camps produced millions upon millions, and evolved day laborers, saloon keepers, boarding-house keepers and washerwomen into millionaires, United States senators and would-be social leaders. But the world does not hear of the other mining camps throughout the west where fortunes are lost in delving for hidden wealth. As in the trades and professions, the successful are heard of—the millions of plodders are unknown.

DON CARLOS' AMBITION.

Bourbon Prince Would Like to Be King of Spain.

Unless the War in Cuba Comes to a Close Very Soon a Revolution in Spain Is Unavoidable—The Don's Little Game.

In the best of the Vienna cafes one may see a gentleman of a decided Spanish Bourbon type. He is of low stature, has very heavy jaws and chin, a thick black mustache now slightly tinged with gray, is dressed always in quiet black, wearing a silk hat and carrying a silver-headed cane. He is an embodiment of Spanish courtesy and dignity. He is now 48 years of age, and though he makes his home in a quiet street in Austria's capital, where he spent much of his youth, he often visits Venice and London, being as much at home in the latter city as elsewhere.

This man is Don Carlos, duke of Madrid, and a pretender to the Spanish throne under the title of Charles VII. For a number of years he lived in Paris, where, next to Madrid, he naturally felt most at home. In 1881 he was charged with conspiracy with the Duc de Chambode to promote the latter's ambtion for the French throne, and was expelled from Paris. He used to be seen at the horse-racing in the Bois de Boulogne, and the story is told that he put up stakes against Louis Napoleon, and often beat the latter as judge of a horse's wind.

Don Carlos would be of no particular public interest at this moment but for the fact that persons both in and out of Spain believe that there is some sort of a political crisis impending that the Spaniards will soon be called upon to face. This belief was accentuated by Marshal Campos' departure from Cuba after his failure to suppress the insurrection. If the insurrection continues for a few months longer, the Spanish government must levy a high war tax upon its home people to continue the struggle. It is believed, and with some reason, that this strain will break the camel's back, for the government would have to summon an army to collect this tax from a people taxed to despair, and a revolution would follow.

In the event of a revolution, which may not come, but which is slightly more than a possibility, there appear three players on the Spanish political chessboard—the present monarchy, the republicans and the Carlists.

Spain in its three years as a republic was a notorious failure. It was as bad as anything of the kind ever set up in South or Central America. The Spanish people are scarcely more fitted by nature and education for a republican form of government than the Chinese or Ashantees. Emilio Castelar, their most distinguished republican of a few years ago, has lapsed into monarchism, if reports of him are to be credited. In case of a revolution there is a chance that an ambitious man who could gather a strong force might set up a republic, but it would be knocked down in a few hours like a tenpin, for the reason that the Spanish masses worship monarchy of the absolute character, as they have always done.

Since 1876, when Alfonso XII. mounted the throne, reestablished on the shattered hopes of the republicans, Don Carlos has not lifted his finger publicly for his own cause in Spain. It is difficult to make any estimate of the strength of his adherents in Spain now. If Isabella had been a respectable sovereign he would, perhaps, have never made an effort to gain a crown that by the old Spanish laws of inheritance he thought himself entitled to. He never recognized his cousin Isabella as queen.

The first armed adventure of Don Carlos, says the Illustrated American, started in 1872, on the soil of Navarre, just over the Spanish frontier. It was so much like an adventure of Don Quixote that all Spain laughed—both friends and enemies. When this modern Don appeared, several thousand of his enthusiastic adherents gathered, many of them armed with only pitchforks, axes and clubs. Don Carlos himself had a very beautiful pistol, given to him by a friend in Paris. He had come to gain his crown or die, and the first man that got in front of him to shield him from the enemy would be shot with that pistol. He appeared to be so "dead game" that his friends begged him to take care of himself, for without him his cause would be lost.

Soon after crossing the border the Carlists met the government troops, and the first volley from their chassepots sent the invaders hurrying in all directions, Don Carlos flying before his own men and as completely disappearing from the world as if the earth had opened and swallowed him.

But he was never a coward. The next year he issued another manifesto and again appeared on the frontier. The Catalonian mountaineers joined him in great force. Arms were smuggled to them, and soon he had a formidable army. It was in this war that Marshal Campos developed as the first soldier of Spain, and it was principally due to his genius that Don Carlos failed to put on the crown of his father.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Frank Schoonmaker, of the Hotel Netherlands, New York, has purchased a Cleveland Swell Special of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The factories of the Western Wheel Works at Chicago are now turning out 450 Crescents a day, running twenty-two out of twenty-four hours, and employing 1,800 men.

The new road books of the New York Division will be ready for delivery about May 1st. It is said to be one of the most complete ever gotten out. The description of the New Jersey roads of this section was arranged by Thomas A. Cuming, of this city.

Miss Nash, of Prospect avenue, while riding her wheel through Elmwood place Wednesday afternoon, met with an accident. Her front wheel caught in a rut, which resulted in throwing her off. The wheel was considerably damaged, though the rider escaped.

The present season in cycling, says the American Cyclist, is remarkable for its great number of novices. Every department has its tyros in numbers hitherto unapproached. There are more new makers, dealers and riders than were ever seen before at a season's opening.

Petitions addressed to the National Racing Board of the L. A. W. are being circulated in St. Louis, New York, Chicago and Springfield, Mass., asking for the reinstatement of L. D. Cabanne to good standing as a racing man, and the removal of the ban of suspension placed on him by the Board for his connection in the famous Titus-Cabanne-Murphy conspiracy case.

A man by the name of Cox, who is employed by the Western Wheel Company, stopped off here yesterday on his way from Chicago to New York to see the Crescent Oval, where he expects to race this summer. He made the trip from Chicago here on a seventeen pound Crescent wheel which had held him up without accident so far.

The events for the Decoration Day race meet of the Crescent Wheelmen will probably be: One mile novice, amateur: two-third mile scratch, amateur; one-half mile cratch, professional; one mile handicap, open only to members who have never ridden in a race before; one mile handicap, amateur; one mile handicap, professional. This list is subject to revision.

Owing to a marked increase in business Frank L. C. Martin, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, feels compelled to resign from the command of the Century run which takes place June 13th. He will, however, act as pacemaker from this city to Princeton. Mr. Martin was the originator of this annual run, and his declination will be a source of regret to all interested.

The race committee of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs which has charge of the Irvington-Milburn road race is considering the advisability of limiting the entries coming from the metropolitan district to members of those clubs belonging to the association. Riders from outside the district, however, will not be affected by this ruling should the scheme go through.

The most important announcement to the cycling world this week is the line of the National racing circuit. Plainfield is also quite interested, as she is included in the circuit. The circuit starts at Oakland, Cal., on May 1st, and slowly follows a course through Arizona, Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri and Illinois, reaching there at the end of June. July is spent among that and neighboring States. August will find the followers of the circuit working their way eastward. August 20th is assigned as the date of the first New York State meet at Niagara Falls. The early part of September will be spent in the New England States, and then on September 19th, New York city will hold her big meet. Next comes Brooklyn, and on September 26th Plainfield will have a National circuit meet. Trenton is scheduled for October 1st and the circuit winds up at Washington October 17th.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The Upper Montclair, N. J., Athletic Association has decided to have field day sports on Decoration Day.

George P. Smith, of the High School athletic team, went to New York this morning to take part in the games of the Trinity School at Berkley Oval, New York, which are being held this afternoon.

New Brunswick is not likely to see a college crew on the Raritan af er all, as the expected revival of rowing at Rutgers College will probably be abandoned, owing to the difficulty in collecting the necessary funds.

Seely Edsall has just completed a contract by which he will handle Wright & Ditson's tennis goods in the sporting department of his Commercial Palace. He will keep a complete stock on hand and will be able to fill orders promptly.

LAWN TENNIS.

Albert P. Simmonds and Thomas U. Smith will begin outdoor practice for the coming tennis season on Saturday at T. U. Smith's court on Westervelt avenue.

The season for lawn tennis is now approaching, and the men are now working on the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and it is expected that one of the courts will be ready by tomorrow. The interest in golf is very strong this year, but the young men, who like more vigorous exercise, look with pleasure toward the coming tennis season. Some very good players from New York will participate in several of the contests this season.

GOLF.

A handsome cup has been presented to the Princeton Golf Club, which will be contested for in a series of handicap games in May.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

It is very probable that no more match games will be bowled by the Plainfield Catholic club.

—Counselor W. K. McClure is moving to his new offices in the First National Bank building.

—Justice Newcorn has issued a summons in the contract case of Codington against Conroy, which is returnable April 24th.

—A magic lantern entertainment will be given in the Grace P. E. church Sunday-school room by the Boys' Department of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew this evening. The admission is ten cents.

We might tell you more about One Minute Cough Cure, but you probably know that it cures a cough. Everyone does who has used it. It is a perfect remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness It is an especial favorite for children, being pleasant to take and quick in curing. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

SHE DIDN'T WANT HIM.

BUT THE ITALIAN HUSBAND PERSISTED AND WAS ARRESTED.

The Wife Did All the Work and Earned the Money and the Husband Was Anxious to Have the Benefits Thereof.

Two natives of sunny Italy were the principal characters in a case in police court this morning. It was a family affair. The husband was the offender. His name was Dominick Vetrilio and his home has been in "Paradise Alley," known on the city map as Cottage place. Neitheir the husband nor the wife were particularly efficient in the art of speaking English, so Miss Marguiteuer, a friend of the family, was sworn in as interpreter. Vetrilio was charged with being disorderly at the home of his wife, and pleaded not guilty. They have been living apart for sometime and day before yesterday the husband went to the house where his wife was staying.

Through the interpreter, Mrs. Vetrilio said that she didn't want her husband in the house, but that he persisted in coming in to do some cooking. He does not support her and she takes care of herself and children by taking in washing. He had often beaten her, so she said, and about three months ago gave her a black eye. Mrs. Vetrilio was a quiet woman and it was apparent that all she wanted was to be let alone.

The prisoner was an excitable little man and could scarcely sit still while the trial was going on. His version was that he just wanted to go in the house to cook his soup, but she would not allow him to stay, and told him to go to his own house and cook on his own stove. Then the husband had become excited and done those things which he ought not to have done.

The judge decided that Vetrilio was guilty and ordered him to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for thirty days.

Vetrilio had previously told the judge that he wanted to go to jail. The prospect was not quite as alluring as it had been and been, and the excited Italian, whose command of English had suddenly come back, begged with tears running down his cheeks that he be allowed to pay the fine at the rate of $2 a week. Meanwhile Mrs. Vetrilio quietly left the courtroom and returned to her washing.

MISSED A RICH WIDOW.

"Father" Noah Roby Broods Over His One Great Mistake.

Noth Roby, an inmate of the Piscataway Poor Farm, claims to be one hundred and twenty-four years old, and tells many stories that go towards substantiating his claim. He is withered, bent, and sightless, but still speaks and thinks clearly. He says the two mistakes of his whole life were his failure to propose to a rich widow, and his leaving the navy for a New Jersey farm. Several people seventy years old, are said to remember Noah as an old man when they were children.

An Error Saved Him.

An unsuccessful effort was made yesterday in the Court of Chancery at Newark, to have Josiah Brown, secretary of the American Tobacco Company, who resides in Plainfield, punished for contempt of court, but an error in the subpœna with which he was served probably saved him.

Of High Art.

The Art exhibition at the Camera club rooms is not a photographic show, but one of a high art standard such as can only be seen in large cities, indeed it is the metropolitan museum of art on a reduced scale, and all lovers of art in our city should not fail to render it their hearty support and co-operation.

A Big Arcanum Event.

The committee which has charge of the meeting of the Grand Council of the Royal Arcanum at Cranford next month expects to make it one of the greatest events of Cranfords history. There will be special trains run from the large cities of the state to its meeting during its ten-day session.

The Bishop to be Here.

Bishop Scarborough will be in this city tomorrow. In the morning he will be at the Grace church, in the afternoon at the Holy Cross, and in the evening at the St. Stephen's church.

A Sure Sign of Summer.

The first of the Sunday-school excursions to Asbury Park to be announced is that of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church which will go on Tuesday August 4th.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

NOTHING DEFINITE YET.

The Meeting of Those Interested in the Proposed Hospital Adjourned.

The meeting of those interested in the proposed homeopathic hospital, held at the home of E. B. Clark, on Crescent avenue, last night, was not largely attended and adjournment was taken to an indefinite time. The threatening weather and the fact that a number of the supporters of the the movement were out of town accounted for the small attendance. The following physicians were present. Doctors H. H. Lowrie, D. C. Adams, T. S. Davis, Frank M. Hallock and O. L. Jenkins.

It is learned that the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg hospital are considering an amendment of the constitution permitting homeopathic doctors as well as other schools of practictioners an entrance into the hospital to take charge of such patients as may desire their presence. The matter will come up for discussion and action at a meeting to be held Monday, April 27th.

Whether this will be accepted to the homeopathic physicians will remain a question for the future to decide. Some of the homeopathic physicians express their desire to take steps to lease a house as a hospital and dissensary, believing that the time is up for such a step.

The Press is desirous of obtaining expression of opinion pro and con and will be glad to open its columns to the citizens of Plainfield who desire to agitate the matter.

GROVE STREET INPROVEMENTS.

Many Citizens Are Beautifying Their Homes on That Thoroughfare.

In the spring when "a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," the householders fancy, as naturally turns to thoughts of improvements. This fancy is indicated on Grove street by the following changes in the exteriors of homes: Miss Holton, corner of Lincoln place, is putting an addition to the southern rear side of her home; James Parker, corner of Mercer avenue, is making an extension to the northern side of his house; Mrs. Mitchell has removed the front fence from her yard; a hedge is being set in front of Mr. Grant's residence, corner of Park place, which will be extended past the vacant lot next, making a continuous hedge on the west side from Mercer avenue to Park place.

To Adopt the Funeral Benefit.

Miantonomoh Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., met last evening and received four propositions for membership. A very interesting discussion, pro and con, followed in regard to the Funeral Benefit Association, and the members decided by a unanimous vote to go into the association. The following members were appointed as a committee to make the necessary amendment to the by-laws so as to conform to the association: Wm. Newcorn, Charles Holstein, N. C. Mague, J. A. Karet and David Mourning.

No Quorum Present.

The adjourned meeting of the borough council failed to materialize last evening, owing to the fact that no quorum was present. Councilmen Lounsbury, Schutt and McLaughlin and Clerk Arnold were visible, as was also Corporation Counsel Chas A. Reed and the Watchung avenue commissioners. The latter were ready to make their report, but they were not given an opportunity. The next meeting will be held Friday evening, May 1st.

The Superintendent Here.

W. H. Peddle, Superintendent of the New Jersey Division of the Central railroad, was in Plainfield yesterday looking at the new freight house. He expressed himself as being much pleased with it and thought it would be an excellent improvement. The building will probably be ready for occupancy about the middle of May. The old freight house may be taken away soon afterward, but the erection of a passenger station in its place will probably be done next year.

Rev. Mr. Van Cleave Resigns.

Rev. Benjamin G. VanCleave, pastor of the Main Street Presbyterian church, at Milford, Hunterdon county, N. J., has tendered his resignation, to take effect May 31st. Rev. VanCleave's resignation is due to continued ill-health. He has been in failing health for the past year. This announcement to his congregation was received with regret. He became pastor in May, 1889.

Their First Anniversary.

Lucetta Council, Daughters of Liberty, will celebrate their first anniversary Wednesday evening, April 22d, at which time the contest between the above council and Pride of the Juniors Council, Newark, will be settled. The contest is to determine which is the best team. Several National and State officers will be present.

A PROSPEROUS CHURCH.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS MADE ABOUT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

A Little Pleasure Was Combined With the Business—The Amount Raised for Congregational Purposes Was $6,144.56.

The consistory of Trinity Reformed church tendered a social to the members of the church and congregation last evening. The threatening weather no doubt kept many away, but the attendance was large enough to comfortably fill the room. After arriving, the people formed into groups and chatted until the business part of the meeting was brought up by the reading of the treasurer's report of the church for the year past by Robert Clark, Sr. A report was also read by the various secretaries of the Christian Endeavor society, Junior C. E. society, King's Daughters, Ladies Work society, and Rev. Cornelius Schenck reported on the spiritual condition of the church. Each report read was a very gratifying one and showed what a vast amount has been accomplished during the past year.

The amount raised during the year for congregational purposes was $6,144,56 and for benevolent purposes $1,573.96. These figures embrace all reports from branches of the church work. The membership of the church consists of 250 families; total members in communion, 535; received into membership during the past year, 36. The Sunday-school numbers 375. The Christian Endeavor society numbers 136, and the Junior Christian Endeavor society 82.

At the conclusion of the reports, George L. Van Emburgh made a few remarks in which he spoke of the work which had been accomplished during the year and added that there was no church where such a feeling of equality and friendliness existed among the members in a greater degree than it did at Trinity. Mr. Van Emburgh closed his remarks with prayer.

Robert Meeker, as chairman of the committee in charge, then invited all to stay and partake of refreshments. The good things were served by the gentlemen of the consistory and general sociability reigned.

The sociable was a novel affair in itself, it being about the first to be held in this city. Heretofore the reports have been made at prayer meetings, but this year the consistory endeavored to add a little pleasure to the business. The committee in charge consisted of Robert Meeker, chairman, George L. Van Emburgh and F. S. Cutter.

RUSHING THE WORK.

Twenty-Four Hundred Feet of Track Laid in Two Days.

Work on the West Fourth street extension of the street railway is progressing very rapidly at present. The contractors have only been working on that branch two days, not including today, and last night had completed the track from Grant avenue to about one hundred feet east of Plainfield avenue, a distance of about 2,400 feet. The remaining portion, about 2,700 feet, Superintendent Yarnell estimate will be completed by Wednesday night at least. Work will then be begun on the Dunellen branch.

Beauty's Bane.

The charm of a pretty face is in no way more easily affected than by the use of misfit glasses, or the straining of eyes that need artificial aid. Either of these conditions will produce furrows that will go far to destroy the beauty of the loveliest face. As a precaution against the possibility of this result a prompt examination of the eyes is advisable. Such examinations are free to you at Colliers, 103 Park avenue.

An Ancient Agreement.

Harrison Coddington, of the borough, owns quite an ancient agreement. It is dated "february the 10 in the ye. 1793." It is between Gideon Allen and "Henery" Allen on one part and David Allen on the other, and is for the sale of a tract of land for five shillings. The paper is of an old-fashioned kind, almost like parchment.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

A HEARTBROKEN WIFE.

MRS. LYONS TELLS A PITIFUL STORY IN THE CITY COURT.

Her Husband Would Not Support Her and Left Her to Shift for Herself—He Finally Returns by Order of the Court.

Tears flowed freely at the city court room this morning when an unhappy couple had to have their family troubles settled by the city. Patrick Lyons was charged by the Overseer of the Poor with refusing to support his family. He pleaded not guilty. His wife appeared in court carrying a wee baby and between her sobs told a pitiful story. Last Saturday, she said, he told her he was not going to support her any longer and that she would have to support herself. He gave her, however, seven cents with which she procured enough food and fuel to keep her and the children from starving. His mother, who was a hard-working woman, had given part of her scanty wages to support Mrs. Lyons.

"He told me he'd keep me in misery all my life," sobbed Mrs. Lyons, "and he couldn't make me more miserable than I am now."

Lyons listened to the testimony of his wife without a word and when the the Judge asked him his reason for neglecting his wife and he said that she was lazy and would not get up and work. She was not starving anyhow, he said, as his mother looked after her. Mrs. Lyons then went on to tell how he went off to attend fairs and the like where he made plenty of money but when he returned home it was all gone.

"What are you going to do?" asked the Judge.

Guess I'll support her," was the stolid answer, "suppose I'll have to."

The Judge then waked the prisoner out of his lethargy by giving him such a "hauling over the coals," as he had not received for many a day. Lyons was held in $200 bail on his own reconizance to support his wife which he promised to do.

PROMISED AND WERE LET OFF.

Eight Youngsters Arrested for Malicious Mischief at Netherwood.

For some time the police have been looking for a gang of boys that have been playing havoc in the barns of the Hotel Netherwood. Windows and sashes have been smashed and someone deliberately removed the panes of glass from some of the windows with a knife. Last Sunday, Roundsman Fredrickson saw a number of boys about the barn and investigated. Some were throwing stones at the barn and several were trying to pull the shingles off the roof. When the boys saw the officer, they fled, but the officer finally learned who they were and they were arrested.

This moring eight of them, Doty, Stevens, Andy Benford, Fred Ammon, Fred Fleming, Frank Drakes, Charles Miller, Harry Drake and a colored boy named William Parsons, were arrainged before City Judge DeMeza. Several of them, especially the colored lad, did not enjoy their position and promised to "never do so no more," so the Judge severely reprimanded them and suspended sentence.

Use of the Bible.

At the meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union next Monday afternoon the subject will be "Use of the Bible." Mrs. Harold Serrell will conduct the devotional exercises, while Mrs. G. H. Batchelor and Mrs. Powlison will have charge of the lesson. All those interested in the union are cordially invited.

Better Pay Your Taxes.

Now is the time to pay your taxes unless you want your name advertised. The Delinquent Tax Collector has had a list sent to him to publish, and those wishing their names taken off the list had better see E. H. Bird, 186 East Front street, before the same are published. He can be seen at any time.

Saw Stereopticon Views.

The Boy's Branch of the St. Andrew Brotherhood of Grace P. E. church and their friends enjoyed a very interesting exhibition of views from all parts of the country, in the chapel of the church last evening. Welles Taylor, of Park avenue, gave the exhibition. An encouraging sum was realized from the entertainment.

Charged With Using Indecent Language.

Mrs. Kate Schuck was arraigned before City Judge De Meza this morning on the charge of using indecent and profane language on West Sixth street. She asked for an adjournment as her counsel could not be present and the Judge set the case down for next Saturday morning.

State President of the A. P. A.

J. M. Rockafellow, of Washington, N. J., publisher of The American Advocate, was Thursday elected State president of the American Protective Association of New Jersey.

BIG FIRE AT CRANFORD.

Factory of the Law Battery Company Burned to the Ground.

The factory of the Law Battery Company, one of the principal industries of Cranford, was totally destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning. It was at 11:50 o'clock last night when the engineer at the watering tank of the Central Railroad at Cranford, which is near the factory, noticed a flickering flame leaping up alongside of the factory. He quickly gave the alarm and the hose and hook and ladder companies responded with as much alacrity as volunteer firemen usually do. Before they could get to the conflagration, however, the flames had got too much headway, and with their limited facilities for fire-fighting they were unable to save the factory or an adjoining residence. They did succeed, though, in saving several other residences and a lumber yard nearby. The firemen did not stop their work until 3 o'clock this morning.

The factory was a story-and-a-halt frame building and was filled with valuable machinery. Between twenty-five and thirty men were employed there in the manufacture of medical appliances. The factory was owned by New York capitalists, and was insured. The occupants of the dwelling house that was burned lost all their household goods. The origin of the fire is thought to have been of an incendiary nature. The loss is estimated at between $10,000 and $12,000.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Miss Loretto Flanagan Celebrates Her Twelfth Anniversary.

A very pleasant time was passed last evening at the home of Miss Loretto Flanagan on West Fifth street. Miss Flanagan is the daughter of Patrolman and Mrs. P. J. Flanagan and the occasion which brought so many young people together was the twelfth anniversary of the young lady's birthday. From 7:30 to 10:30 the hours passed too quickly, as all present enjoyed themselves greatly. Refreshments were served, after which games, singing, dancing, and musical selections on the piano were indulged in. The hostess was the recipient of many handsome presents. When the guests departed for their respective homes, they expressed themselves as having had a fine time and wishing the young lady many happy returns of the day.

Among those present were the Misses Jennie Summers, Lizzie Guinee, May Townley, Annie Galbraith, Mamie Whalen, Mamie Brady, Clara Flynn, Lizzie Day, Ada Westphal, Nellie Walsh, Mamie Higgins, Mamie Burke, Maggie Burke, Janie Conneely, Helen Lynch, Dottie Casey, Margie DeCourcy and Cathie Moynihan.

Objected to Being Arrested.

James Emmons was arrested on Front street last evening by Patrolman McCue for being drunk and disorderly. He resisted the officer, but was finally conveyed to the lock-up. He pleaded not guilty to being disorderly, in the police court this morning, but admitted that he resisted arrest. Judge DeMeza sentenced him to go to jail for twenty days or pay a fine of $10. He chose the former.

Milkmen in a Combine.

Seventy-five milkmen of Essex and Union counties have organized for mutual protection. They complain that a concern in Newark to cut rates and supply milk at six cents a quart, was recently formed, two cents less than the dairymen have been selling it. This concern sells wholessle and retail. A meeting will be held at Irvington next week to decide upon action.

A Game Warden.

Gov. Griggs has appointed John D. Smith, Freeholder from Jefferson Township, Fish and Game Warden of Morris County in place of Robert Richards, whose term expires next month.

From Around the World.

Ernest R. Ackerman and wife returned from their trip around the world this noon. They crossed the Atlantic on the steamer Campania. They report a most delightful trip.

—A meeting of the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held last night when it was decided that a social should be held in the near future to be arranged by the men only.

THE WOMEN IN CHARGE.

A NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT AND SUPPER AT MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

Every Detail of the Affair Was Looked After by the Gentler Sex—Their Originality Made it an Enjoyable Event.

According to the good old custom, leap year is the time when the young women have a chance to try their hand, and as 1896 is that eventful year the young women of the Monroe Avenue chapel determined it was time to assert their rights.

The Young Men's Association has been giving most of the entertainments at the chapel and so the young women decided to give one that would far outshine any previous efforts. This charming leap year affair took place place last evening under the title of a "Conundrum Supper."

The supper was served in the long alcove at one side of the chapel. Tables were charmingly arranged here while the soft light from several handsome banquet lamps placed on the tables made the room appear all the more pleasing. The new hangings also added to the effect. When the guests had seated themselves, the fair waitresses presented them with a strange menu. Each article was named by a conundrum, and the patrons of this "Conundrum Supper" had to guess of what their repast should consist.

The names on the menu, with their translations, were as follows: A cold towel, coffee; New England brains, baked beans; an unruly member, tongue; one who embarked in the ark, ham; tid bits from a fashionable watering place, Saratoga chips; a girl's name with an Ad, salad; what a woman most needs, bread; food of the spinning wheel, rolls; Boston's overthrow, tea; fruit of the vine, vinegar; tabby's party, catsup; spring's offering, water; celestial pabulum, angel cake; nuts without shells, doughnuts; ivory manipulators, lady fingers; what I do when I see a mouse, ice-cream; tropical dainties, oranges and bananas.

The kitchen, from which this wonderful meal was served, was presided over by the Misses Georgia Beekman, Florence Burt and Hattie King, while the waitresses were the Misses Grace King, Kittie Ackerman, Edith L. Burt, Mary Beekman, Lizzie Foster, Annie Stafford, Minnie Whitley and Bertha Wenzel.

The supper lasted from 6 to 8 o'clock, and then the assembled guests adjourned to the main room of the chapel where an entertainment was held. They were shown their seats by the charming ushers, while those that came only to the entertainment found young women at the ticket table and young women at the door. The ushers were the Misses Berth Helena LaRue, Amy G. Burt, and Charlotte Beekman. The tickets were sold by the Misses Kate Apgar and May Pound, while the Misses Leora Wenzel and Charlotte Aldrich collected the tickets at the door.

The entertainment was a delightful one and, despite the August weather, everybody had a good time. Miss Florence Burt announced the different numbers on the programme, which were as follows: Overture, "Golden Sceptre," Schubert Orchestra; vocal solo, "Past and Future," Miss Jessie Haynes; recitation, Miss Addie Parker Jackson; piano solo, Miss Charlotte Aldrich; waltz, "Mandolin Serenade," Schubert Orchestra; cornet solo, "In Happy Moments," Mrs. J. D. Anderson; recitation, Miss Jackson; piano trio, "Faust," Mrs. J. H. Buckley, and the Misses Nelson and Day; vocal solo, Miss Jessie Haynes; march, "Broadway," Schubert Orchestra.

Miss Jackson's selections were especially enjoyed; they were all new and her delightful manner of giving them added much to their excellence. Her description of a fishing party of young ladies kept the audience shouting with laughter while the story of how little Frantz won the violin was full of pathos. The Schubert Orchestra of Dunellen and New Market, led by Mrs. J. H. Buckley, was very good, while all the other selections were rendered in an excellent manner.

After the programme had been concluded, there was another rush for the refreshment rooms and the remaining good things speedily disappeared.

Too much credit cannot be given to the committee of young women who so successfully planned and carried out this charming affair. The committee consisted of Miss Florence Burt, chairman, and the Misses Leora Wenzel, Georgia Beekman, Hattie King and Charlotte Aldrich.

Boys in a Bad Way.

Four lads came up before City Judge DeMeza this morning on the charge of calling names and building bonfires on West Fourth street. They all owned up to the offense, and after a severe reprimand, the Judge suspended sentence on them.

MAY SNUB GEN. LEE

His Appointment as Consul to Havana Displeases the Spaniards.

A RUSE OF PRESIDENT CLEVELAND'S

They Believe His Secret Instructions Will Be To Examine and Report the Condition of the Rebellion on the Island.

Havana, April 15, via Tampa, Fla., April 18.—The appointment of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee to succeed Consul General Williams is understood by Americans here as well as by the authorities at the palace as an adroit way of sending a military commissioner from the United States to Cuba. When there was an intimation a fortnight ago that Mr. Cleveland contemplated sending a commission here to learn officially what was going on, the officials at Madrid said very plainly that no military or other commission would be accepted by them or permitted to pry into affairs in Cuba. There is therefore some curiosity as to how Gen. Lee will be received and as to what facilities will be accorded him for learning what is transpiring outside of the city of Havana. The Spanish officials will not commit themselves on the subject, but Spanish merchants are open in declaring that Gen. Lee's appointment is only a ruse of President Cleveland to get a military representative on the island to report the condition of affairs as viewed by a soldier of experience, and there is every indication that Gen. Lee's reception by the officials will be exceedingly chilly.

Why He Is Objectionable.

It goes without saying that American residents will welcome Gen. Lee with open arms. He will not be long in discovering that a state of war exists in Cuba, that it is an army and not a mob of bandits who are winning battles against the troops of Spain, that life is respected on one side and prisoners of war set free, while on the other a war of extermination against all Cubans is waged, prisoners of war are shot, unarmed peasants are shot and cut to pieces, and political suspects are imprisoned by thousands. He will learn that Spain is powerless to protect American property throughout the island; that millions of dollars worth of property belonging to our citizens has been destroyed, and the prospect of recompense is as shadowy as castles in Spain. He will hear of Americans who have been shot down by Spanish troops, and will find others imprisoned in dungeons with no prospect of trial or release.

THE WAR IN CUBA.

Insurgent Camps Destroyed — Reports Given Out by the Government.

Havana, April 18.—Reports from columns of troops who have been operating for several days against Maceo have been received. According to these the troops destroyed a number of camps that the rebels had been compelled to abandon, and pursued portions of Maceo's forces further west in the province of Pinar del Rio. The troops had one officer and five soldiers wounded and a corporal sunstruck. Maceo was said to be near Lechusa, the scene of the recent defeat of the Spanish troops Thursday. Col. Elolu and the guerrilla of San Domingo report that they have attacked groups of rebels and had hand-to-hand fights with them. The guerrillas state that twenty-one of the insurgents were killed and a number wounded. The Spaniards had two wounded. This news is given out by the government.

PAPAL MEDIATION.

The Report of the Pope's Offer to Spain Not Officially Confirmed.

Madrid, April 18.—The Rome dispatch to a London newspaper stating that the papal nuncio at Madrid had been instructed to offer the good offices of the pope, or, failing that, to endeavor to secure the acceptance by Spain of the mediation of the United States, in order to bring about a settlement of the troubles in Cuba, cannot be officially confirmed here, but the report is generally accepted as true.

ATHLELES LEAVE ATHENS.

The Americans Cheered at the Railway Station on Their Departure.

Athens, April 18.—The Greek competitors in the Olympic games bade farewell last night at the railway station to the foreign athletes who took part in the contests. The Americans were especially cheered. The Americons yesterday presented to the crown prince a memorial expressing the hope that Athens would be chosen as the permanent seat of the Olympic games.

BILLIARD TOURNAMENT CLOSED

Ives Is Now the Cushion Carom Champion of the World.

Boston, April 18.—The cushion carom billiard tournament was concluded here last night, the final game being between Frank Ives and Jacob Schaefer. Averages, Ives, 4, 38-68; Schaefer, 4, 22-68.

SURROUNDED BY ICEBERGS.

Steamer Victorian's Captain Witnessed a Magnificent But Terrible Sight.

Boston, April 18.—Capt. Shepherd of the Leyland line steamer Victorian reports that on the way over from Liverpool he passed a large number of icebergs. He first sighted the bergs about 150 miles east of the northernmost point of Newfoundland. The bergs sighted at that time were six in number and they were at least 150 feet high and 200 feet long. Soon after that the steamer entered heavy fields of ice and half an hour later she was surrounded by many large bergs. Capt. Shepherd says that the sight was a magnificent and terrible one. At one time he was able to count fifty immense bergs from the deck of the vessel, the procession stretching far way to the northward. He says that the movement of the ice from the northward is very rapid, making it dangerous to vessels, especially if one should should happen to come upon it in a fog, and he advices the captains of outgoing Atlantic liners to keep well to the southward in order to avoid it.

WELL KNOWN AT BATAVIA, N. Y.

Escaped Bank Wrecker Davies Was Much Thought of There.

Batavia, N. Y., April 18.—C. C. Davies, alias Tracy W. Douglass, who escaped from the Winterset county, Ia., jail by tunneling last Tuesday, is well known here. Last July Davies, or Douglass as he was known in Batavia, robbed the Peru, Ia., bank of $15,000 and fled to Avoca, N. Y., where he started a bank. Before going there, however, he came to Batavia on August 22, and, after depositing $9,000 in the bank of Batavia and $2,000 in the First National bank, called on some distant relatives who reside here. He spent some time in town and finally arranged to lease the Armstrong shoe factory and open a bicycle factory. The scheme fell through, and in September he suddenly withdrew his deposits and disappeared. He was a stylishly dressed and prepossessing young fellow, who made a good impression on all whom he met, and no one dreamed that he was a bank wrecker, FIERCE ELECTRIC STORM.

Railroad Bridge Washed Away and Other Damage Caused at Havana, N. Y.

Watkins, N. Y., April 18.—This locality was visited late yesterday afternoon by a terrific electric storm. The rain and hail fell in torrents and Watkins Glen creek overflowed its banks in this village, flooding a number of houses and driving the occupants into the upper stories. At Havana, three miles south of here, the Northern Central raiload bridge was washed away, stopping all trains on the road and causing greater damage in that village than here. At Beaver Dams 100 feet of the Fall Rock railway track was washed out.

COMING TO THE UNITED STATES

Unusually Heavy Emigration from Canada and Newfoundland.

Montreal, April 18.—Railway agents here and at Quebec say that the exodus from the counties below Quebec to the United States is greater than ever this spring. The steamer Grand Lake left St. Johns, N. F., on Tuesday carrying 250 emigrants to the United States. This is the largest number on record as sailing from that port.

MATABELE UPRISING

Reported Fall of Buluwayo Discredited by Hercules Robinson.

EXCITEMENT IN LONDON ALLAYED

The British Government Will Strengthen Its Forces at Natal and Cape Town. The Chartered Company Must Bear the Expense.

London, April 18.—A telegram has been received from Sir Hercules Robinson, governor of Cape Colony and British high commissioner in South Africa, in which he says he does not fear that Buluwayo has been captured by the Matabeles. He adds that every precaution has been taken for the safety of the town. The reinforcements sent to Buluwayo will keep the road open for transportation of food supplies. Forts have been erected and occupied in the Mangive Pass. This report has somewhat lessened the excitement, but it is still feared by many that the Matabeles have taken the place. According to one report received here more than 15,000 rebels were massing for an attack upon Buluwayo. This is believed to be overdrawn by the secretary of state for the colonies, Joseph Chamberlain, and the officials of the British Chartered South Africa company, who say they have no fear for the safety of Buluwayo.

More Troops for Cape Town.

In the house of commons, Mr. Chamberlain, replying to a question on the subject, said that the government had decided to replace the troops withdrawn from Natal and Cape Town. Therefore a battalion of the line and a body of mounted infantry would be dispatched to these places as soon as possible. This movement, he added, was connected with the decision of the government permanently to increase the strength of the garrison of Cape Colony, a step which had been urged by the military authorities, who were of the opinion that the present garrison of Cape Town was inadequate for the defense of the dockyard and coal depots. This announcement of Mr. Chamberlain was greeted with loud cheers and was looked upon as meaning that the government has finally decided to send adequate reinforcements of troops to South Africa and that the gravity of the situation there is no longer overlooked.

Chartered Company Must Foot the Bill.

Mr. Chamberlain went on to say that, except in the greatest emergency, the imperial troops were not suited to the work of quelling a native insurrection which, in the government's opinion, can be most promptly dealt with by the local forces. There was an ample number of men and a sufficient supply of arms for that purpose in South Africa. The only difficulty experienced was that of transporting the men and supplies from one point to another. The government was prepared to authorize the recruiting, if necessary, of colonial troops for the supression of the disturbances in South Africa, but the Chartered company would have to bear the expense.

LOCOMOTIVES FOR RUSSIA.

The Baldwin Works Closes Another Contract for Frieght Engines.

Philadelphia, April 18.—The Baldwin Locomotive works of this city have just closed another important contract with the Russian government for sixty large freight engines to be completed by July 1. With the completion of this contract the firm will have constructed since October, 1895, one hundred and thirty-four engines for the Russians. The previous orders have all been filled.

Haytain Refugees Returning Home.

Kingston, Jamaica, April 18.—A steamer especially chartered for the purpose of conveying back to their own country the Haytian refugees who desire to take advantage of President Simon Sam's reeent amnesty has arrived here. Seventy of them have availed themselves of the transportation offered and embarked on board the chartered ship.

Big Bequest to an Old Ladies Home.

Waterbury, Conn., April 18.—The will of Mrs. Elizabeth Hannigan, a wealthy and eccentric old lady, just admitted to probate, leaves nearly the whole of uninventoried estate to the Southmayd Old Ladies' home, a branch organization of the First Congregational church of this city.

Short in His Accounts, He Ends His Life.

Albion, N. Y., April 18.—Ex-postmaster Richard Andrews of Gaines committed suicide last evening by taking arsenic. He was $600 short in his accounts as highway commissioner and had been called to account by his bondsmen. He was a merchant at Gaines for thirty years.

In combination, proportion and process Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, and unequalled in true merit.

No other medicine ever possessed so much curative power, or reached such enormous sales, or made such wonderful cures, as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is undoubtedly the best medicine ever made to purify, vitalize and enrich the blood.

That is the secret of its success.

Read this statement:

"When my son was 7 years of age, he had rheumatic fever and acute rheumatism, which settled in his left hip. He was so sick that no one thought there was any help for him. Five sores broke out on his thigh, which the doctor said were sores. We had three different doctors. Pieces of bone came out of the sores. The last doctor said the leg would have to be cut open and the bone scraped, before he could get well. Howard became so low that he would eat nothing, and one doctor said there was no chance for him.

"One day, a newspaper recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla was left at our door. We decided to try this medicine. Howard commenced taking it the last of February, after having been sick for a year and a half. He hadn't taken it a week before I saw that his appetite began to improve, and then he gained rapidly. I gave him five bottles, when the sores were all healed and they never broke out again. The crutches he had used for four years were laid aside, as he had no further use for them. I give all the credit to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. ADA L. MOODY, Fay Street, Lynn, Mass.

WERE GIVEN A CLUE

How the London Detectives Caught the Diamond Thieves.

CREDIT BELONGS TO A JEWELER

The Officers, Nevertheless, May Claim the $10,000 Reward—Gov. Morton Notified by Secretary Olney of the Arrest of the Men.

London, April 18.—Dunlop and Turner on Wednesday visited the establishment of Streeter & Co., jewelers and lapidaries, on New Bond street, and offered several gems for sale. Mr. Streeter recognized the value of the stones and noticed that some of them had been removed from settings. He suggested that the gems be cleaned, which would enable him to better appraise their value. Dunlop and Turner agreed to have the stones cleaned, and a meeting was arraigned between them and Mr. Streeter for Thursday. The foregoing facts and the ignorance of precious stones displayed by the would-be vendors excited Mr. Streeter's suspicion and he communicated with the police. The men kept their appointment, but Mr. Streeter refused to purchase the gems. Policemen were waiting outside the shop, and the two men had hardly left when they were arrested. This version of the circumstances that led to the arrest discredits the story told by Inspector Froest, who was apparently trying to impress the reporters with the idea that the capture was due solely to his acumen. There is no doubt that his version was incorrect, and that the arrests would not have been made had it not been for Mr. Streeter's suspicion that the men were trying to dispose of stolen goods. The detectives, however, will probably claim the $10,000 reward.

WILL EXTRADITE THEM.

Gov. Morton Officially Notified of the Arrest of Burden Diamond Thieves.

Albany, April 18.—A telegram was received by Gov. Morton last night from Secretary of State Olney detailing the arrest of Robert Dunlop and William Turner in London for stealing the Townsend Burden diamonds in New York city on the night of Dec. 27 last. The secretary enclosed a copy of a telegram from United States Ambassador Bayard, stating that the glish authorities were in possession of the property, which is valued at $58,280, and the men. A reward of $10,000 had been offered for the capture of these diamond thieves. Extradition papers will be gotten out as quickly as District Attorney Fellows can prepare them and have them sent to the governor for his signature. In the meantime Secretary Olney has been requested by the governor to take steps to have the men detained until the papers arrive.

Warrants for Their Arrest.

New York, April 18.—Recorder Goff, in general sessions court, has issued warrants for the arrest of Dunlop and Turner, the two servants of I. Townsend Burden, who were arrested in London on suspicion of being the ones who stole over $50,000 of jewelry.

FOREST FIRE SUBSIDING.

Damage Around Sandwich, Mass., Estimated at About $40,000.

Sandwich, Mass., April 18.—The terrible forest fire which raged fiercely around Sandwich for the last four days has gone in the direction of Waquoit and Shumet, and the minds of the people of this town are once more at ease, for they do not look for a return of the horrible demon. A slight rain fell last night, and the fire has been pretty well checked. In summing up the damage done and loss sustained it is found that the fire has destroyed between 25,000 and 30,000 acres of woodland, and has burned but three buildings, two dwellings and one barn. The loss to the owners of the buildings will reach about $1,000, while the burned woodland will bring the loss up to about $40,000. The burned district has been heretofore the best hunting ground for the local sportsmen, and game has been quite plenty in this district in the past, but the fury of the flames has doubtless killed about all.

State Contracts Awarded.

Albany, April 18.—Supt. Aldridge of the state department of public works has awarded the following contracts: For sub-structure of canal bridge at Thomas street, Rome, to F. Louis Faass & Co. of Utica, for $2,955; superstructure, same bridge, King Bridge company of Cleveland, $1,930; substructure, bridge at Garden street, Rome, to Drumnelkamp & Lane of Syracuse, $2,090; super-structure, same bridge, Havana Bridge works of Montover Falls, $3,184.

Transferred His Property Illegally.

Bridgeport, Conn., April 18.—Judge Hall decided yesterday afternoon that Edwin Holt of Stamford transferred his property a short time ago to escape a possible claim for damages from Mrs. Sarenberg, whom he had assaulted. He therefore authorized the plaintiff to levy upon the property now in Holt's father's name, and secure her $1,000 judgment.

Wants Damage for Canal Leakage.

Albany, April 18.—In the state board of claims yesterday afternoon the testimony was taken in the claim of Walter V. Wilson of Half Moon, Saratoga county, for $2,700 for damage to land by canal leakage.

Flour Mill Swept Away by Flood.

Watertown, N. Y., April 18.—The City flour mill was carried away by the force of the flood last evening. Total loss, $5,000. The mills in this city and Carthage are shut down.

IRISH VICEROYALTY.

A Motion To Reduce the Government Grant Defeated in the Commons.

London, April 18.—J. S. MacNeill, member for south Donegal, moved in the house of commons last night, on the submission of the Irish estimates, to reduce the amount of money granted for the expenses of the household of the viceroy of Ireland. In the course of his remarks he characterized the viceroy's household as a gingerbread court. Michael Davitt, declared that the household was a hotbed of flunkeys. During the discussion of the motion Balfour, chief secretary for Ireland, intimated that if the Irish members were unanimous on the point of reducing the grant he would seriously consider the question of the retention of the viceroyalty. T. P. O'Connor, member for the Scotland division of Liverpool, the well-known Irish nationalist, declared that there was no such unanimity. Mr. MacNeill's motion was then rejected.

MONTAUK'S DEFEAT.

The Public Deceived in Their Belief That Clayton Could Outride Simms.

London, April 18.—It was the public and not the stable that made Montauk the favorite for the Drakelow stakes, the public thinking that Clayton could ride better than Simms. The Croker set were present on the course, but there was no such plunging as there was in 1895, when the American horses started. The fielding was strong against the American horses before the race, and some bookmakers have offered 100 to 25 against Montauk for the Derby. His chances for big races over courses longer than the two-year-old course—five furlongs and 140 yards—are considered out altogether, and his defeat has weakened his position in the Jubilee stakes.

"Free silver is a good thing for the silver-mine owners, who can then sell the product of his mines," the Richmond State says. "But for the south, which has no silver mines, which is entering upon a new era, which wants development and capital, for the south to fly in the face of sound business precedents, in the face of the monetary policy of the world, is folly that means a fixed disadvantage to the entire section."

One feature of the Elizabeth Mayoralty campaign was the plethora of affidavids and public letters seeking to influence voters, and now Daniel J. Burke has got into a peck of trouble over the publication of a letter over his signature, in which he sought to represent the Federation of Labor as being favorable to Mayor Rankin. He had no authority to do this, and his resignation as president of the Federation has been asked for.

IMMIGRANTS SHOULD BE WELCOMED.

A Writer Believes That the Worthy Foreigner Has a Right Here.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—It was with much interest that I read the letter in your issue of Wednesday last, headed "Protection Not Revenue," but while I agree with the writer in his views regarding a revenue tariff I must take exception to the remarks he makes concerning immigration. I will not go into the subject of the desirability of immigration at length, not wishing to take up your valuable space, but it seems to me that the writer of the letter referred to must be ignorant of the immigration laws and the manner of their enforcement when he makes a statement to the effect that we admit the beggars and tramps from all the rest of the world. Perhaps he is not aware that every immigrant is carefully examined by the United States immigration authorities before being permitted to land, and that all those who cannot clearly show their right under the laws passed by Congress and the regulations issued by the Treasury Department to enter are detained and must appear before a board of special inquiry, which orders every immigrant to be returned who has not sufficient money to satisfy the authorities that he will not become a public charge, or, failing in this cannot produce relatives or friends who will give satisfactory assurances that he will be cared for. I will not proceed further, but believe that the slight description given of the mode of treating arriving foreigners shows that there is a substantial bar to the admission of immigrants who can be called undesirable, and that the gates are not thrown open, as it seems to be implied in the letter in question, to all who desire to come here. Nor do I think that any party will ever be condemned for a policy which permits the honest and industrious of all nations to enter this Republic and add to its strength and resources.

I would merely add that I hardly think that Protection vs. Tariff Reform is the issue of the hour. I believe it is the opinion of impartial observers that the verdict has been decisively given in favor of tariff reform, and that whatever defeats the Democratic party has met with have been due to neglect to enact a genuine tariff reform law. I trust that the writer of the letter I have mentioned, in a later communication will touch on the subject of sound money, which in importance far outweighs the question of the tariff, and will lend his influence towards the election of delegates from Plainfield to the Democratic Convention shortly to be held who will be absolutely opposed to the free coinage of silver and who will work for a candidate and platform declaring for the maintenance of the present gold standard of value. "Yes. Why, only the other night he was sparking with his latest flame, and the old man, who doesn't approve of the match, came in and raised blazes and finally fired him after they had had a hot time of it, and poor Jinks' plans all went up in smoke."

"Well, it's a burning shame."—Judge.

If Dunellen does not have a town hall there will be no one to blame but the people. The stock has been over subscribed but the shrinkage has left thirty shares still needed. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THEATRICAL.

Cleveland's minstrels, which appeared in Music Hall last night, was one of the rankest shows that has ever been given in this city. Their jokes were old enough to vote, the songs those that our ancestors hummed when boys, the specialities as laughable as a frog jumping off a stone into Greenbrook. The show was simply rotten, and any one who sat through it from beginning to end deserves a leather medal. They played to poor business. Evidently Rich & Maeder had been imposed upon in presenting such a worthless attraction as this.

Not Just What He Expected.

Lady (widow)—Do you know that my daughter has set her eyes upon you, Herr Miller?

Gent (flattered)—Has she, really?

Lady—Certainly; only to-day she was saying: "That's the sort of gentleman I should like for my papa."—Tagliche Rundschau.

Hateful Thing.

Miss Singlewun—What a hateful thing Lyddy White is.

Miss Thingummy—Why, what has she been saying now?

Miss Singlewun—I just happened to say she'd never see forty-five again and she said: "Not when I look at you."—Boston Transcript.

Where Silence Was Eloquent.

Said the mistress to Bridget,
With a shake of her digit:
"How is it no sound from the kitchen is heard
Whenever your 'steady'
Is with you already—
There's never a murmur, not even a word?"
"Your pardon I'm beggin'."
Said Bridget McGreggin:
"My beau is a 'daisy' that's quite hard to beat;
But so bashful is Barney
That, havin' no blarney,
He does nothin' at prisint but sit down and eat."

—N. Y. Herald.

The Triumph of Science.

A famous French doctor and professor of medicine contended that every disease was attributable to a process of inflammation. On dissecting one of his patients not a trace of inflammation could be found. He explained the circumstances to his pupils as follows:

"Gentlemen, you see that our mode of treatment was thoroughly effective; the patient is dead but he died cured!"—Neue Zeit.

Busy people have no time, and sensible people have no inclination to use a slow remedy. One Minute Cough Cure acts promptly and gives permanent results. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

ONCE MATRON, NOW PRISONER.

Mrs. Cahill Sent to the Elizabeth Jail for Sixty Days for Intoxication.

Several years ago Sylvester Cahill, Jr., was Warden of the Union County Jail and his young wife was Matron. Through illness she fell into the habit of using stimulants and this has since proved her ruin. Yesterday morning she was found in the grounds of the New Jersey Jockey Club at Elizabeth lying helplessly intoxicated. She was arrested and sent to the jail where she was formerly matron.

Victim of the Heat.

Emery Bohasick, of Bound Brook, aged 26 years, was sun struck yesterday afternoon, while working on the streets at the above place. He was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment and is improving very nicely. He will not be able to leave the hospital for two or three days.

—Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., met last evening and worked the long form of the third rank on a candidate.

—Armstrong, the North ave. druggest, has placed a number of attractive signs in front of his store advertising the merits of his famous soda.

"A Friend in Need is a Friend Indeed."

A friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm and after using it six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh. It is a most valuable remedy. Joseph Stewart, 624 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

My son was afflicted with catarrh. I induced him to try Ely's Cream Balm and the disagreeable catarrhal smell all left him. He appears as well as any one. J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

Burns are absolutely painless when DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is promptly applied. This statement is true. A perfect remedy for skin diseases, chapped hands and lips, and never fails to cure piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

CONSTANTLY IN A TREMOR

A New York Street Has a Chronic Case of the Shivers.

A section of Twenty-sixth street, New York, daily enjoys sensations similar to those caused by a constant succession of earthquaake shocks. Everything in the vicinity trembles as if suffering from a mild attack of the ague. It is really, says the New York Journal, perpetual motion. There is a clubhouse in this section, right in the center of the trembling district. A recent visitor, one who had not been there before, noticed that objects on the mantel or elsewhere always moved slightly, and that he himself felt a strange vibration.

The friend with whom he was dining laughed at his uneasiness. "It's always that way here," he said. "It's only a little shake, perhaps the hundredth part of an inch, but it's perpetual. Some day I fear the building will shake to pieces all at once, just like the 'wonderful one-horse shay.' The cause? Oh, it's that electric light plant opposite. Engines and dynamos running all the time. Enough steam power is exerted to blow the block to Jericho; enough electricity generated to light a square mile brilliantly every night. All the houses around here shake. I remember when this block was a most exclusive residential neighborhood. Now at least half of it—the half that shakes most—is given over to small shops and cheap theatrical boarding-houses. There's one pleasanter aspect, however, to this vibration."

Then the clubman performed a pleasing experiment. He requested the caterer to bring him a glass of milk, some rum, ice and sugar. These he blended, after which he placed the glass upon the window sill. "In three minutes," said the clubman, "it will be a perfect milk shake."

It was no exaggeration. The vibration, though annoying, at least supplied one want.

ELOPERS STOPPED.

Bride's Father Didn't Want the Expense of a Town Trip.

Riding along a West Virginia road I was interested in seeing a young man and young woman on horseback coming down the road on a gallop. Not far behind them was an old man giving chase. By cutting through the woods at one place he succeeded in heading them off and caught hold of the bridles just as I drove up, said C. E. Wardleigh to a Washington Star reporter.

"Whar yo' all goin'?" he demanded.

"You can't stop us now but we'll get married," answered the young man, defiantly.

"I hain't tryin' ter stop yo' all. Ef yo' is boun' ter marry yer kin, but I wanted a talk: Yo' all's gwine ter town. How long yo' spose yo'll stay?"

"Two or three days," answered the groom.

"At $2 a day," said the father, "besides hoss feed an' hoss hire, for I'll make yo' pay for them horses, shore. Then $5 fer a preacher. I wanted Lindy ter marry Sam, fer I owed him $5 an' he wouldn't say nothin' 'bout it ef she'd hev 'im. Parson Long owes me an' he'll marry yer fer nothin'; thar won't be no board bill an' hoss feed. It would cost $20 ter make the trip an' give me $10 so I kin pay Sam an' hev suthin' fer w'ar an' t'ar of the hosses, an' we kin go home an' hev a bigger time than at town."

The proposition was accepted, the money paid, and the three turned their horses' heads homeward.

NO TASTE FOR FLESH.

How the Study of Animal Life Affected One Naturalist.

A man who has made a careful study of the habits of animals and birds, and who firmly believes that birds think and are controlled by brain action in a great measure—about, if not quite as much as human beings, and not by the "overrated instinct"—told a few nights ago of the odd effect natural history had on him.

"Do you know," said he, "that since I learned that birds and mammals think, I have had a sort of spleen against flesh? When I eat a partridge I think of the bird's wiles used in its endeavors to escape the hunter's merciless shot. It is the same with the ducks, turkeys, deer and beeves, and all other flesh, but not fish. I have the dread, or feeling, that I am eating a rational being. I think that if vegetarianism ever becomes universal, it will be when we understand the thoughts of birds and mammals and are able to converse with them. We are just now entering on a wonderful field of research. We have found the door to real natural history knowledge, and we are now groping for the keyhole."

An Indian Legend.

The red men of the west have many curious legends concerning nature's marvels; none more weird than that concerning Rock lake, Washington. Since time out of memory the Indians of that vicinity have believed the lake to be the abode of a sea monster, which never grows old, and whose chief diet is Indian flesh. According to the legend, no Indian ever entered its waters and returned alive, no matter whether the rash act was committed by approaching its margin for a drink, for a swim, or for a canoe ride. So thoroughly is this belief spread among the Indians of the northwest that each and every one would prefer death to touching its waters.

Dusky Politeness.

A story of the colored man's fondness for good words is furnished by the New York Tribune. It is well up to date, and is about a venerable Philadelphia butler:

He was helping a visitor to put on her walking jacket the other day, and seeing her struggling to push in her rebellious big sleeves, he said, in his most respectful manner:

"P'r'aps you will hab de goodness to allow me to suppress dem puffs, madam."

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

GERMS.

They Exist Everywhere Now-a-Days.

In the Air and in Our Food and Drink. No One is Free From Them for a Moment.

One reads so much about germs, these days, that he becomes almost afraid to drink a glass of milk or wash his face in a basin of water. Yet those who are most competent to judge tell us that there are many diseases now known to be caused by germs; and probably other diseases will be discovered to be due to germs also.

If you sow wheat in dry dust and keep the soil in that condition, the kernels will not sprout and grow. And if you should sow the grain in very wet soil it will not grow then, but would mould or rot. Therefore we must not only have proper seed, but the soil must also be exactly right for the growth of the seed, if we expect results. Take consumption germs, for instance, you may inhale these germs and yet no harm follow; because the soil in your lungs was in such a healthy condition these disease-germs cannot grow there. Then, again, you may have exactly the right kind of soil in your lungs for the germs of consumption, and yet not have the disease because you have not inhaled the germs. It is certainly true that thousands of persons inhale the germs of consumption, and yet do not have the disease. The fact that this soil must be suitable to germ-life, explains the reason why some children have severe stomach and bowel trouble, and yet others in the same house be unaffected.

There are a number of complaints which may not be due to germs; and yet the principle we wish to establish is the same. Some take cold more easily than others; have frequent attacks of indigestion; become easily exhausted; and show in every way that the body is not strong. What is the best weapon with which to fight germs? A strong constitution. How can you prevent many of the ailments of everyday life? By keeping the body well nourished and the nervous system substantially re-inforced.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites will do all this. It feeds. It nourishes. It builds up. It invigorates. It fortifies. It shields the body from the enemy, and brings victory even in the face of defeat.

It is pleasant to know that such a remedy can be prepared in a form agreeable to the palate and the stomach. It does not nauseate. It does not cause diarrhœa. It does not produce those disagreeable eructations of gas. It does not necessitate bribing or threatening the children. Best of all, it does not have that fishy taste.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

AN EVENTFUL CAREER.

Slatin Pasha's Experience in the Famous War Against the Mahdi.

When the Anglo-Egyptian expedition starts up the Nile it will be accompanied by a man who will know more of the country to be conquered and its people than any other one in the expedition. This is the famous Slatin Pasha, who for 11 years was a prisoner of the khalifa, the successor of the mahdi, in his capital in the East Soudan. Slatin's career is one that is as full of color as that of any other traveler in Europe, with the exception, perhaps, of Henry M. Stanley. In 1876, at the age of 20, Rudolph Slatin, born and educated in Vienna, fired with a desire to travel, and wishing to take part in the exploration of Africa, first went to the Soudan. After a short stay he returned to complete his military service, and it was not until three years later that he returned to Egypt, where he was appointed to a high post under Gen. Gordon. He conducted a successful campaign against a pretender to the Darfur throne, and was made governor general of the province by the khedive. Then the wave of mahdism swept the whole of the Soudan. Gordon was murdered and the British expedition was compelled to retreat. Slatin was captured and placed in seclusion by the mahdi. When the mahdi died Slatin was released by his successor, the khalifa, but was kept under close surveillance. After much weary watching he managed to escape, and returned to Europe last year. Since his return to civilization he has resided in London and has written a book on the Soudan question. While governor of the Darfur province Slatin fought numerous battles against great odds. He has much private and valuable information concerning the affairs of the Soudan and will be an immense acquisition to the expedition.

PREMIER BERTHELOT.

The Head of the French Government Is a Scientist of Note.

M. P. E. Marcelin Berthelot, the minister of foreign affairs in France, who has become politically conspicuous through the British Soudan expedition affair, is more a man of science than a diplomat or statesman. In fact, his great reputation is due solely to his proficiency as a chemist. In 1886 he took a trip into politics—for almost every Frenchman is a politician at one time in his life—and was for a short time a member of the cabinet. Apart from that his entire attention has been devoted to science, and his original researches have won for him the praise of the whole world. The son of a physician, M. Berthelot early began his scientific studies, his work being chiefly in the line of organic chemistry. He was honored with the degree of doctor of sciences in 1854, and awarded the academic prize of 3,500 francs for his work in thermo-chemistry. A new chair was created for him in the College de France in 1865. He is a member of the French scientific academies and was elected a foreign member of the Royal society of London. In 1870 he was president of the scientific committee of defense, and during the siege of Paris directed the manufacture of nitroglycerin and dynamite for the government. As president of the committee on explosives his labors discovered the new smokeless powder. In 1876 he was made inspector-general of higher education. His researches have had for their object principally the reproduction of the substances which enter into the composition of organized beings, and his labors, being synthetic, opened up a new field of science. The dyeing trade has benefited infinitely by his experiments in extracting dyes from coal tar. He has written many valuable scientific works and is a commander of the Legion of Honor.

M. MARCELIN BERTHELOT.

False Teeth for Pet Dogs.

There are in New York city several dentists who earn their living by making sets of teeth for dogs; many of the flowing tails of the horses that one sees in Central park are as false as the black hair on nine-tenths of the fair sex, and now the fact has been brought to light that a considerable number of the most successful race horses on the British turf are provided with artificial windpipes made of silver, the object being to prevent them from roaring.

A Fine Profession.

A smile of joy lit up the countenance of Mr. Hobnails as he entered his home after his day's work. "I have received a letter from our darling boy, Harry," he said to his wife, "and his fortune's made."

"Oh, John!" said Mrs. Hobnails, "has he gone into business for himself?"

"No—he's smarter than that!" said her husband, exultingly.

"He's been speculating?"

"Better than that."

"Or got hold of a gold mine?"

"Pshaw, no! He's been appointed as a friendly receiver."—Chicago Record.

An Artistic Career.

She—Isn't Mr. Pallette married?

He—Yes, since last December.

She—Why I thought he sought an artistic career?

He—He did, and hit it. He wore the most elaborate clothes procurable, lived at the best hotel in town, and married a woman with a million. If that isn't artistic, I'd like to know what you call it.—Detroit Free Press.

A Reasonable Suggestion.

Mrs. Spratt (vigorously shaking her sleeping spouse)—John! John! There's a burglar in the house!

Mr. Spratt (protestingly)—See here, Manda! If, instead of shaking the life out of me, you'd go and shake that burglar, you'd be doing some good.—N. Y. Weekly.

High Rollers.

Ada—Bring lots of money, dear, and come around to my house to-morrow afternoon. We're going to have a poker party, just like the men.

Olive—How much shall I bring?

Ada—Oh, bring lots! Bring two dollars and a half.—Puck.

Punctilious.

Wife—Oh, John, as I came in just now I saw smoke pouring out of Mrs. de Lancey's front windows! And not a soul seemed aroused!

Husband—Well, did you ring the bell and tell them what was wrong?

Wife—Of course not. I don't owe her a call.—Judge.

His Dreadful Threat.

Mildred—I wouldn't have accepted him if he had not made such a perfectly dreadful threat.

Blanche—What did he threaten to do? Commit suicide?

Mildred—Worse than that! He threatened to marry some one else.—Puck.

It Was Properly Labeled.

"Why don't you ever write any poetry, Scribe?"

"I did write a poem once—an 'Ode to Oblivion.'"

"Indeed, what became of it?"

"It reached its destination."—N. Y. World.

Strong Man.

Bacon—That man Black, who plays the heavy villain in the new drama, must have a wonderful constitution.

Egbert—Why?

Bacon—He smokes an entire box of cigarettes in the first act and doesn't die until the last act.—Yonkers Statesman.

Her Proprieties.

Mrs. McStinger made a hasty second marriage to a fiddler. She was asked to grace a party at which he was to play and indignantly replied:

"Me tance, und mein Chimmy only six weeks tead?"—Judge.

Her Unlucky Month.

Mr.—What month is it in which it is unlucky to be married?

Mrs.—Great Scott! what a poor memory you have, my dear. We were married in June.—Life.

The Financial Situation.

Long—Are you in favor of a gold basis?

Short—Silver is good enough for me. Have you a spare quarter?—Detroit Free Press.

And Then He Said It.

"I love to hear you speak," said she,
With an entrancing sigh.
"And what I love especially Is the way you say 'good-by.'"
—Washington Star.

AFTER THE KISS.

"How dare you, sir?"

"Kiss you? Why, your beauty challenged me, and I never take a stump."

"Poor fellow! Yes, I suppose you couldn't very well help it."

"From Hand to Mouth."

I kissed her hand, my heart was all aglow—
I kissed her mouth—knew all the angels know;
I married her! Thus fate does favors give.
For, since that hour, "from hand to mouth" we live.
—Brooklyn Life

Thought It Was Smoke.

"Why, mamma," said Willie, as he went out into the cold and could see his own breath, "give me a glass of water quick. I must be on fire inside."—Harper's Young People.

from want of nourishment. Thousands of them succumb from this cause daily. No fault of the parents either, simply they are unable to find food that can be retained by the poor, weak stomachs, and then that continual decrease in weight, that pinched and forlorn look on the little face with the inevitable end. Bovinine
It is a concentration in the least possible bulk of the life-maintaining elements of lean, raw beef, prepared by a special cold process. A few drops added to babies' milk will make rich, new blood, create flesh and bone, and give the necessary strength to the vital organs to start them on their long life's work. Cholera infantum and bowel troubles are prevented by its use. Over 25000 physicians endorse it.

REVOLVING TIME.
"We take no note of time but from its loss;" so it shows how necessary it is to every man to carry time along with him. CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Cora Laire, of East Fifth street, has a new Carteret wheel.

Fred J. Vieweg, cashier at Scott's Printing Machine Works, now rides a Relay wheel.

Wm. M. McCutchen expects to ride at Berkley Oval, New York, on April 25th, in the Drisler games.

If you ride a Columbia wheel you know that your mount is a standard one, and made of the best material obtainable.

H. J. Martin, of the Plainfield Cycle Company, has sold a Reading wheel to Peter Stram, and an Iver Johnson wheel to Miss Squires, both of the borough.

George G. Cobb, chairman of the racing board of the Crescent Wheelmen, has accepted the sanction for a meet in the national circuit on Saturday, September 26th.

It has been decided by the race committee of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling clubs to start the Irvington-Millburn road race on May 30th at 11 a. m., rain or shine.

The bicycle riders of Brooklyn intend having rules adopted prohibiting wheelmen riding more than two abreast on the cycle path, and also to limiting the speed of the riders.

F. L. Swackhamer and W. Gordon Williams returned Thursday afternoon after a cycling trip to Rockaway. They had a very pleasant ride and the only accident they had was a puncture in the tire to William's rear wheel.

The Eldridge Bicycle company is expecting a large shipment of Columbia wheels the first of next week to supply the demand for the Columbia, model 44. The wheels recently received have all been sold and there are a number of orders for others.

George B. Cobb, Jr., will ride a Jersey wheel on the track this season, and will contest in most of the neighboring meets under the colors of the Crescent Wheelmen. Cobb was one of the crack riders on the Harlem Wheelmen's team last year and raced on the Oval a number of times.

Charles M. Murphy, the professional racer, has challenged to a match race Walter C. Sanger, of Milwaukee. Murphy's challenge calls for a series of three races for a purse of from $500 to $1,000, the races to take place within sixty days after May 30th. Murphy is in training at Savannah, and Sanger is expected to arrive there in a short time.

A simple device for straightening the spokes of a wheel is to use a blue or red pencil, holding it in the hand so that the point just grazes one of the spokes. The pencil hand is then held lightly in the rim of the wheel which is then slowly revolved. If any of the spokes are not perfectly true they will be marked by the pencil, and then can be tightened.

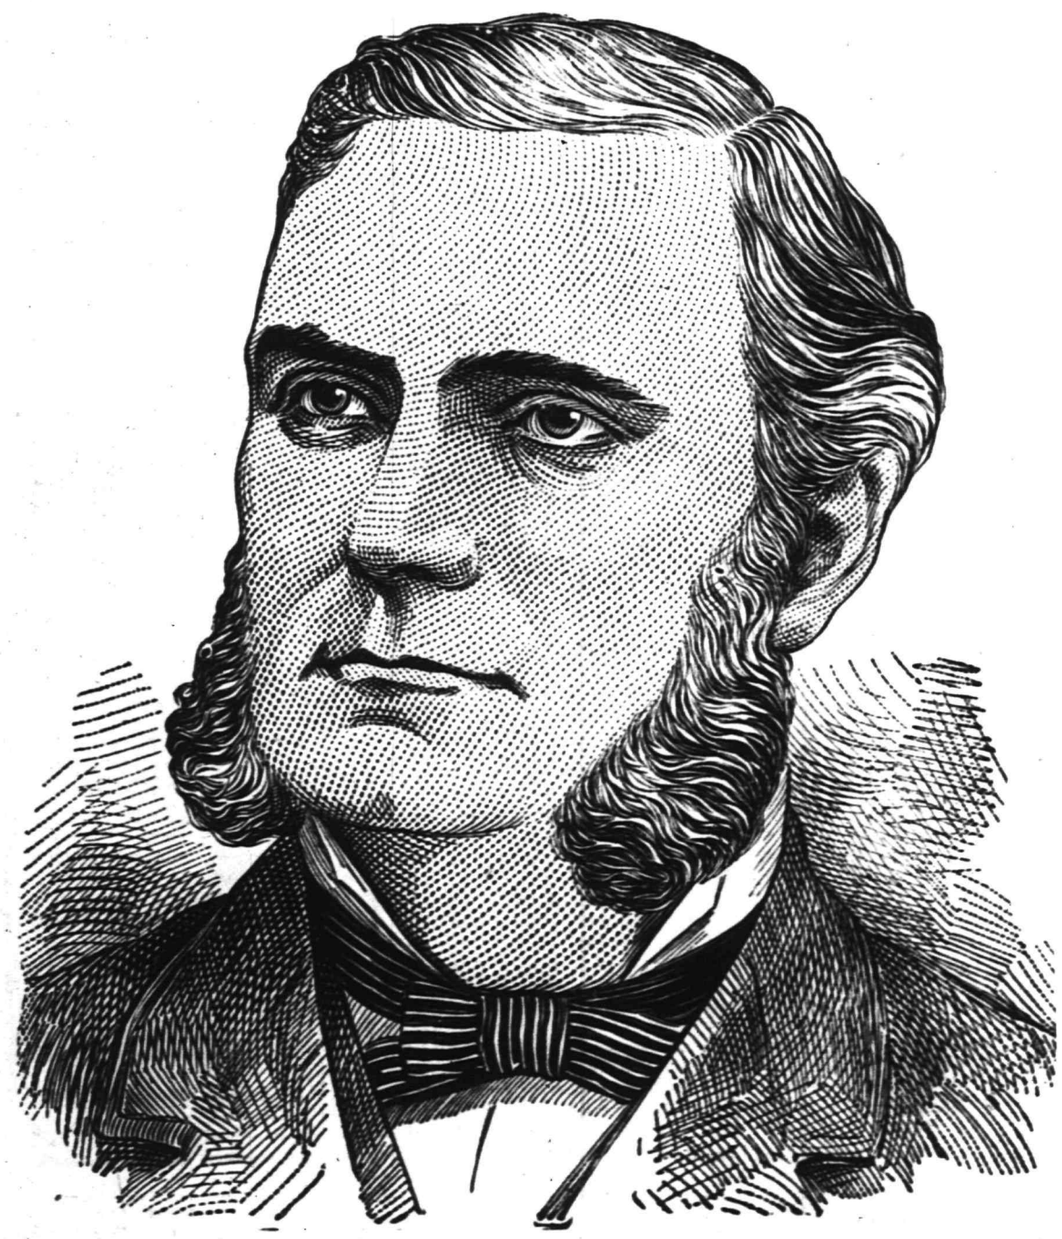
The action of the Race Committee of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling clubs in deciding to hold the annual twenty-five mile handicap road race at Milburn this season has been received with satisfaction by the metropolitan clubs and the racing men. It is anticipated that the entries for the race this year will exceed 200, in which case it is contemplated placing a limit of 200 on the race. Racing teams from the clubs in that vicinity are already in training for the race, and the inter-club rivalry is expected to bring out all the local flyers. It has been rumored that the big crowds that attend the race each year was regarded as a drawback by the town authorities of Irvington and Milburn, and that official steps would be taken this year to forbid the race being held. This story is denied, and the officials of the Metropolitan Association say that the town authorities have consented to the race taking place as usual.

The Gentlemen's Driving Park will be opened next Saturday for the summer. A series of trotting matches are being arranged for that day and the horses are now being prepared for them.

We might tell you more about One Minute Cough Cure, but you probably know that it cures a cough. Everyone does who has used it. It is a perfect remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness. It is an especial favorite for children, being pleasant to take and quick in curing. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Judge of the Supreme Court

Congressman Powers Enthusiastic Over Paine's Celery Compound, the Greatest Spring Remedy.



Judge Powers, who today represents Vermont in Congress, entered the national house with a magnificent record as lawyer and judge of the supreme court of Vermont.

He is a fine type of the careful, learned, New England lawyer.

Though but 56 years of age, he was a member of the Vermont legislature a third of a century ago, and again in 1874, when he was speaker of the house. He has been state censor, a member of the constitutional convention and of the state senate. In 1874 he became judge of the supreme court of Vermont, and remained on the bench until 1890, when he took his seat in Congress. Judge Powers presided at many of the most notable trials in the history of the state, and is the author of many of the most important opinions to be found in Vermont reports.

No judge on the supreme bench in any of our states has a reputation for more clearly and unmistakably expressing his opinions. Hts unqualified indorsement of Paine's celery compound in the following letter is as straightforward and concise as any one of his thoughtful charges to a jury.

House of Representatives, U. S.
Washington, D. C., Feb. 19, 1896.

I have for several years been acquainted with the medicinal qualities of Paine's celery compound, and can enthusiastically endorse it as a specific in many cases for which its use is recommended by its proprietors.

H. Henry Powers.
1st Dist Vt.

By far the best use that any tired or ailing person can make of these precious spring days is to purify their blood and regulate their nerves with Paine's celery compound. It is plain to any observant person that the best remedy for neuralgia, persistant headaches and such like indications of low nervous vigor, is the one that most rapidly and completely nourishes the worn out parts. It is not in the power of any other remedy to do the vigorous work of Paine's celery compound in strengthening the jaded system, and in bringing it back to an energetic, healthy condition.

The real danger that stares sick people in the face is the putting off attending to sickness and disease, and letting slip these health-inviting spring days, when everything so strongly favors getting well. This greatest of all spring remedies is doing an astonishing amount of good these days among sick people and those semi-invalids who are "run down" by the long, trying winter, or worn out and afflicted by disease.

The soul and life of sound health is a well nourished nervous system. Paine's celery compound repairs the worn, nervous system as nothing else can do. It is the one certain and permanent cure for sleeplessness, hysteria, nervous debility and exhaustion, rheumatism, neuralgia and the various manifestations of an unhealthy bodily condition, such as langour, nervousness, heart palpitation, loss of flesh and mental depression.

With Paine's celery compound, returning strength and cheerfulness soon show that one is undoubtedly on the right road to health.

Paine's celery compound is the one real spring remedy known today that never fails to benefit. Get Paine's celery compound, and only Paine's celery compound, if you wish to be well.

The Park Club tennis courts are expected to open for play in about a week. There is some talk of holding a tournament there this year.

With its usual enterprise the New Jersey Athletic Club has mapped out a fine athletic meet for Decoration Day. Harry McMillan, the President of the A. A. U., will act as referee. Charles J. Kilpatrick, the holder of the world's record for half a mile, has consented to come from Union College to run in a special half-mile race. Tommy Conneff, of Holy Cross College, the holder of the world's record for the one mile run, will start from scratch in a one mile handicap, and attempt to lower his own record. SONS OF OLD ELI ENTERTAIN.

Successful Concert of the Yale Glee and Banjo Clubs.

Yale has the reputatation of making it warm for the other colleges in foot-ball, baseball and rowing and her Glee, Banjo and Mandolin clubs sustained her reputation Saturday evening. It was Plainfield, however, that was warm this time. A large and fashionable audience sat in the Casino and sweltered and enjoyed the delightful programme as best they could. The Glee Club was excellent. Their selections were all good and at times pleased the audience so much that they forgot the heat and heartily applauded the collegians. The instrumental clubs were also good and rendered their selections in a manner pleasing to the ear of the most critical of their listeners.

There was one surprise for the audience that completely drove away all thoughts of the high mercury for the time being. When the Glee Club came out for the first time in the second part, the familiar form of William N. Runyon was among them and he stepped to the front. Then came a burst of applause that reminded one of a Yale-Princeton foot-ball game, only the Yale yell was missing. After bowing repeatedly, he was allowed to sing. He first sang "Romeo" in his usual pleasing manner and as an encore gave his well known song about what the parrot said.

The audience was essentially a Yale one, for the Yale alumni and their families turned out in force and filled the Casino.

The concert was a success despite the very warm weather, financially as well as from a musical and social point of view.

In the afternoon, the committee in charge gave a reception and dance in the Casino in honor of the Yale men. It was a very enjoyable affair and was largely attended by the young people of this city and the borough. The guests were received by Mrs. L. N. Lovell, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs. C. F. Abbott and Mrs. Walter Stewart. The committee that arranged this pleasing social event consisted of William N. Runyon, Walter F. Murray and Arthur Lovell. The music was excellent and was furnished by P. Ludwig Conde.

DUTY TO ENDEAVORERS.

REV. C. E. HERRING TALKS ON THE ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

Plainfield Enjoys a Reputation for Doing Nobly in Time of Conventions and This Time We Must Not Diminish Our Zeal.

"Plainfield '96" was the very appropriate subject taken by Rev. C. E. Herring for the prelude to his sermon last evening at the First Presbyterian church. It was right in line with the coming State Christian Endeavor Convention, and the large audience present felt deeply the force of the speaker's words. Mr. Herring's remarks were as follows:

The year 1896 is a year of privilege for the Christian Endeavorers of Plainfield. It is not a year of ordinary, but extraordinary opportunity, such opportunity as may not be ours again for many years to come. The young people of the State have been invited as our guests. Other places eagerly sought the honor, but victory was ours, and Plainfield has promised through her representatives to prepare the way for Paterson '97. Let us make Plainfield '96 memorable in our annals. Not only a year of privilege, but a year of promise. The outlook indicates the best convention ever held in this State. The future is big with promise. Judging from the calibre of the speakers the convention will be the greatest Christian Endeavor Convention ever held in this State. It is a year for the exhibition of public spirit. Plainfield enjoys a reputation of doing nobly in the time of conventions, and at this time we must not diminish our zeal. Local pride must be preserved. The privilege and the promise should intensify our zeal. The convention will be a spiritual blessing and a financial blessing as well. Storekeepers will profit by this great gathering, and we therefore appeal for the most generous contributions to aid us in making this gathering the greatest ever held in this State. We want Plainfield to come up boldly and bravely to our financial help.

This must not be a year of indolence or indifference, but push. We must not only have a plan but push the plan into execution. The prodigal planned to arise and then he arose. To make this convention a success we must push persistently from now on. It is the year of preparation. Plan, pride, push, will not carry us through without preparation of prayer. Let us pray that this may be a time long to be remembered, Plainfield conquered for Christ, and then we can push on to Paterson. Plainfield '96 is the year of our privilege. Let us come up to the help of the Lord at once.

A Pleasant Surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Rogers, of Myrtle avenue, were pleasantly surprised yesterday morning when they entered their dining room for their morning meal. On the table was a beautiful and fragrant bouquet of flowers, attached to which was a card from their two domestics, Christine and Marie Thompson, who congratulated them on taking possession of their new home, and extending their best wishes to Mrs. Rogers, whose birthday was yesterday.

The Children to Help.

The Woman's Township Improvement Association, of Cranford, held a meeting Saturday afternoon at Miss Day's, and at its invitation a large number of children were present and a children's Auxiliary was formed. The women have commenced the work of tidying up the village streets, the station grounds, and the neglected house lots, and the town promises to be one of the most attractive places on the line of the Central Railroad.

The Holy Spirit for Service.

Miss Louise Shepard, of New York, assisted by Miss Margaret Suman, missionary to the Congo, will address the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance tomorrow evening at 7:45 o'clock in the rooms of the W.C.T.U. on Watchung avenue. Subject: "Filled With the Holy Spirit for Service." Miss Shepard will also sing during the evening.

Quarreled on the Street.

A well-dressed man and woman attracted quite a little attention Saturday evening at the corner of Fourth and New streets by their high words. The man finally attempted to drag the woman along, but one of the neighbors threatened to call a policeman and the man left on a run.

To Continue the Exhibition.

Owing to the excessive heat last week and the consequent disinclination of people to attend any event away from home, the Camera Club have decided to continue their art loan exhibition this week.

A Thirteen-Year-Old Missing.

Joseph Smith, thirteen years old, was reported to the police of Elizabeth yesterday as missing. A general alarm was sent out by Chief Tenney.

WORKED, AND YET HE BEGGED.

An Italian Labored Six Days and on the Seventh He Asked For Alms.

One of the Italians employed on the street railway extensions had a brilliant idea. He worked six days in the week and on Sunday he decided to try his luck at begging. He wanted a place to work his scheme where the houses were large and handsome and where the policemen were few and far between, and so he selected Central avenue and West Eighth street as a good place to start operations. He was having fair success, when he tried to get something at the house of F. H. Andrews, of Central avenue. Mr. Andrews notified the police over the telephone, and in a short time the enterprising native of sunny Italy felt the grip of the law in the shape of a policeman.

This morning the Italian was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza and gave his name as Petro. His last name sounded something like "patchquilt," but was entered on the docket as Pasqualt. He was given his choice between a fine of $10 or spending 30 days in jail. As the little scheme of Petro had not yielded a great return he took the visit at the free hotel at Elizabeth.

If everybody would telephone to the police immediately on the appearance of these vagrants and tramps, the police would arrest them at once and soon rid the city of these troublesome visitors.

A Talk by the Mayor.

About twenty-two members of the First Baptist Church Boys' Brigade met in regular session Saturday evening in the lecture room of the church, and after going through their drill in an excellent manner they listened with a great deal of interest to an admirable address by Mayor Gilbert. He spoke concerning the essential qualities necessary toward the making of a good soldier of discipline, and especially of the Christian side of the Boys' Brigade which, he said, was a potent factor in the organization. He gave many valuable points and suggestions which will be of great benefit to the members, who enjoyed the talk very much. The brigade is making excellent progress and its rapid growth and advancement is cause for much encouragement on the part of those in charge.

A Bicycle Stolen.

A mean, contemptible theft of a bicycle was committed Saturday evening about 7:15 in front of Marion Ackerman's home on Crescent avenue. Owen Fleming, of Park avenue, in company with several companions, had left their wheels in front of the above residence and they were only absent a few minutes. When they returned Fleming's wheel was gone. It was an 1895 Crescent No. 1 and was the only one with a lighted lamp. The young man's father is so indignant about the matter that he says if he could capture the person he would give him the full penalty. The matter has been placed in the hands of the police.

A Prosperous Sunday School.

The annual meeting of the Sunday School of the Monroe Avenue chapel, was held yesterday afternoon. The annual report was read and showed the school to be in a very prosperous condition both financially and in numbers. It was decided that the chapel should unite with the home church, the First M. E., in their excursion to Asbury Park on August 4th.

The following officers were then unanimously elected: Superintendent, Walter McGee; treasurer, James McGee; secretary, Blanchard Randolph; librarian, Walter Douglass; assistant librarian, Allen Taylor.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

A GREAT WORK.

William D. Murray Tells of What the Y. M. C. A. is Doing for Men.

President Murray spoke yesterday at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. building on "The World Wide Work of the Young Men's Christian Association." The lines of work of which he particularly spoke were those carried on among the railroad and college men of the country. In speaking of the former, he referred to the magnificent structure to be erected for the use of the 3,700 railroad men who centre at St. Louis. The same architect who planned the finest railroad station in the world for the Terminal Company at that point has designed the building for the Y. M. C. A. at a cost of $75,000. The Terminal Company has leased to the St. Louis Y. M. C. A. a piece of land immediately adjoining and at the rear of the station that cost the company $25,000. The rental is to be one dollar per year on demand.

The expense of maintaining this building will be met by the railroad companies, while the management will be entirely under control of the Y. M. C. A.

The speaker gave a most encouraging account of the college work and in speaking of the work among young men in foreign lands told of a subscription of $20,000 which was secured for one of the Y. M. C. A. buildings in India by Mr. McConaughy, who spoke before the Y. M. C. A. of this city, last November.

In closing, Mr. Murray spoke of the work of one of the Y. M. C. A. Training Schools which is located at Springfield, Mass.

Music was furnished by members of Prof. Conde's Young Men's Symphony orchestra.

EPISCOPAL CONFIRMATIONS.

Bishop Scarborough Visits Three Plainfield Churches Yesterday.

St. Stephen's church was crowded last evening with those that came to attend the confirmation service. The church was specially decorated for the occasion. Easter and calla lilies and marguerites were placed on the altar while palms and potted plants were artistically grouped about the chancel and the font was almost hidden by palms and ferns. There were twelve to be confirmed, four boys and eight of the other sex. The girls were dressed in white, while all the women and girls wore the usual white veil. Bishop Scarborough made a very interesting address and then performed the ceremony in a very impressive manner.

A class of fourteen were confirmed at the Holy Cross P. E. church yesterday afternoon by Bishop Scarborough. There was a large congregation present and the church was beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants.

Bishop Scarborough visited Grace P. E. church yesterday morning and preached a powerful sermon, after which seven women and six men were confirmed by him. The attendance at the service was large and the music especially fine.

Plainfield Woman a Delegate.

A board meeting of the Federation of Clubs was held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. F. C. Young, on the Boulevard, Jersey City. Delegates were appointed for the coming convention of the General Federation, to be held in Louisville in May. State President Mrs. Margaret Yardley, Mrs. E. McCarthy, of Plainfield, and Miss Cecilia Gaines, the latter representing the Jersey City Woman's Club, will go to Louisville. The annual convention of the New Jersey Federation, in October, will this year be held in Jersey City.

Hurt His Leg.

While a gang of Italians were placing a rail into position on West Fourth street Saturday afternoon, in the construction of the street railroad, one end slipped and fell on the left leg of one of the Italians. A severe brasion of the skin resulted and the man was obliged to lay off for awhile.

A Still Alarm.

The fire department was called out at 6:35 o'clock this morning by a telephone message from the office of the Union Beef Company stating that a chimney on the house of James Higgins, next door, was on fire. The flames were put out with two extinguishers. The damage was slight.

Official Count at Elizabeth.

The official count of the Elizabeth election was finished Saturday. It gave John C. Rankin, Republican, for Mayor, 1,321 plurality over Frederick C. Marsh, Democrat. Patrick J. Ryan, Democrat, for Alderman-at-large, has a plurality of 238 over John D. Barr, Republican.

Had No License.

A peddler named Herman Simmer was fined $5 in the city court this morning for trying to work his trade without a license.

TALK OF THE HOSPATAL.

CORRESPONDENTS WRITE ABOUT THE PROPOSED NEW INSTITUTION

Sentiment That if the Muhlenberg Officials Make Concessions to Homœopathists—There Will be No New Hospital.

Is Muhlenberg Hospital going to admit homœopathic physicians? The publication in The Press on last Saturday of a meeting at the residence of E. B. Clark, of Crescent avenue, to consider the erection of a Homœopathic Hospital, has awakened public interest. Social as well as medical circles are greatly interested. From the time of the organization of the Muhlenberg Hospital to the present many of Plainfield's people who have favored homœopathy have felt that it was unwise to withstrict the admission of only old-school physicians. Those believing in homœopathic treatment, who have been there for treatment, have sorely complained of the rule preventing the attention of their family physician.

The exclusive announcement in The Press that the Board of Managers had finally decided to take up the matter for consideration has awakened general interest and hopes are expressed on all sides that a concession will shortly be reached, making the erection of a new hospital in Plainfield unnecessary.

According to an offer to open the columns of The Press for a general discussion of the subject, we publish below two letters:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I am sure that the citizens of Plainfield, irrespective of medical school, will honor the managers of Muhlenberg Hospital if they decide to throw open their doors to practitioners of all recognized schools. These are days of liberality, and even public institutions must keep step to the times to meet success.

Plainfield is proud of its hospital and few there are who would care to see a rival in our midst. Better far is one strong institution. Let the physicians of our city work in harmony and "pool" their differences.

Homœopath.

Here is another letter:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Having for many years been a friend of Muhlenberg Hospital, I rejoice to hear that public opinion is making itself felt there and that there is a prospect of a welcome being given to all medical schools to allow their practitioners to meet on common ground.

Plainfield is not ready, I think, to promise support to another hospital.

Liberal Allopath.

How New Brunswick Views It.

Over in Plainfield they have an excellent institution known as the Muhlenberg Hospital, but on account of allopathic physicians only being allowed to attend patients, there is much dissatisfaction, and friends of the homœopathic physicians threaten to withdraw their support from it and start a hospital of their own. The place is not large enough, however, to support two hospitals, and the presence of two of opposite methods of practice would be too much of a good thing for the pocketbooks of the benevolent to stand. Allopaths are employed exclusively in our Wells Memorial Hospital, and to that there has been little or no objection.—New Brunswick Home News.

Nature's Own Painting.

Consult any book on natural history and you will find a description of the curious looking beast in Barnum & Bailey's show called a blue-nosed mandrill. Most persons imagine this animal is painted the beautiful and brilliant colors which appear on its nose and on other parts of its body, but nature is the only painter the beast has ever had. The one with this show is the only one now in captivity anywhere, and with Johanna, the gorilla, a very great source of wonder.

To Elect Prohibition Delegates.

This evening the Prohibitionists of Union county will meet at Prohibition hall, 1132 Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth, for the purpose of electing thirty-two delegates to the State convention, which is called to meet at Y. M. C. A. hall, in the city of Trenton, on Wednesday, May 6th, 1896, at 10 a. m., for the purpose of electing twenty-eight delegates to the Prohibition National Convention to be held in Pittsburg, Pa., May 27, 1896, for the choosing of ten Presidential electors.

Found Dead in a Bath Tub.

Frederick Chamberlain, for many years superintendent of the Oxford Copper Company in Bayonne, was found dead in a bath tub yesterday morning at the home of A. W. Mackintosh in Elizabeth. He was the guest of Mr. Mackintosh for several weeks. It was first thought he had committed suicide, but the physicians say he died of apoplexy.

BOTH HAD GRIEVANCES.

A Negro and a Hebrew Have Trouble—Both Arrested and Discharged.

The case of Armsted Jackson, colored, against Himan Sherovitz, for false imprisonment, was brought before Justice Mosher this morning. It appears that a week ago last Saturday Jackson went into Sherovitz's store on Front street to purchase a pair of shoes. After trying on several pair he was unable to get a pair that suited. This displeased Sherovitz, and he so expressed himself. Later a pane of glass was broken in the latter's store and it was thought that Jackson did it. Sherovitz made a complaint against Jackson and Patrolman Totten arrested him. He was taken before Judge DeMeza who dismissed the case owing to a lack of evidence. This made Jackson angry so he had Sherovitz arrested for false imprisonment. When the case was tried before Justice Mosher this morning the latter threw it out, there not being evidence to hold the defendant. Joseph D. Runyon appeared for the plaintiff and Lawyer H. C. Runyon for the defendant.

READY TO TAKE $5,000,000.

Mr. Shroeder Believes He is the Heir to a Famous Opera Singer's Estate.

Henry Schrœder is the village barber in the little borough of South River, six miles from New Brunswick. Before he was the barber he was the Postmaster and he lost the latter for nothing worse than offensive partisanship. Now Mr. Schrœder has determined to give up his shop and return to Germany to take possession of a fortune to which he believes he is the heir. Some time ago he saw an advertisement in a German paper for heirs to the fortune of Terese Titiens, the famous singer. He hears that she left an estare now valued at $5,000,000, all of which he thinks he is entitled to. Titiens sang in this country in 1875. She died, Mr. Schrœder learns, in 1877.

She left the greater part of her wealth to her nephew, Peter Titiens, or Titjens, but the will was contested, and then legal controversy which followed dragged along for many years. Meanwhile the nephew died. Schrœder's mother was a first cousin of the singer. Having gathered together what proofs he had, he sent them to the attorney's mentioned in the advertisement, and a few days ago he received news that his claim was the best that had been discovered to the estate, and that it would be to his advantage to come to Hamburg. Mr. Schroeder is about fifty five years old. He has a family.

CORDAGE PLANT TO BE SOLD.

Valued at Nearly a Million Dollars—May Be Rebuilt.

The plant of the United States Cordage Company, of Elizabeth valued at nearly a million dollars, will be sold at the Court House by Sheriff Kyte to satisfy a mortgage held by the United States Trust Company, of New York, May 20th.

The tracts of land included in the big mortgage are located in various parts of Elizabeth, the largest being the site on which the cordage works once stood. It has a large water frontage. It is said that after the sale the works will be rebuilt and rope making resumed. The plans are now out.

Luckily No One Was in the Way.

As a westbound Royal Blue Line "flyer" was approaching the Berckman street bridge on the Jersey Central yesterday morning, one the heavy steps of the Pullman car attached suddenly gave way and was sent flying along the top of the embankment. The broken portion weighed about fifty pounds, and had there been any one in its path it would have undobbtely badly injured them.

Reception to Department Commander.

On Tuesday evening, April 28th, Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will give a reception to Department Commander White and staff in Grand Army Hall. Major Anderson Post, No. 109. Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, and the Sons of Veterans will also be present.

Bridges Haven't Been Built.

The residents of South avenue complain that although the depredators that tore up the bridges and did all sorts of other mischief in that vicinity have been arrested and the city has received their fines, the bridges have not yet been rebuilt.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. RACE FOR PRESIDENT

How the McKinley Campaign Stands To-day.

CONGRESSMAN GROSVENOR'S FIGURES

The Ohio Man's Strength Said To Be Increasing—376 Votes on the First Ballot the Estimate Now.

Washington, April 20.—The following is the statement given out by Gen. Grosvenor to-day, pursuant to the custom which has prevailed to announce the progress of the McKinley campaign in the press of each Monday. Gen. Grosvenor said: "Before giving you the situation as it stands to-day I want to call your attention to my first bulletin, which was issued before any delegates had been elected. At that time I predicted that the vote for McKinley on the first ballot would be 433. Kentucky, New Mexico and Utah have fallen below my estimate—five in Kentucky, one in New Mexico and one in Utah—while Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, Illinois, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, and Wisconsin have all gained. This comparison of the original estimate, which aggregates 433, with the actual results from elections in eighteen states, shows very clearly that the estimate was too low. There have been elected delegates in states that I did hot claim in that estimate—Minnesota, eighteen; New York, four, and Pennsylvania, two. And it will thus be seen that if the same ratio of gain is maintained to the end of the states forming my original prediction there will not only be the 433 delegates claimed, but there will be a clear majority of the convention in these states alone and in those in which I claimed nothing in my original estimate.

Condition of the Vote To-day.

Following is the present condition of the McKinley vote, including, as usual, the full vote of Ohio and Indiana: Alabama 12, Arkansas 16, Florida 8, Georgia 16, Illinois 10, Indiana 30, Kansas 20, Kentucky 11, Louisiana 8, Minnesota 18, Mississippi 18, Missouri 34, Nebraska 16, New Jersey 16, New Mexico 4, New York 4, Ohio 46, Oklahoma 4, Oregon 8, Pennsylvania 2, South Carolina 17, South Dakoto 8, Texas 12, Virginia 6, West Virginia 2, Wisconsin 24, Utah 1, North Carolina 2, North Dakota 6. Total, 376. In my report I exclude doubtful votes, and have failed to claim a number known to be for McKinley. I point to the vindication of my original estimate with some degree of satisfaction, and I state now that my present estimate of safe votes for McKinley on the first ballot is below the actual facts.

Second Choice Delegates.

"The most significant feature of the last week's elections is the great number of second choice instructions for McKinley. In this category may be classed New Hampshire, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and New York, and it is safe to say that there are now of well defined second choice delegates thoroughly committed to McKinley as such not less than 125. During the remainder of April there will be elections in Connecticut, Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Indian Territory, Alabama, Georgia, Illinois, Vermont and Arizona, in all eighty-four votes. Out of this number it is a very low and conservative estimate to claim for McKinley fifty delegates. Then will follow in the month of May conventions in the following states: California, Indiana, Michigan, Nevada, West Virginia, Montana, Missouri, Delaware, Colorado, Washington, Idaho, Wyoming and North Carolina, with 152 delegates unelected. It will be seen that the McKinley situation has not only constantly improved, but is rapidly approaching a triumphant conclusion."

Figuring for Mr. Reed.

The weekly bulletin furnished by representative J. Frank Aldrich of Illinois, giving the results of the republican presidential canvass from the standpoint of a friend of Mr. Reed, issued to-day, is as follows: The developments of the past week in the republican presidential contest have resulted in no material change in the relative standing of the leading candidates, notwithstanding the prediction made by Gen. Grosvenor seven days ago that "During the coming week McKinley's strength will grow rapidly by the conventions in Kentucky, Nebraska and New Jersey." Of the 20 votes confidently counted upon by him in Kentucky, Gov. Bradley has captured 16, and the failure to instruct for McKinley the 14 delegates elected from New Jersey was a significant disappointment. My last statement gave to Mr. Reed 111 delegates, to McKinley 169, to all other candidates 166 and 44 doubtful. In that table I credited Mr. Reed with two uninstructed delegates which, upon later information, I deem it fair to place in the doubtful column. With this single exception my figures of last week cannot be seriousl disputed. The figures herewith presented have been carefully compiled from reports received every day and verified by replies received from telegrams sent to various states Saturday. I have placed sixteen additional delegates in the doubtful column, twelve of which are from New Jersey. Of the 604 delegates elected to date McKinley has just about 35½ per cent. If he continues at this rate to the end he will have 325 votes of a total of 918, when the convention assembles, exactly the number that the friends of Mr. Reed and the other candidates have conceded to him from the active commencement of the campaign. The figures to-day are Reed, 128; McKinley, 214; all other candidates, 198; doubtful, 64; total, 604.

AMERICAN MEATS.

Our Consuls in Germany Publish the Regulations Governing Exports.

Berlin, April 20.—The United States consuls in Germany have published in the local papers in their respective consular districts the regulations governing the export of American meats from the United States, with a view of dispelling the German prejudice against the American product. The Strasburg Post, in commenting on these regulations, says: "The provisions of the American law are clear and sufficient, nevertheless official examinations of American meats made here prove that the meats imported are bad, and that the law, therefore, cannot be stringently enforced." The Berlin Neueste Nachrichten professes to know, upon good authority, that practices exist in the American meat packing business that would so disgust foreign consumers did they know them, as to forever deter them from touching American packed meats. In view of these and other expressions inspired by commercial jealousy American meat does not grow in favor in Germany.

MUST REINSTATE GAVIN.

K. of P's Rule Against Gamblers Declared Not To Be Retroactive.

Denver, April 20.—Jos. K Gavin has been ordered reinstated in the Knights of Pythias by the supreme tribunal, which has been in session here for three days. The case is one of national importance. Gavin is a gambler and saloonkeeper. Under a recent ruling of the order withholding membership from persons of these occupations Gavin was expelled. He took an appeal, claiming that he was entitled to membership, as he was in the order before the new rule was promulgated, and that there could not be any retroactive legislation. The case was contested at the regular annual meeting, but no decision was reached until the present action. It is probable that he will be tried under another rule, that of maintaining a gambling house and saloon as derogatory to the dignity of the order. Gavin is one of the best known sports in the western country, controlling numerous gambling houses in all the principal cities and mining camps in Colorado.

SHOVEL TRUST FORMED.

Prices Already Advanced 20 Per Cent. and Output Curtailed.

Boston, April 20.—It has come to light that representatives from all the fourteen shovel factories in the United States met secretly in Boston a few days ago and formed a combination. The factories are located in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Beaver Falls, St. Louis, Terre Haute, Ind., and Anderson, Ind. Organization will be completed at another meeting in Boston late this week. The trust has already advanced the price 20 per cent., and since April 9 not an order has been booked at the old quotations. It is proposed to limit the output to 400,000 dozen a year, which is about the limit of the country's demand. None of the plants in the trust will be permitted to increase its output and should one sell more than it manufactures the privilege of the placing the order must be purchased from the trust.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS CELL.

The Crazy Man Who Called at the White House Last Friday Kills Himself.

Washington, April 20.—On Friday last a man giving his name as Henry A. Anderson of Chicago called at the executive mansion and endeavored to secure an interview with President Cleveland. Anderson claimed to have a number of inventions suitable for a hunter's use, that he thought the president would like to have. His invention included a patent boat which had a speed of 100 miles per hour, a gun that would kill forty-eight ducks at one shot, etc. The officers sent Anderson to a police station to await an examination as to his sanity. Yesterday he was found dead in his cell, having committed suicide by hanging himself to the bars of the grating to his cell door.

SOCIALIST PRESS JUBILANT.

Berlin Employes To Have a General Holliday on May 1.

Berlin, April 20.—The Berlin employers have agreed to give their employes a general holiday on May 1, for the purpose, as they allege, of enabling them to attend the trades exhibition, which takes place on that day. The socialist newspapers are jubilant over this concession on the part of the employers, and ascribe it to the recent socialist manifesto threatening a boycott against all employers who do not join in the celebration of May day.

Washington, April 20.—At St. Patrick's church in this city yesterday Rev. Thomas O'Forman, professor of modern ecclesiastical hftory at the Catholic university, was consecrated bishop of Sioux Falls, S. D., with all the dignity, grandeur and solemnity prescribed by the ritual of the Catholic church.

CLERKS BY THE YEAR

Efforts To Provide Annual Clerical Aid for Congressman.

HOUSE TO CONSIDER IT TO-DAY

Now Only Employed While Congress Is in Session—If Successful It Will Cost the Government Nearly Half a Million Dollars Annually.

Washington, April 20.—The house committee on accounts will report today, without recommendation, the resolution providing for the employment of clerks to members the whole year round, instead of during the session of congress only. The question was recently agitated anew in connection with the report of the conferees on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. It was stated then that the senate had amended the bill so as to provide each member of that body, not a chairman of a committee, thirty-eight in all, a clerk at a salary of $1,500 a year. The house conferees had not agreed to the amendment, but Gen. Bingham Franklin stated that he saw no outcome of the struggle except that the concurrence by the house in the senate's proposition. There was a feeling in the house that its members should have the same assistance, and the resolution referred to was introduced to secure it. The committee was evenly divided on the question, and it was decided to instruct Chairman Aldrich to report it without recommendation, which he will do to-day. The members will then have an opportunity, as Mr. Cannon said the other day, to secure annual clerks for themselves, if a majority of them have the courage to go on record as favoring the proposition. Mr. Cannon is of opinion that the resolution will be passed, that "the house is stacked for it," but Mr. Aldrich believes that it will be defeated. To provide these clerks at $1,200 a year, the same rate as their present pay, will cost $432,000 annually.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS.

Programme of the Work Before the Senate and House.

Washington, April 20.—To-day is suspension day in the house—that is to say, a day on which it is in order to take up bills for immediate passage under suspension of the rules. That will be followed by the general pension bill reported on Fridry last. By the terms of this bill discontinuance of pensions except for fraud, or error, or recovery from disabilities, are made unlawful. Chairman Pickler estimates that the restorations of pensions and additional expenditure authorized by the bill will amount to two or three millions a year. Mr. Cannon will afterward call up the general deficiency bill. Wednesday and Thuasday have been set aside for a discussion of the bankruptcy bill, on which a vote is to be taken by the house on Friday. In the senate an effort will probably be made to antagonize Mr. Peffer's pending bond purchase investigation resolution by calling up the Indian appropriation bill. The naval appropriation bill has been ready for consideration for ten days, and Mr. Hale is very anxious to dispose of it. Mr. Gorman is credited with an intention of attacking the provision for four new battleships. He proposes to reduce this number to two and to substitute for the battleships stricken out small sized gunboats for use in rivers and shallow waters.

TUBERCULOSIS IN CATTLE.

New York's State Board of Health To Make War on the Disease.

Albany, April 20.—The state board of health has laid plans which, it hopes, will result in stamping out tuberculosis among the dairy herds of the state. The board has reached a conclusion to demand that the legislature appropriate enough money to enable the health authorities to eradicate the disease and will next year ask for an appropriation of $300,000 to carry on the work.

Reduced Rates for Smelting Gold Ores.

Denver, April 20.—The Philadelphia Smelting company, controlling the industry in the United States and Mexico, has announced a reduction in the rates for smelting gold ores. The former cost was $13 a ton for silicious ores and now the rates will be $9 a ton on all grades.

FOR CHEAPER BICYCLE

Makers of High Grade Wheels Said To Be Organizing.

WILL DO AWAY WITH MIDDLEMEN

$100 Bikes May Soon Be Sold for $65—Jobbers' Profits and Advertising About $50 on Each Bicycle Sold.

New York, April 20.—A special to a morning newspaper from Boston says: Within a week from this time, if present plans are not altered, there will be a revolution in the bicycle business in this country. Nearly all of the makers of high-grade wheels have organized a corporation with $10,000,000 paid up bona fide capital. They will dispense with middlemen and jobbers. It is not a "trust" in the offensive sense of the word, but a legitimate combination to do away with superfluous expenses. It is announced that the price of high grade wheels will be cut from the present standard of $100 to $65. The identity of the firms that are in the corporation is being kept a secret. So is the identity of the officers and all kindred details. The eastern managers of the enterprise keep the prospectus under lock and key, and will not give out any tangible facts until all their plans are perfected. Boston will probably be the headquarters of the corporation. The present standard price of a high grade wheel is $100. It costs to make it in the factory thirty dollars; fifteen dollars more is spent for advertising and thirty-five dollars goes to the jobber. The rest of the $100 is profit to the maker. The problem is to annihilate that thirty-five dollars and fifteen dollars. The incorporators of the new concern think that they have solved it in a way to bring them increased returns and, at the same time, enormously reduce the cost of conducting their business.

GREATER NEW YORK BILL.

Some Doubt of Its Passage by the Assembly Over the Mayors' Vetoes.

Albany, April 20.—The important event in the legislature this week is the consideration of the Greater New York bill and the decision by the assembly as to whether the bill will go to the governor over the vetoes of the mayors of New York and Brooklyn. The vetoes had but little weight in the senate when they were considered by the members of the upper house, but there seems to be some doubt in the minds of some of the leaders in the assembly as to whether the bill will pass there. It was in the lower house that the bill met with much opposition when it was first passed, and those who are interested against the measure say that the vote upon passing it over the vetoes of the mayors will be a close one. It is expected that there will be another lengthy argument when the bill comes up. The advocates of consolidation are confident that the bill will be successful to-morrow.

Methodist Love Feast.

Gloversville, N. Y., April 20.—The Methodist Episcopal conference love feast began at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and was conducted by Rev. W. H. Meeker. The ordination of deacons by Bishop Fowler followed. At 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon the elders were ordained by the bishop and at 3 o'clock the conference memorial service was held in the First Methodist Episcopal church. The evening sermon was delivered by Rev. J. F. Goucher of Baltimore.

Railroad Incorporated.

Denver, April 20.—William A. Linn and Francis C. Hatch of New York; Fred C. Gay and Charles A Marriner of Los Angeles, and Charles W. Franklin of Denver, have incorporated the Costa Rica-Pacific Railroad company, with a capital stock of $1,500,000. The company proposes to construct a railroad from the city of San Jose, Costa Rica, in a westerly direction to the Pacific ocean.

Lively Yachting Season Promised.

New London, Conn., April 20.—The yachting season promises to be a lively one in this section, and a score or more of steam and sail craft which wintered here are being put in readiness for cruising.

CRANK INVADES A CHURCH.

With a Drawn Revolver He Denounces Religion in Front of the Pulpit.

Oakland, Cal., April 20.—A crank with a revolver created a stampede in the Unitarian church here yesterday. Prof. Griggs of Stanford university, who filled the pulpit in the absence of the pastor, was about to open service when a roughly dressed young man walked up the aisle, and halting in front of the pulpit platform, drew a pistol and announced his intention of being heard. In a loud voice he denounced religion as a humbug, stating that he could prove upon the authority of Prof. Leconte, President Jordan of Stanford and other distinguished scientists, that man descended from the lower animals. Col. John Irish came forward to reason with the intruder, but the stranger levelled the revolver at the colonel, who stood his ground and dared him to approach. While Col. Irish was endeavoring to calm the crank, two members of the congregation slipped up behind him and pinioned his arms before he could do anything. Meantime half of the congregation had made their exit in terror, while Prof. Griggs fled by a rear door. The stranger was taken to the police station where he gave the name of Lewis Borges of Portland, Ore. He is regarded as a harmless lunatic.

REBEL DEFEATS REPORTED.

War News Given Out by the Officials at Havana.

Havana, April 20.—Nothing is known here of the movements of Gomez and Maceo. An official report has been issued of an engagement of the troops with Mirabel's command at Guanabo, province of Havana, and the killing of ten of the insurgents. Another report gives the details of a fight with the rebels commanded by Lecret and Collazo on the Jesus Maria estate near Jovellanos, province of Matanzas. The rebel loss was three killed and a number wounded. The Spaniards, according to the reports, sustained no losses in either engagement. Aside from the above fights, war news is scarce, and the official reports are insignificant. It is said that Jose Maceo, with a strong force, is near La Salud, province of Havana, and that Mayia Rodriguez, from Camaguey, has entered the province of Matanzas.

MATABELE UPRISING GROWING.

Dynamite Mines Laid Around Buluwayo To Protect the Town.

Cape Towa, April 20.—A dispatch from Buluwayo, dated yesterday, says that the number of rebellious Matabeles is increasing daily and that they are massing closer to the town. A dynamite train, that is arranged to be fired by electricity, has been laid on the outskirts and along the streets. The mines are all connected with the central laager and can be exploded separately. On Saturday night some of the Matabeles changed their position. It is believed that they moved southward to attempt to prevent the advance of the 500 men from Mafeking who are marching to the relief of Buluwayo.

MRS. TUCKER IN CALIFORNIA.

The New Commander of the Salvation Army Grandly Received.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 20.—The arrival of Mrs. Booth-Tucker, the new commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, was signalized by the greatest rally the army has ever held in southern California. Soldiers were in line from every city in the state. Mrs. Tucker spoke briefly at last night's meeting, making only a passing reference to the secession of her brother, Ballington Booth, who, she hoped, would soon see the error of his ways and return to the fold.

THE NICARAGUA REVOLT.

Gen. Zelaya Gains Three Victories Over the Rebels.

New York, April 20.—A special cable dispatch to the Herald from Managua, Nicaragua, says: As a result of Zelaya's presence in the field he has gained three victories—the first at La Caiba Mocha, two miles distant from Nagarote; the second at Las Limas, one of the best rebel stragetic positions, which was captured; the third defeat being at Santamita, near Momotombo. The federal concentration of forces at Leon is augementing.

EIGHT HOURS AGITATION.

General Strike of Carpenters and Horseshoers Expected on May 1.

St. Louis, April 20.—A general strike for an eight-hour day by the union carpenters and horseshoers of the United States is expected by the labor organizations of St. Louis to occur May 1. It is positively stated that every union horseshoer in the United States and every union carpenter, save those in St. Louis, will walk out on that day and will remain out until they have secured the shorter hours.

Death of Robert L. Day.

South Framingham, Mass., April 20.—Robert L. Day, the senior member of the well known banking and brokerage firm of R. L. Day & Co. of Boston died here very suddenly yesterday afternoon, aged 76 years, at his residence on Newtown place. Death was due to an attack of heart failure. For many years he was cashier of the Maverick National bank of Boston, but left that institution about twenty years ago to start in business for himself and has since amassed a large fortune.

Hartford's "Jack the Hugger" Arrested.

Hartford, April 20.—Max Gerstel, 26 years old, an architect, who was arrested Saturday night, is believed to be "Jack the Hugger," who has terrified many women in this city the past month. He has been fully identified by women whom he assaulted. He will be tried to-day.

TO SUPPRESS DUELING

The Subject Will Come Up in the Reichstag To-morrow.

KAISER IS OPPOSED TO THE REFORM

Another Majuba Hill Disaster Predicted for the English—German Press Comment on the United States' Position Regarding Cuba.

Berlin, April 20.—The time of the introduction in the reichstag of the centrist interpellation in opposition to the practice of dueling has been fixed for to-morrow, and if the government should fail to make a satisfactory statement in regard to the matter the centrists will either offer motions demanding the suppression of dueling or support the resolution of the freisinnigs demanding thas the chief authorities of the respective federal states shall exert all their powers to put a stop to the custom, especially in the army. The debate upon this matter will afford the freisinnigs and socialists a splendid opportunity to assail the emperor's repeated remission of sentences imposed upon duelists after they had spent a brief and easy term of confinement in a fortress.

Want Dueling Absolutely Prohibited.

Both the centre and the freisinnig parties are desirous that the government shall issue an edict of such a character as will absolutely prevent recourse to dueling, without reference to a military court of honor, whose decisions have frequently rendered duels imperative. It was the action of the military court in expelling Lieberecht von Kotze from his rank as an officer for neglecting to challenge Boron von Schraeder and sueing him for libel in a civil court instead that eventually caused the fatal encounter between the two men. The emperor himself thought that Kotze ought to fight, and consequently quashed the decision of the military court, thus enabling Kotze to regain his position as an officer and fulfil the requirements of the military code by sending a challenge to Schraeder. It is not expected, therefore, that the emperer will instruct the ministers to promise what the centrists and freisinnigs demand.

Predicts Another Majuba Hill Disaster.

Next to dueling the leading cause of popular excitement is the preparation which England is taking for action against the Transvaal. All of the Austrian and Italian influences in the councils of the dreibund, which have been thrown on the side of England, will become paralyzed if events shall confirm the suspicion entertained by Germany that Great Britain intends to coerce the Boers. The peaceful assurance given by the British ministers and British parliament are distrusted here. The North German Gazette cautiously advises delay in the dispatch of English troops to South Africa, in deference to President Kruger's peace policy, but the unofficial and more outspoken Tageblatt sees plan on the part of Great Britain to use the Matabele rising as a pretext for sending forces to Cape Colony. The Vossische Zeitung approves the action of the Boers in arming themselves to protect their independence, and predicts another Majuba Hill disaster for England.

American Intervention in Cuba.

Although the report that President Cleveland has offered the friendly services of the United States in settling the Cuban troubles is not confirmed, the North German Gazette, in an intensely hostile criticism thereon, written upon the assumption that the report is true, tells Spain to decline positively to admit that the president of the United States has any right to tender his advice in the Cuban matter, or rather to tell the American government to mind its own business. The Vossische Zeitung says: "If the United States government gives effect to the resolutions passed by the two houses of congress recognizing the Cubans as belligerents Spain must tolerate the act. She cannot go to war with the United States, but America cannot expect any European state, however weak or distressed, to submit without protest to any such interference." The United Press finds excellent reasons for stating that the views expressed by the two newspapers above quoted do not represent the opinion of the kaiser, who thinks that Spain ought not to reject the friendly diplomacy of the president of the United States, but rather should show willingness to negotiate with and assist the government at Washington to find a way to reach a settlement of the Cuban question.

Retired from Active Business.

Cincinnati, April 20.—Perry S. Heath, who for over two years has been president and general manager of the Commercial Gazette, has sold his interests in that company and retired from the directory and management. In disposing of his interests in the paper he simply took advantage of opportunities to make a handsome profit and get a respite from active business.

Sultan May Visit Russia.

Berlin, April 20.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says it is reported there that the sultan of Turkey has accepted an autograph invitation from the czar to visit Moscow and St. Petersburg. The date of the sultan's visit has not been fixed, the dispatch says, but it is possible that it may occur at the time of the czar's coronation.

The milkmen of Newark have made a combine to keep up prices. It won't do for them, however, to water their stock.

Now that New York is working under the Raines bill, Jersey City is in the throes of a discussion seeking to make it a dry town on Sundays. Still there is Hoboken.

Last week's issue of the New Jersey Contractor was an anniversary edition, and consisted of a number of extra pages. The Contractor fills a peculiar journalistic field with success.

Hereafter applicants for membership in the Union Fire Department of Roselle will be required to show their ability by a physical test. Each will be required to run a quarter of a mile, and pull his share on the ropes. What a lot of exempts there would be in the Plainfield department if this rule was adopted and enforced.

It is, indeed, surprising that Plainfield people have not given more liberal patronage to the art and loan exhibition of the Camera Club. Nothing more creditable has ever been arranged by local enterprise, and the evident slight attention that has been given it in the way of paying attendtendance is no incentive for the club to make it an annual affair, as was their intention.

The women of Plainfield have formed a town improvement association, elected officers and propose to take an active interest in the management and beautifying our neighboring city. In Summit, Montclair and New Brunswick the ladies have been of much help in making those towns attractive by looking after the many details which escape the average aldermanic eye. We believe that Morristown with its many beauties could be made more attractive were an organization of ladies formed whose only object would be to improve the town.—Morristown Chronicle.

Senator Sewell's phrase, objecting to "putting a collar on the delegates to St. Louis," is altogether delightfully amusing. It demonstrates that the numerous attacks upon the Senator for placing his collar on Jerseymen have made the phrase a convenient one to him. It is the invariable rule that speakers who are not especially gifted with eloquence are driven to the use of terms which are most familiar; and that many men dislike most the treatment to which they subject others with greatest cheerfulness. —Newark Call.

Seriously, there is not room for two hospitals in this city, and if the Muhlenberg Board of Governors are willing to make concessions which will admit homœopathists to practice in that institution, that should be accepted as the best settlement of the present apparent injustice to the practitioners and patrons of the homœopathic school. It is doubtful if Plainfield can properly support two hospitals, and a significant fact appertaining thereto is that out of the $1,700 or $1,800 subscribed by Plainfielders for the maintnance of the Muhlenberg hospital, only about $300 is contributed by persons of homœopathic belief. Of course, if a new hospital was started it would doubtless receive a more liberal support from the homœopathists than is at present given to the Muhlenberg hospital, because the prohibitive rule of the present institution relative to homœopathic practice is a species of "taxation without representation" that many people are disinclined to countenance by financial support. But the practibility of each school maintaining an institution for the exclusive practice of their own methods seems doubtful. The best expedient is for the Muhlenberg officials to make the desired concessions and admit the two schools to practice in the institution. 'Better late than never" in this instance.

It is said that the commissioners for the opening of Watchung avenue are at variance with one another, and this is the reason why they have arrived at no decision to report to the Council. The Press further understands that there is a strong probability of the commission being discharged at the next meeting of the Council on the ground that it is illegal in having I. W. Rushmore as a member. Mr. Rushmore is a member of the Y. M. C. A. which expects to receive damages from the opening of the avenue, and it is claimed that he is an interested party and unfit to act as one of the commissioners. As a matter of fact, it is claimed that the contention in the commission is over the amount of damages that the Y. M. C. A. shall receive, Mr. Rushmore insisting on a larger amount than the other two commissioners think is proper. The opening of this avenue is an improvement that the city demands, and there should be as little delay as possible in accomplishing it.

THEATRICAL.

The theatre going people of Plainfield are willing to grant a respectful welcome to a new dramatic author, and never fail to show substantial favors, when the offering proves worthy of serious consideration, therefore it is right to presume that there will be a representative gathering at the performance to be given at Music Hall next Friday, when Mr. Russ Whytal's singularly successful romantic play of southern interest "For Fair Virginia" will appeal for favors. This piece has created more genuine wholesome criticism of a pleasant kind than any play in recent years. At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, last season it met with instant cordial approval on account of its superior merits in more than one respect. Mr. Whytal, the author of "For Fair Virginia" has aimed in the proper direction and if he never again succeeds as well as he has done with his first effort, his name will hold a high place in the esteem of the public for having at least provided one meritorious stage creation. Those who enjoy a Southern romantic play, will find "For Fair Virginia" extremely interesting. Mr. and Mrs. Whytal, both have prominent places in a cast of unexcelled talent and special praise has been bestowed upon the scenic and artistic features.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE BICYCLE MAIDEN.

More Numerous at Washington Than Anywhere Else.

Many Who, a Few Years Ago, Looked with Horror Upon Wheels Are Now Enthusiastic Devotees of the Sport.

[Special Washington Letter.]

There can be no doubt of the truth of the couplet: "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." It may also as truly be said that in spring a young woman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of bicycles. At any rate, there is no doubt that the ladies of the national capital are infatuated with the wheel.

Whether our girls are braver than the girls in other parts of the United States or not, it is certainly true that there are more lady riders in Washington than in any other city in the country. The riding of bicycles by women was a few years ago regarded as one of the wonderful things to come in the 20th century; one of those events that are to precede and foreshadow the coming of the millenium. The ease with which the world has accepted this advance of progress, contrary to the general expectation, is, perhaps, but characteristic of the present civilization, which takes everything that comes as a matter of course, and simply wonders what the next move will be. Washington has the honor of having harbored the mind that conceived the idea of making a bicycle suitable for a lady's use, as well as of owning, as one of its fair citizens, the first lady who had the courage to brave the world and push pedals from a saddle hung between two wheels instead of three. Women on wheels had then long been an ordinary sight on the streets, but there were always more than two wheels to each woman.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, at one time a candidate for the presidency, rode a bicycle in this city for several years before any other woman in the country dared to do so. She used a very heavy machine, and did not present a very graceful figure on the public highway, but she was a fearless, independent character and pursued the even tenor of her way regardless of the gibes and sneers of youths who gazed at her with wondering eyes as she traversed our streets.

When women first began to use the wheels, many physicians looked lugubriously at them and made all sorts of predictions indicative of disasters not only to the health of the venturesome ladies, but also to the future health of the human race. But the majority of people, it would seem, do not take much stock in the theory that the exercise gives rise to spinal complaint, if one may judge from the great success of the dealers in wheels. Notwithstanding the hue and cry, there are several instances in Washington of well-known physicians buying wheels for their daughters simply because they believe that the exercise would be good for them. It is said that one never sees a homely woman riding a horse, and it will just as surely be the case, according to the enthusiasts, that one will never see a girl on a bicycle who has not some claims to beauty. Good health and physical vigor are the only real secrets of genuine beauty.

Healthful exercise, not severe nor excessive training, brings into play all of the muscles of the body, while it does not fail to give an impetus to the blood that it seldom gets otherwise. Both of these results can hardly fail to be healthful. The warm, bright color that comes to the cheeks is a sign of health. The hearty appetite that is engendered by a brisk run before dinner is the healthiest sort of hunger. The feeling of weariness that makes the pillow so inviting means a strong body in the morning; and all combined serve to complete the work of health-giving and health-preserving that is begun when a person makes his or her initial bow to the world, but is often broken off at an early point in life.

The springtime here is not of long duration, for we speedily rush into summer, because we live in the south temperate zone. But by our proximity to Chesapeake bay, which is really a part of the Atlantic ocean, we are constantly favored with cool breezes from the south and southeast, so that it is very seldom that any of our days are too hot for cycling. Consequently the girls enjoy themselves as they choose, in coteries, groups or clubs, as well as singly. They traverse the miles and miles of smooth asphalt streets of the city, and also travel the country roads over the historic heights surrounding Washington; and very often they wheel across the Aqueduct bridge, over into Virginia, to Arlington cemetery, where they draw from the depths of the well in the rear of the Lee mansion the pure cool water, and drink from the rim of the old oaken bucket, the iron bound bucket, the moss covered bucket, which hangs in that well.

Our pretty girls are brave, and do not want long to suffer the humiliating presence of a man's hand on the rear mud guard to steady the machines. It is some little trouble to learn to ride, but the girls become very independent when once they feel that they have mastered the wheel. When first venturing to ride the treacherous steel steed a girl feels that if she could only wear trousers she could easily learn to ride; but she wears dresses, and dresses she must continue to wear. Moreover, she cannot ride on a side saddle. She must bestride the bicycle like an Amazonian and fight her own battle for success. If she would not have the wheel eating up whole yards of flounces and furbelows she must have a dres made for bicycling and for nothing else, in order to attain the greatest proficiency. There is nothing as constant as failure and accident to a beginner, whether on a bicycle or off of it, and the more a lady observes the rule never to go to the bicycle school in her street dress, but to have a special costume for the purpose of being torn to pieces by the raging wheel, the quicker she will learn and the more graceful she will look when she has fully mastered the art of sitting upright on a wheel's saddle. Our girls very speedily learn this fact, and therefore very speedily learn to ride like Centaurs.

With many miles of smooth paved streets, which are kept scrupulously clean, our girls have plenty of room for their exercise and enjoyment, while the roads contiguous to the city are always kept in excellent condition. Therefore it is that our girls are exceptionally graceful riders. They do not lean forward and become round-shouldered. In our riding schools the teacher does not try to impart very much grace to his pupil at first. He humors his patient, as it were, and lets her have about her own way. When she has learned to make her wheels go round without tumbling and can manage the machine without help, then he begins to tell her things about style in riding that makes her blush a little, perhaps, but which are wholesome truths. He shows her how to sit on the saddle without having more than half her dress skirt on one side, and then he gives her modest and respectful points as to the disposition of her garments when on the wheel that she often thanks him for afterward when he is not around. He adjusts the saddle and handle bar so that her arms are stretched out to their full extent when she holds the handles and her feet reach the pedals without any length of limb to spare. Should he fail to do this and let her wheel go without proper adjustment she would present a most awkward appearance, with her arms crooked and her back bent over, while her knees would threaten at every revolution of the pedals to knock against the handle.

Thus, with good teaching, good roads, good company and a good climate, it is no wonder that the girls become graceful, healthful, strong and wholly ignorant of the meaning of "that tired feeling" of which the parlor plants prate all through life.

The girl who is a parlor plant can never know the real happiness which is the companion of health and strength. There is no immodesty in exercise, but there is supreme folly in laziness and shiftlessness. Every girl should be cultured and ladylike, always gentle and affectionate; but no girl should be sickly, weak and helpless, for lack of proper exercise. Bicycling is commendable, because it is sensible and beneficial. It is better than dancing, and equal to horsewomanship. Try it.

Glass of Fifty Years Ago.

"The glazier of 50 years ago," said a Maine man of experience in the business, "worked differently from what we do to-day. Glass was very costly then compared with present prices and much of it was so warped and crooked it would be a curiosity in these times. Owing to the cost we had to be very careful in setting it and the glazier of that day had to be a woodcarver as well as a man of putty. The warped panes had to be laid into the sash and their shape 'scribed on the wood underneath. This was then cut away so as to make the glass fit into place. Nowadays the glass is tolerably true, and besides it is so cheap that we never stand for a fit. It is sprung into place and if it breaks it is thrown aside. The old crooked glass was, some of it, of superior quality. This was known as Boston crown glass or Berkshire crystal. It was clearer and more brilliant than most modern glass. Only the better quality of houses had this kind, but there are still many old residences throughout Maine in which it may be found."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Good Cause for Doubt.

"There is only one thing," she said to her dearest girl friend, "that makes me doubt Herbert's affection for me!"

"What is that?"

"He thinks that some of the snapshot photographs he has taken of me are good likenesses."—Tit-Bits.

a million killed

would make no impression on the number of the germs of consumption that exist in one affected lung. All germs are little enough, but those which cause consumption are very minute. Cod-liver oil won't kill them. We don't know a remedy which will. The germs float in the air and we can't keep from breathing them into our lungs. Then why don't all of us have consumption? Because a healthy throat, sound lungs, and a strong constitution won't allow the germs to gain a foothold.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, restores and maintains the strength, increases the weight, heals inflamed membranes and prevents serious lung trouble. This is why it is the food-medicine in coughs, colds, loss of flesh, and general debility.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

CHAPTER I.

WARE WOLF!

I HAD afterwards such good reason to look back upon and remember the events of that afternoon, that Catherine's voice seems to ring in my brain even now. I can shut my eyes and see again, after all these years, what I saw then—just the blue summer sky, and one gray angle of the keep, from which a fleecy cloud was trailing like the smoke from a chimney. I could see no more because I was lying on my back, my head resting on my hands. Marie and Croisette, my brothers, were lying by me in exactly the same posture, and a few yards away on the terrace, Catherine was sitting on a stool Gil had brought out for her. It was the second Thursday in August, and hot. Even the jackdaws were silent. I had almost fallen asleep, watching my cloud grow longer and longer, and thinner and thinner, when Croisette, who cared for heat no more than a lizard, spoke up sharply: "Mademoiselle," he said, "why are you watching the Cahors road?"

I had not noticed that she was doing so. But something in the keenness of Croisette's tone, taken perhaps with the fact that Catherine did not at once answer him, aroused me; and I turned to her. And lo! she was blushing in the most heavenly way, and her eyes were full of tears, and she looked at us adorably. And we all three sat up on our elbows, like three puppy dogs, and looked at her. And there was a long silence. And then she said quite simply to us: "Boys, I am going to be married to M. de Pavannes."

I fell flat on my back and spread out my arms. "Oh, mademoiselle!" I cried reproachfully.

"Oh, mademoiselle!" cried Marie. And he fell flat on his back, and spread out his arms and moaned. He was a good brother, was Marie, and obedient.

And Croisette cried: "Oh, mademoiselle!" too. But he was always ridiculous in his ways. He fell flat on his back, and flopped his arms and squealed like a pig.

Yet he was sharp. It was he who first remembered our duty, and went to Catherine, cap in hand, where she sat half angry and half confused, and said, with a fine redness in his cheeks: "Mlle. de Caylus, our cousin, we give you joy, and wish you long life; and are your servants and the good friends and aiders of M. de Pavannes in all quarrels, as—"

But I could not stand that. "Not so fast, St. Croix de Caylus," I said, pushing him aside—he was ever getting before me in those days—and taking his place. Then, with my best bow, I began: "Mademoiselle, we give you joy and long life, and are your servants and the good friends and aiders of M. de Pavannes in all quarrels, as—as—"

"As becomes the cadets of your house," suggested Croisette, softly.

"As becomes the cadets of your house," I repeated. And then Catherine stood up and made me a low bow, and we all kissed her hand in turn, beginning with me and ending with Croisette, as was becoming. Afterwards Catherine threw her handkerchief over her face—she was crying—and we three sat down, Turkish fashion, just where we were, and said: "Oh, Kit!" very softly

But presently Croisette had something to add. "What will the Wolf say?" he whispered to me.

"Ah! To be sure!" I exclaimed, aloud. I had been thinking of myself before; but this opened quite another window. "What will the Vidame say, Kit?"

She dropped her handkerchief from her face, and turned so pale that I was sorry I had spoken—apart from the kick Croisette gave me. "Is M. de Bezers at his house?" she asked, anxiously.

"Yes," Croisette answered. "He came in last night from St. Antonin, with very small attendance."

The news seemed to set her fears at rest instead of augmenting them, as I should have expected. I suppose they were rather for Louis de Pavannes than for herself. Not unnaturally, too, for even the Wolf could scarcely have found it in his heart to hurt our cousin. Her slight, willowy figure, her pale, oval face and gentle brown eyes, her pleasant voice, her kindness, seemed to us boys, and in those days, to sum up all that was womanly. We could not remember, not even Croisette, the youngest of us—who was 17, a year junior to Marie and myself—we were twins—the time when we had not been in love with her.

But let me explain how we four, whose united ages scarce exceeded 70 years, came to be lounging on the terrace in the holiday stillness of that afternoon. It was the summer of 1572. The great peace, it will be remembered, between the Catholics and the Huguenots had not long been declared; the peace which in a day or two was to be solemnized, and, as most Frenchmen hoped, to be cemented by the marriage of Henry of Navarre with Margaret of Valois, the king's sister. Vicomte de Caylus, Catherine's father and our guardian, was one of the governors appointed to see the peace enforced; the respect in which he was held by both parties—he was a Catholic, but no bigot. God rest his soul!—recommending him for this employment. He had therefore gone a week or two before to Bayonne, his province. Most of our neighbors in Quercy were likewise from home, having gone to Paris to be witnesses on one side or the other of the royal wedding. And consequently we young people, not greatly checked by the presence of good-natured, sleepy Mme. Claude, Catherine's duenna, were disposed to make the most of our liberty and to celebrate the peace in our own fashion.

We were country folk. Not one of us had been to Pau, much less to Paris. The vicomte held stricter views than were common then upon young people's education; and, though we had learned to ride and shoot, to use our swords and toss a hawk, and to read and write, we knew little more than Catherine herself of the world; little more of the pleasures and sins of court life, and not one-tenth as much as she did of its graces. Still, she had taught us to dance and make a bow. Her presence had softened our manners; and of late we had gained something from the frank companionships of Louis de Pavannes, a Huguenot whom the vicomte had taken prisoner at Moncontour and held to ransom. We were not, I think, mere clownish yokels.

But we were shy. We disliked and shunned strangers. And when old Gil appeared suddenly, while we were still chewing the melancholy cud of Kit's announcement, and cried sepulchrally: "M. le Vidame de Bezers to pay his respects to mademoiselle!"—Well, there was something like a panic, I confess!

We scrambled to our feet, muttering: "The Wolf!" The entrance at Caylus is by a ramp rising from the gateway to the level of the terrace. This sunken way is fenced by low walls so that one may not—when walking on the terrace—fall into it. Gil had spoken before his head had well risen to view, and this gave us a moment, just a moment. Croisette made a rush for the doorway into the house; but failed to gain it, and drew himself up behind a buttress of the tower, his finger on his lip. I am slow sometimes, and Marie waited for me, so that we had barely got to our legs—looking, I dare say, awkward and ungainly enough—before the Vidame's shadow fell darkly on the ground at Catherine's feet.

"Mademoiselle!" he said, advancing to her through the sunshine, and bending over her slender hand with a magnificent grace that was born of his size and manner combined, "I rode in late last night from Toulouse; and I go to-morrow to Paris. I have but rested and washed off the stains of travel that I may lay my—ah!"

He seemed to see us for the first time, and negligently broke off in his compliment; raising himself and saluting us. "Ah," he continued, indolently, "two of the maidens of Caylus, I see. With an odd pair of hands apiece, unless I am mistaken. Why do you not set them spinning, mademoiselle?" and he regarded us with that smile which—with other things as evil—had made him famous.

Croisette pulled horrible faces behind his back. We looked hotly at him; but could find nothing to say.

"You grow red!" he went on, pleasantly—the wretch!—playing with us as a cat does with mice. "It offends your dignity, perhaps, that I bid mademoiselle set you spinning? I now would spin at mademoiselle's bidding, and think it happiness!"

"We are not girls!" I blurted out, with the flush and tremor of a boy's passion. "You had not called my godfather, Anne de Montmorenci, a girl, M. le Vidame!" For though we counted it a joke among ourselves that we all bore girls' names, we were young enough to be sensitive about it.

He shrugged his shoulders. And how he dwarfed us all as he stood there dominating our terrace! "M. de Montmorenci was a man," he said, scornfully. "M. Anne de Caylus is—"

And the villain deliberately turned his great back upon us, taking his seat on the low wall near Catherine's chair. It was clear even to our vanity that he did not think us worth another word—that we had passed absolutely from his mind. Mme. Claude came waddling out at the same moment, Gil carrying a chair behind her. And we—well, we slunk away and sat on the other side of the terrace, whence we could still glower at the offender.

Yet who were we to glower at him? To this day I shake at the thought of him. It was not so much his height and bulk, though he was so big that the clipped, pointed fashion of his beard—a fashion then new at court—seemed on him incongruous and effeminate; nor so much the sinister glance of his gray eyes—he had a slight cast in them; nor the grimy suavity of his manner, and the harsh, threatening voice that permitted of no disguise. It was the sum of these things, the great, brutal presence of the man—that was overpowering—that made the great falter and the poor crouch. And then his reputation! Though we knew little of the world's wickedness, all we did know had come to us linked with his name. We had heard of him as a duellist, as a bully, an employer of bravos. At Jarnac he had been the last to turn from the shambles. Men called him cruel and vengeful even for those days—gone by now, thank God!—and whispered his name when they spoke of assassinations; saying commonly of him that he would not blench before a Guise, nor blush before the virgin.

Such was our visitor and neighbor, Raoul de Mar, Vidame de Bezers. As he sat on the terrace, now eyeing us askance, and now paying Catherine a compliment, I likened him to a great cat before which a butterfly has all unwittingly flirted her prettiness. Poor Catherine! No doubt she had her own reasons for uneasiness; more reasons, I fancy, than I then guessed. For she seemed to have lost her voice. She stammered and made but poor replies; and Mme. Claude being deaf and stupid, and we boys too timid after the rebuff we had experienced to fill the gap, the conversation languished. The Vidame was not for his part the man to put himself out on a hot day.

It was after one of these pauses—not the first but the longest—that I started on finding his eyes fixed on mine. More, I shivered. It is hard to describe, but there was a look in the vidame's eyes at that moment which I had never seen before. A look of pain almost; of dumb savage alarm at any rate. From me they passed slowly to Marie and mutely interrogated him. Then the vidame's glance traveled back to Catherine, and settled on her.

Only a moment before she had been but too conscious of his presence. Now, as it chanced by bad luck, or in the course of Providence, something had drawn her attention elsewhere. She was unconscious of his regard. Her own eyes were fixed in a far-away gaze. Her color was high, her lips were parted, her bosom heaved gently.

The shadow deepened on the vidame's face. Slowly he took his eyes from hers, and looked northwards also.

Caylus Castle stands on a rock in the middle of the narrow valley of that name. The town clusters about the ledges of the rock so closely that when I was a boy I could fling a stone clear of the houses. The hills are scarcely 500 yards distant on either side, rising in tamer colors from the green fields about the brook. It is possible from the terrace to see the whole valley, and the road which passes through it lengthwise. Catherine's eyes were on the northern extremity of the defile, where the highway from Cahors descends from the uplands. She had been sitting with her face turned that way all the afternoon.

I looked that way too. A solitary horseman was descending the steep track from the hills.

"Mademoiselle!" cried the vidame, suddenly. We all looked up. His tone was such that the color fled from Kit's face. There was something in his voice she had never heard in any voice before—something that to a woman was like a blow. "Mademoiselle," he snarled, "is expecting news from Cahors, from her lover. I have the honor to congratulate M. de Pavannes on his conquest."

Ah! he had guessed it! As the words fell on the sleepy silence, an insult in themselves, I sprang to my feet, amazed and angry, yet astounded by his quickness of sight and wit. He must have recognized the Pavannes badge at that distance. "M. le Vidame," I said, indignantly—Catherine was white and voiceless—"M. le Vidame—" but there I stopped and faltered, stammering. For behind him I could see Croisette; and Croisette gave me no sign of encouragement or support.

"Boys, I am going to be married to M. de Pavannes."

So we stood face to face for a moment; the boy and the man of the world, the stripling and the roue. Then the vidame bowed to me in quite a new fashion. "M. Anne de Caylus desires to answer for M. de Pavannes?" he asked, smoothly; with a mocking smoothness.

I understood what he meant. But something prompted me—Croisette said afterwards that it was a happy thought, though now I know the crisis to have been less serious than he fancied—to answer: "Nay, not for M. de Pavannes. Rather for my cousin." And I bowed. "I have the honor on her behalf to acknowledge your congratulations, M. le Vidame. It pleases her that our nearest neighbor should also be the first outside the family to wish her well. You have divined truly in supposing that she will shortly be united to M. de Pavannes."

CYCLING COMMENT.

Harry Lister, of Orchard place, rode his wheel to Passaic yesterday.

A colered cycling club made a trip from Newark to this city yesterday.

Walter Darby, of Princeton University, rode his wheel to his home at Alton yesterday.

Letter carriers Shay, Loughlin and Stephens enjoyed a ride out of town yesterday on their wheels.

R. I. Tolles, of Westervelt avenue, and Harry Nail, of Duer street, rode their wheels to New Brunswick yesterday.

The Crescent Wheelmen are anticipating a club run to Trenton next Sunday. These runs are only for club members.

In the stack of wheels on North avenue yesterday it was noticed that over two-thirds of them were Columbias. This is the wheel that sells for the one price.

Fred Mowen and Edward Laing spent yesterday in a wheeling trip through Staten Island where they also visited friends. They returned by way of Bayonne, the Hudson county boulevard, the Newark plank road and Elizabeth.

Yesterday was a great day for bicyclists. McVey entertained over two hundred at his restaurant including clubs from Long Island, New York, Jersey City, Hoboken, Newark and Orange. Among the clubs that came to this city were the Nassau Wheelmen, of New York, the Eagle Wheelmen, of Newark, and the Prudential Wheelmen, of Newark.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

H. E. Manvel, of Pingry's School, Elizabeth, won the one-quarter and one-half-mile runs at the Cutler School games held at Berkley Oval Saturday, defeating some of the best scholastic athletes in the country.

The Board of Fish and Game Commissioners of this State has made arrangements for the publication of a monthly report of its doings. All persons interested in the protection and propagation of fish and game can obtain free of charge copies of these reports by sending word to Charles A. Shriner, Fish and Game Protector, Paterson.

WITH ROD AND GUN

Charles Maltby and Casper Kirkner went to the dam on the Raritan river, near Bound Brook, this morning, after perch.

Frank Stover and John Drayton are spending the day at the Bound Brook dam on the Raritan river in search of members of the finny tribe.

INS AND OUTS.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club is arranging to give the lovers of baseball some good games during the season. Its team, with the exception of the battery, will be made up of amateurs.

The Rutgers "Prep" School baseball nine of New Brunswick was defeated Saturday morning at the latter city by the Hermitage team of Princeton College by the score of 25 to 18. Chauncey Burt, of this city, pitched for the Princeton nine, and his splended control of the ball aided materially in the victory of his team.

Last Straw.

"Are you the man that answers the questions?" inquired the visitor.

"Yes, sir," said the tired-looking man at the desk. "What can I do for you?"

"I wish you'd tell me," rejoined the other, "in order to settle a bet, whether there's any more miles in an Epworth league than in the common, ordinary—"

At this point the newspaper man made an almost imperceptible movement with his foot, and the long-unused trap-door on which the caller happened to be standing opened downward.—Chicago Tribune.

An Unfounded Report.

Prof. Snore, of the University of Texas, is such a learned man that he has continual spells of absent-mindedness.

"I am glad to see you. Why, there was a report all over town that you were dead," said one of the students to him a few days ago.

"You don't tell me so?"

"Yes, it was reported that you were dead and buried."

"I declare. Well, the report has not been confirmed yet, has it?"—Texas Siftings.

DOG OF THE IRON MASK

Although Only an Aristocratic Statue It Deceived the Street Mongrel.

A relative who lives in one of the one-time fashionable mansions now become students' boarding houses, in the south end, tells me a pretty good story of a dog, says a reporter for the Boston Post. In the yard, where a fountain was once known to play, but where now dust gathers, is an iron statue of a dog. The iron dog watches and guards the old fountain, but he in his turn has an admirer and adorer. The other day, hunting for another dog to go out and play tag with him, came a young street mongrel. He was unaccustomed to the ways of aristocracy, and in his simple ignorance supposed that anything that looked like a dog was a dog.

Up to the statue he bounded barking and wagging his tail. In stately immobility the iron dog gazed on out into vacancy. This did not deceive the other. He had seen plenty of dogs assume just that haughty and abstracted manner when they did not care to fight. Wishing to show his iron friend that he appreciated his attitude, but assuring him of no evil intention, the dog from the street kept on barking and wagging his tail. He even ran around his friend a number of times to show that there was no ill-will—as is the manner of dogs. But the dog of the iron mask did not budge. My relative says that he is sure that even if the street dog had brought around a cat to chase the iron dog would have remained unmoved. A red Irish setter came out finally and called the street dog away. The latter went with distinct traces of reluctance in his manner. He liked the style of that iron dog and had rather play in his yard with him.

ARRIVING AT CONCLUSIONS.

Unique Methods of Reasoning Which Some People Adopt.

Charles Daniels, a member of congress from Buffalo, served 28 years on the New York supreme court bench before he was elected to congress. Recently, in talking over old law cases with a number of lawyers, says the Troy Times, he told a story which was a dazzling illustration of the unique methods pursued by some people to arrive at conclusions. The case in question was that of a man named Greenfield, living in Oswego county, who had been convicted in the lower court of the murder of his wife. The case was carried to the court of appeals, which reversed the finding of the lower court. A special hearing was ordered by the governor. This was held at Syracuse, and Judge Daniels was called upon to preside. In examining the jurors, one man said that he was prejudiced in the matter. When asked if he had gleaned his prejudice from the papers or by talking with interested parties or by hearsay, he replied to every question that he didn't know a thing about the case, but that he was nevertheless prejudiced. He was excused, but Judge Daniels was not satisfied, and he sent the sheriff and had the juror brought to him. He asked him where he had gained his prejudice. The fellow replied: "I don't know anything about the case, but the lawyers made such idiots of themselves in examining the jurors that I knew the man must be guilty."

HORSELESS SLEIGH INVENTED.

Will Run on Snow and Ice and Even in the Water.

Motors for horseless sleighs are among the latest novelties at the patent office. They are light, powerful affairs, and can be run by an amateur as easily as those attached to horseless carriages. The sleighs are designed, says the New York World, to run either on the snow or ice. A pair of spurred wheels is arranged between the runners, and with a little lever the driver can adjust them so that they will work on the soft snow just as smoothly as upon ice. One inventor has also provided against the danger of breaking through the ice. His sleigh is formed something like a boat, and is perfectly water tight. If the ice should break the sleigh would float, and the ice spurs would act as paddle wheels in bringing you to shore again.

One patent is for a sleigh that may be rowed across the ice. On the end of each oar is a heavy weight with a sharp steel point to cut into the ice. Another rowboat for the ice is rigged with sliding seat and legs with sharp spurs, which catch into the ice and shove the boat forward each time the rower pulls. Considerable speed is obtained by this arrangement, although the rowing is not as easy as upon the water.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Crescent Wheelmen held an informal run to Springfield Sunday afternoon.

Walter Overbald has accepted a position with the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company as an expert repairman.

A shipment of one Cleveland and eighteen Crescent wheels was received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company yesterday.

The Jersey Wheel Company has been given the contract to furnish with suits the "Yellow Jacket" Cycle Club, which has recently been organized. The club numbers twelve at present.

Wm. M. McCutchen began training yesterday for the racing season. He will ride on the road until the track is in ridable condition, when he will continue his training there. He will ride under the Crescent Wheelmen this year.

The Manhattan Bicycle Club, of New York, will hold a run to this city next Sunday. On June 20th a double century run is scheduled, and the course will be over New Jersey roads. There will be only one condition attached to it, namely, that all participants must cover the distance within twenty-four hours.

The bicycle craze has struck Hackensack squarely. Almost every man, woman and child owns a wheel, and the streets are alive with wheelmen all day. Saturday night as many as sixty-five new members were admitted to the Hackensack Wheelmen, making the total membership 215. The club is about to move into handsome and more spacious quarters on Main street.

There is one thing about the tire that should receive frequent inspection by the cyclist and that is its connection with the rim. The tire is very apt to work loose on the rim, especially after being kept in the house all winter, and it will then begin to "creep." This always ends, unless looked after at once, by the pulling or cutting off of the valve stem as the tire gradually creeps around the rim.

Syracuse seems to have the same trouble Plainfield did last year, for her correspondent to the American Wheelmen writes: "The wheelmen of the city ought to take steps to prevent the sprinkling of the streets just at the time the average wheelmen thinks of starting out for a spin. They are compelled to ride in about two inches of water and many accidents have been caused by the slippery condition of the pavement."

One of the most novel features of the coming century runs will undoubtedly be the racing division of the Twenty-second Regiment Cyclers' "hundred" to Patchogue and return on Sunday, May 3d. To the man in this division who first arrives in Patchogue (about fifty miles) a handsome gold record medal will be presented. It is expected that this innovation will result in some lively scorching. Several Plainfield young men are planning to go on the run but not with the racing division.

The Holbrook ten-mile handicap road races, to be held on Saturday, May 10th, near Philadelphia, are attracting a good deal of attention from riders in both classes throughout this section of the country. Starbuck and Bartholomew, two of the professional riders who rode so well here in the night meets on the Crescent Oval last fall, intend to compete. Starbuck says that he is in much better condition than he was this time last year. He expects to start from scratch and win both the race and the time prize. The great event of the day will be the race between triplets.

The racing team of the Jersey Wheel Company this year will consist of A. B. Barnett, Jay Eaton and H. B. Mosher. They will not enter any road races, but contest in all the professional events in race meets in this part of the country. They will begin training as soon as the Crescent Oval is placed in good condition. Barnett is well known here, the reputation he made first as a Class A and then as a Class B man while riding for the Crescent Wheelmen having made him very popular among the Plainfield people. Eaton and Mosher are comparatively unknown here, but are both speedy riders.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has received a '96 Crescent tandem and it has been placed in the rental department. It is a road wheel, waighing about thirty-four pounds and geared to 80. This tandem em bodies several new features. The frame is somewhat different from the usual style, but the greatest difference is in the arrangement of the chains. Instead of the chain from the first large sprocket connecting with the second axle, it extends to the rear wheel passing about a small sprocket wheel on one side of it, while on the other side is a similar sprocket wheel about which passes the chain connecting with the second axle.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. will do their part in the formation of the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League, the plan for which was exclusively published in The Press sometime ago. A meeting will be held Friday evening for the purpose of reorganizing the bicycle section of the local Y. M. C. A. Of this meeting and the plans for the league, the Y. M. C. A. bulletin says: "It is intended to hold a number of runs during the season to the Y. M. C. A's in the surrounding cities at which places entertainment will be provided by the home club. In all probability clubs from several places will have the same destination on the same evening, thus attaching importance and guaranteeing a large number of participants to each run. All members interested in such runs are invited to meet at the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening at 9 o'clock."

The sale of wheels still continues with unprecedented vigor and the salesrooms of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company still continue to be a very lively place. Among the latest sales made by that company are: A Crescent, No. 9, to Mrs. Horace Doty; a Cleveland Swell Special to E. T. Wilson; a Cleveland Swell Special to Mr. Brown; a Cleveland Swell Special to Mrs. W. G. E. See; a Cleveland Swell Special to Mrs. G. S. Clay; a Cleveland Swell Special to Miss Lulu French; a Crescent, No. 2, to W. T. Brown; a Crescent, No. 2, to "Buddy" Howard; a Cleveland Swell Special to Thomas Van Boskerck; a Cleveland Swell Special to R. A. Grant; a Crescent, No. 1, to W. K. Dwight; a Crescent, No. 6, to L. H. Bigelow; a Crescent, No. 9, to Miss Mary Gearly; a Crescent, No. 9, to George Herlich, of Dunellen; and a Crescent, No. 9, to F. C. Peterson, of Dunellen.

The Punnett Companion Machine, the latest substitute for the tandem, is to be introduced to the New York public under circumstances that can hardly fail to attract general attention to it. No less a personage than Lillian Russell is to act in the office of agent of the wheel. She won't give up her old profession, of course, but will carry the wheel as a "side line." Miss Russell is to make the beautiful new machine famous a little ahead of time by showing it in the new opera in which she is to appear at the New York Casino during the coming summer. It is expected to appear in Plainfield also very shortly and will be represented here by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company. Speaking of it the American Wheelman says: "The Companion is really a machine of great beauty. Its structural lines are artistic in the extreme, its white enamel gives the fine effect that no tint can impart, and although built for two, it is anything but cumbersome or difficult to manage.

Miss Miss Etta Raybert, of North avenue, completed her post-graduate course at the High School today.

GEO. LISSIGNOLO DEAD.

WELL-KNOWN PLAINFIELDER SUCCUMBS TO THE INEVITABLE.

Mr. Lissignolo Had Lived in This City for Twenty Years Where He Was Universally Respected.—Died at His Summer Home.

George Lissignolo, for over twenty years a resident of Plainfield, died at his summer home in Belmar, N. J., early this morning

Mr. Lissignolo is well-known among the older residents of this city, as a man of substantial character and of kindly disposition, and his friends were many. He was 73 years old and was in unusually rugged health until about two months ago, when a severe cold developed rheumatism. This in turn affected the heart, and his death was unlooked for, altbough his condition was known to be serious.

Mr. Lissignolo was born at Frankfort-on-the-Main in Germany, and he came to this country when a young boy. By honesty and a strict application to business he found the road to a successful business career in a short time. He became a foreign exchange broker in New York, and for a great many years did a large business and acquired considerable wealth. Later he met with reverses and lost most of his fortune, though he always had a paying business. He owned a beautiful home on East Front street. He was prominently identified with many local enterprises, and whatever was for Plainfield's progress and benefit he was always willing to assist by both his individual efforts and money He was one of the stockholders in Music Hall at the time of its erection and he also was one of the original stockholders of the Hotel Netherwood. He was a member of Alert Hose Company. He leaves a wife, three daughters and one son. Mrs. Robert F. R. Huntsman, of Westervelt avenue, was his daughter. The notice of the funeral will be given in the Press tomorrow.

DEATH OF RICHARD CORIELL.

An Old Boroughite Succumbs to a Seven Weeks Illness.

Richard Coriell, aged sixty-nine years, of 45 Pearl street, died at his home this morning after a severe illness of seven weeks. He had not been well for the past year, but it was only lately that his illness took a serious form.

He was born at Greenbrook and was the son of Ira and Jane Coriell. One brother, Cornelius Coriell, living on Manning avenue, and a sister, Mrs. Finney, of Lambertville, survive him, also a wife. He was a member of the Salvation Army until the Volunteers were formed, when he joined the latter. He was a thorough Christian.

The funeral services will be held from the house Thursday afternoon at 2:30.

Patrick Donovan, the Plainfield avenue resident who had trouble with his son, as told in yesterday's Press, appeared before City Judge DeMeza for sentence. He was held in $100 bonds to keep the peace. His son James was also present and the Judge gave him a severe talking to and warned him against any future disorderly conduct.

Removed to Boston.

The numerous friends of Harry Bartling, of Washington Park, will regret to learn of his departure to Boston, where he moved today with his family, having secured a lucrative position in that city. Mr. Bartling was one of the charter members of the Park Club and an earnest worker in the Holy Cross church. The borough's loss will be Boston's gain.

SOMERSET COUNTY COURT

THE SPRING TERM OPENED AT SOMERVILLE THIS MORNING.

Several Cases in Which North Plainfield People Are Interested—A Suit Against a Railroad Company For Damages.

The spring term of the Somerset county court was opened in Somerville this morning with Judges McGee and Bartine presiding. Judge McGee charged the grand jury with reference to the case of the three colored men who are held for causing the death of the colored man who died at Muhlenberg hospital some weeks ago from injuries received at their hands in Bound Brook on Christmas morning.

Licenses were granted to Henry Wedemeyer for the Arlington hotel and to Gustav Sutterlin for a bottling establishment in North Plainfield. The application for a license from a man by the name of O'Hara of Millstone was refused and the judge absolutely declined to even give him a hearing. A number of cases were put over the term.

Five cases are docketed for trial in the Supreme Court and ten in the Circuit Court. In the former Augustus McCullough has a suit against John G. Sutphen. Samuel T. Hoffman, who was struck by an engine at a crossing between Somerville and Raritan last winter while driving a milk wagon, brings suit for damages against the Central Railroad Company. Hillpot & Ayers, of Bound Brook, have brought suit against Lemuel E. Miller, for breach of contract. North Plainfield has cases between Spicer & Hubbard against Valentine Utzinger, and Pangborn against Teal. The Grand Jury will undoubtedly furnish a few cases, perhaps one of bigamy. Ex Marshal Van Horn is one of the court constables.

C. Frank French is a member of the grand jury from the borough. Marshals Wilson and Lines were subpœnaed before the grand jury in reference to the case brought against Marshal Barry.

A PEACEFUL LIFE ENDED.

Mrs. Rachael Runyon Dies at the Home of Her Son, W. M. Runyon.

After a life of kindness, mostly spent in Plainfield, Mrs. Rachel Runyon quietly passed away at the home of her son, William M. Runyon, 316 East Front street, this morning about seven o'clock. She had been ill for the last four weeks but last Saturday began to fail rapidly.

She was born in Piscataway, on February 3, 1822. She married Oliver Runyon of the same place and they soon after moved to Plainfield, where Mrs. Runyon resided for about fifty years until her death. She lived on West Second street until nine years ago when she came to live with her only son, William M. Runyon. Oliver Runyon died in 1890. She has two brothers living, one in East Orange and one in Stelton. She was one of the oldest members of the First Baptist church of this city.

Cut by Eyeglasses.

Miss Miria Coles, of East Sixth street, is confined to her home through a most peculiar accident. She was returning from the Park Avenue Baptist church a few day ago, and in crossing the street, she slipped and fell. At the time she was wearing a pair of eyeglasses. In the fall the glasses broke and severely cut her face. Since then she has been unable to leave her room.

Freight Wreck at Cranford.

A freight wreck near Cranford last night delayed travel on the Jersey Central Railroad from 9 o'clock until 2 in the morning. The axle of a car on a westbound freight train broke, and the debris of a number of freight cars and their contents blocked three tracks. No one was injured. Two wrecking trains were used in clearing the tracks.

A Visiting Team.

The initiating team from the Lodge of the Castle at Somerville has accepted the invitation of Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, to be present tomorrow night and work the third rank on Unity's candidates.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

AN ITALIAN PATRIOT AND DEMOCRAT

Prof. Sperenza Delivers a Lecture on the Life of Machievelli.

The last of the series of lectures so much enjoyed during the past winter by the Monday afternoon club, was given yesterday afternoon at the Casino by Prof. C. L. Sperenza, of the University of Columbia, New York. The speaker, a most talented one, was born near Venice, and after a continual study in the famous institutions of learning abroad, came to this country about ten years ago, taking a professorship in Yale University. Later he went to New York and has been there for six years, having in charge the department of Italian language together with a few other branches. His subject yesterday was "Machievelli," the famous Italian author, and he treated the subject in an exceedingly clever manner, telling at length many valuable points in history concerning the noted Italian. Among the interesting points noted was that he was a patriot and a good Democrat. He fought hard for unity among his people and when he learned that it was impossible to get liberty, he advocated independence. To this end he wrote a discourse in which he stated that while he wanted one man to found independence, he wanted the people to govern themselves. He wrote of the way in which this should be accomplished. His life was one of great blessing to his country and has ever since served as an example for those of these later days. He was born in 1469 and died in 1527.

An informal discussion of the subject followed the lecture and hearty applause was given the professor for his admirable address.

FOUND TWO FIRES.

But One Was a Bonfire and That Deceived Chief Doane for a Time.

Chief Doane of the fire department had a lively chase last night. Wm. Sweeney, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, notified the Chief early last evening that the woods near Hillside cemetery were on fire and might endanger several houses in the neighborhood. Through a general misunderstanding Chief Doane was given to understand that the fire was near the cemetery on Plainfield avenue. A large bonfire near that place assisted in the mistake. The Chief, after investigating that blaze, went to the one near the Hillside cemetery and, as the nearest house, the old VanZandt residence, was not in danger, decided not to call out the department. The fire was outside the city limits, but had the house been in danger the department would have turned out.

THE SKANDIA'S DANCE.

Pleasant End of the Social Season of a Winter Dancing School.

The Skandia Junior Society closed their social season under pleasant circumstances in Sangerbund Hall last night with a reception and ball. Although admission was public, the crowd was a select one.

The slipper contest, which was booked for last evening, closed with Miss Feller, first; and Miss Hulda Erickson, second. Each received a handsome pair of slippers.

The grand march was a feature of the evening and the various intricate and difficult movements which were gone through with by the graduates of the school, were the means of evoking continuous applause from the large gathering of spectators. The dancing concluded about 4 o'clock this morning, music for which was furnished by Whitfield Frazee.

A Serious Charge.

Joseph McDermott, aged twenty-one, was arrested yesterday morning at Elizabeth on a warrant issued by City Judge DeMeza. The complainant is Miss Maggie Killoran, of this city, who charges the prisoner with failing to keep a promise of marriage. McDermott was turned over yesterday afternoon to the Plainfield authorities. He was brought before City Judge DeMeza this morning who held him in $300 bail to appear for trial on Thursday, April 30th.

To Preach to Odd Fellows.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I.O.O.F., held a meeting last night. Word was received from Rev. W. C. O'Donnell that he had accepted the invitation of the lodge and would preach to them next Sunday evening at Monroe Avenue chapel. The members of the lodge will meet at the lodge rooms Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. All members are requested to be present.

At the End of April Days.

POULTRY SHOW COMING.

CACKLE OF THE ROOSTER WILL BE HEARD HERE NEXT DECEMBER.

J. L. Wiseman Guarantees the Rental Free—The Society Will Divide the Profits With the Muhlenburg Hospital.

A. A. Parker, W. J. Andrews and J. A. Lewis, the men composing the show committee of the Garden State Poultry and Pigeon Association, met J. L. Wiseman, of the Columbia Cycle Academy, in this city on Saturday and after a conference decided to hold the next exhibition in the Academy, December 2d, 3rd, 4th and 5th, 1896, every day and evening. Mr. Wiseman promised them that the money for the rental of the place would be raised in this city, and they in turn promised to give fifty per cent. of the net receipts to Muhlenberg Hospital. The committee thought that if everything was satisfactory the association would probably locate here permanently. It is expected that there will be nearly 1,000 exhibits.

All that is required now is that the people of Plainfield show a generous heart and give Mr. Wiseman a hand in raising the $225, which is necessary to bring the association here and which amount he has pledged. Mr. Wiseman has been authorized to collect subscriptions for the affair, which will no doubt surpass anything of the kind ever held in this State.

The exhibition will bring a very large number of people to this city and everybody will profit alike in this respect.

DIRECT TRAINS TO NEWARK.

The Central Railroad Make Changes for the Benefit of Plainfielders.

Superintendet Peddle, of the Jersey Central, has often recognized the needs of Plainfield and The Daily Press is glad to announce that once more this fact is evident. Commencing May 1st two direct trains will be put into service between Plainfield and Newark. There will be one each way morning and evening and there will be no changing of cars. This is done to accommodate the Newark commuters and those who will reside at Mt. Park Inn on Johnston's drive. The exact time has not been decided upon yet, but the trains will be run to suit the largest number of people.

With these two trains there will be better mail facilities. This will also be welcome news to Plainfield people making it possible to send a letter to Newark and receive an answer the same day.

Credit should be given to French & Vail, proprietors of Mt. Park Inn, for their efforts to secure the above, and Mr. Peddle's quick response in giving what was desired. These trains will only run during the summer months.

STEAM ROLLER IN SOFT GROUND.

And as a Result One of the Big Wheels Sank Two Feet in the Earth.

The steam roller came to grief this noon owing to a soft spot on the side of Park avenue. Work had just been begun picking up Park avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets, and, as usual, the man in charge started work at the edge. Park avenue was widened sometime ago and the part that had been added had never been regularly macadamized, so when the heavy weight of the steam roller rested on that part it suddenly sank and could not be moved by ordinary means. During the noon hour it was left with one of the rear wheels sunk about two feet into the road and the front steering roller in a partially sunken condition. Efforts were then made to get it out, but up to the time of going to press they were unsuccessful.

Loan Association Officers.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Home Building and Loan Association was held last evening, at which time the following officers were elected: President, Isaac W. Rushmore; vice-president, S. B. Joseph; secretary, S. R. Struthers; treasurer, W. F. Arnold; attorney, W. M. Stillman; directors for three years, W. H. Sampson, L. M. French, C. H. Rugg, W. A. Freeman; auditor W. A. Freeman. George H. Batchelor was elected a director for two years in the place of S. B. Joseph. The seventeenth series was opened with good prospects. The statement of finances will be ready this week for the public.

ARMS FOR N. G., S. N. Y.

Test of the Savage Rifle by the Board of Examiners.

SUCCESSFUL IN EVERY PARTICULAR

Four Hundred Continuous Rounds Fired Without Cleaning—Fired with Defective Ammunition and Excessive Charges—Tests of Other Guns.

New York, April 21.—The New York state board of examiners to select improved arms for the National guard commenced the test of arms submitted for examination in the Thirteenth regiment armory, Brooklyn, yesterday. The board is organized for the selection of rifles for the equipment of the National guard of the state of New York, such rifles to be of American invention and manufacture. Each rifle must be accompanied by a written agreement to manufacture such arms in the United States, not exceeding 15,000, as may be required by the state, at a cost not to exceed $20. The Savage Arms company's rifle was tested yesterday. The inventor of the arm is A. W. Savage, who has spent four years in perfecting his weapon. The Savage Arms company's factory is in course of building, and the rifle submitted was manufactured by the Pratt & Whitney company of Hartford, Conn.

Successful Tests.

The tests to which the Savage rifle was submitted are much more severe than those required by the government in the case of the regulation army rifle. In all 494 shots were fired during the test. The board made a thorough test of the magazine, with a view of ascertaining whether the gun could be jammed in feeding the cartridges from the magazine into the breech opening or when used as a single loader. The magazine worked successfully, no matter in what position the cartridge was placed. The endurance test consisted of firing 400 continuous rounds without cleaning, the gun being examined at the end of every fifty rounds and cooled down. The weapon stood the test without the slightest sign of heating at the breach or in the action, and without a single displacement of any kind. After the endurance test the gun was tried with defective ammunition and excessive charges. These tests were for the purpose of observing the action for clogging and safety. For the defective ammunition test five shots were fired with alternate good and defective cartridges. The cartridges were made defective by thinning down the cap almost to a transparency. The result was very satisfactory. In two of the defective cartridges a hole was blown right through the primer and the gas driven back on the breech, one of the most dangerous experiments, without in any way injuring the arm.

Congratulated the Inventor.

For the excessive charges, three shots were fired with a lanyard; the cartridges were loaded with forty grains of smokeless powder compressed into the regular shell. In one case the primer was blown clean out, and in another the priming was burst, but without any ill effect on the action. The arm was then taken apart and thoroughly cleaned. The dust test concluded the examination. This test was almost twice as severe as the regular test, but the rifle came through with flying colors. The weapon was placed in a closed box under an exposure of sand, blown into the box. Four exposures were made and after each exposure six shots were fired. The gun was not allowed to be cleaned, but before firing the dust was blown off and the gun wiped with the hand. The board of course would make no statement regarding the weapon until the final tests, when their report will be submitted to the governor, but all the members congratulated the inventor on the splendid performance of his weapon. To-day the Briggs-Kneeland rifle will be tested, and the examination will be continued during the week, one day for each gun.

Rochester, N. Y., April 21.—A memorial to president Cleveland praying for international arbitration has been compiled by a committee representing the New York State Bar association and endorsed by the association. It will be presented to the president at Washington this afternoon. In this petition the president is asked to use his influence to establish an international court between Great Britain and the United States. This court would consist of nine men capable of settling diplomatic difficulties in a judicial manner. After this court is established other nations would soon see the utility of the plan and would avail themselves of the opportunity to do away with the horrors of war.

They were accompanied by the staff band, which escorted Booth-Tucker at the head of a procession through the principal streets. Subsequently a "rally" was held in the Washington street barracks. The English commander made an address, urging loyalty to the international standard, but refrained from mentioning Ballington Booth or the recent exposures made by the latter relative to the support by Americans of the Canadian wing of the army.

IS STILL A MYSTERY

Officially Denied That Dr. Nansen Has Reached the North Pole.

NOTHING HEARD OF THE EXPLORER

Ivory Seekers on the New Siberian Islands Have Seen No Signs of His Ship—The Rumor Effectually Disposed Of.

London, April 21.—The Daily Graphic to-day publishes a dispatch from Christiania saying that the governor of Yakutsk reports officially that the inhabitants of Ust-Yansk have not heard anything about Dr. Nansen, the Arctic explorer, who was recently reported to be returning after having discovered the North Pole. The governor adds that the ivory seekers on the New Siberian islands did not see any ship between May and November of last year. This dispatch pretty effectually disposes of the report that Dr. Nansen was returning to civilization after making a discovery that has so long baffled so many explorers. The rumor of Dr. Nansen's return came from Ust-Yansk, near the coast of the Arctic ocean, east of the Lena delta, and the trading post nearest to the New Siberian islands. An official was dispatched some weeks ago from Yakutsk to Ust-Yansk to inquire into the truth of the of the report which was circulated by a Siberian trader, an agent for Dr. Nansen. He informed the prefect of Kolyask that he had received information that Dr. Nansen had reached the Korth Pole, where he had found land, and was on his way back, but no details could be had. Hence the Russian government sent a man to make inquiries, and the official report of the governor of Yakutsk, in which the province of Ust-Yansk is located, presumably contains the result of this government agent's investigations.

FOR REV. W. N. CLEVELAND.

Friends To Tender a Donation to Him Thursday Evening.

Watertown, N. Y., April 21.—The friends of Rev. William N. Cleveland, at Chaumont, who has severed his connection with the Presbyterian church there, have arranged to give him a donation in that village on Thursday night. His farewell sermon is still the chief topic of conversation among the inhabitants of Chaumont, who regard it as a very masterly address. The congregation that attended was one of the largest that ever entered the church.

Washington, April 21.—The Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which has been in session here, before adjourning last night passed strong resolutions of sympathy with the people of Cuba now struggling for their independence. Women

Who are nervous, weak, worn out with local troubles find pure blood, nerve strength, and perfect health in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We do not say the above to raise false hope. It has been the experience of many, very many women in those intensely trying periods which demand and consume so much force—those special physical trials we delicately indicate by merely using the words—Maid, Mother, Matron.

Like a confidential friend we suggest the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, a reliable blood purifier and tonic; it has helped many others and will help you.

"I was in poor health five years, broken down in strength, and appetite all gone. Local troubles and other weaknesses intensified my misery. Nervous sick dizziness, heartburn and pains in my back made me think I should never be well again. A friend prevailed upon me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I soon began to improve and in six months it restored me to better health than for years. I have found Hood's Sarsaparilla a grand medicine for all troubles peculiar to as do other diseases caused by an impoverished condition of the blood, when Bovinine is used. It is not a medicine, but the most perfect food product, containing all the vital principles of lean, raw beef. It is quickly assimilated, and by its wonderful power of creating new flesh tissue and enriching the blood, soon puts the patient in a physical state where disease can find no footing.

besides its wonderful effect as a food, is invaluable in such cases as an external application, nourishing by absorption, and creating new, healthy flesh, where the disease is manifested. Dr. H. M. Sanger of Providence, R. I., says that he effected very rapid cures with slight spreading and no suppuration in three cases of erysipelas, two by simply applying gauze saturated with, and the third by injecting Bovinine at the border of the inflamed patch. All Druggists.

CHRISTIAN LAWYERS

Senator Thurston's Address at the Congres sof Religious Education.

ALL LAWS FOUNDED ON MOSAIC CODE

No National Prosperity Separate From the Influence of Religion—Immorality and Crime the Only Enemies of Good Government.

Washington, April 21.—The first session of the first National Congress of Religious Education was held last night in New York Avenue Baptist church. Gen. John Eaton, ex-United States commissioner of education, president of the American society of Religious Education, presided. The theme of the evening was "Religious Education and National Prosperity," the speakers being Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the United States senate; Rev. J. E. Grammar of Baltimore and Senator Thurston of Nebraska. The latter delivered an eloquent address frequently punctuated with applause by the enthusiastic and appreciative audience. He said that the body of American lawyers, almost without exception, were sincere believers in the truths of Christian religion. They might not be regular in attendance upon church, nor frequently plead the cause of Christianity, but none the less, he said, they honestly believed in those principles because they knew that all law was founded upon the Mosaic code. He believed in the overruling providence of God in the affairs of nations, and hoped that it would be taught the children of the United States. There certainly could be, in the senator's opinion, no national prosperity separate from the influence of the Christian religion in the life of the nation. The only enemies of good government, he said, were immorality and crime, leading to anarchy. There was no school for either of these agencies of destruction in the home of the family professing the religion of Jesus Christ. A feature of the programme was a hymn written for the occasion by president J. E. Rankin of Howard university. The sessions of the congress will continue over Thursday.

Weaver of New York city from removing his yacht Norma from Woodall's shipyard in this city until he settles a claim for $7,000 filed by Edward R. Coleman of Lebanon, Pa. J. Wilson Leakin was appointed receiver with authority to sell the vessel on ten days' notice. Coleman says he loaned Weaver $7,000 on the yacht on a mortgage.

Battle of Lexington.

New York, April 21.—The 121st anniversary of the battle of Lexington was fittingly celebrated last evening at Delmonico's by the Daughters of the Revolution. An address of welcome was delivered by the president-general, Mrs. Charles B. Yardley. Rev. Dr. D. J. Burrell gave a spirited and appropriate address upon the battle of Lexington.

Johnson Got the Decision.

Philadelphia, April 21.—Austin Gibbons of Paterson, N. J., and Charley Johnson, formerly of Minneapolis and now of this city, had a six-round go at the Caledonian club last night. Johnson did the better work and though he was unable to put Gibbons out he was given the decision at the end of the sixth round.

Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Boston, April 21.—The state convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians opened in Hibernian hall, East Boston, yesterday, but no business was transacted, and the convention adjourned until to-day on account of the parade of Hibernians which started soon after noon. Ten thousand men were in line.

Greater New York Bill.

Albany, April 21.—The Lexow Greater New York bill, which was to have been taken up in the assembly to-day for passage over the vetoes of the mayors of New York and Brooklyn, will not be called up before to-morrow. The republican leaders say it will be repassed when it is called up.

Sons and Daughters of Vermont.

Springfield, Mass., April 21.—The third annual banquet of the Sons and Daughters of Vermont was held last evening at the Cooley house, between three and four hundred being present. Frank E. Ladd, the president of the society, was toastmaster, and made the address of welcome.

Prof. Toy Will Recover.

Cambridge, Mass., April 21.—Prof. H. Toy of Harvard, who was to have lectured in New York last evening, it was suddenly taken so ill that his physician forbade his leaving home, will be out in the course of a few days.

Quay First; McKinley Second.

Erie, Pa., April 21.—The republican county convention held here yesterday passed sound money and protection resolutions, and endorsed Quay as first choice for president and McKinley second.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Appropriation Bills in the Senate—Nothing Important in the House.

Washington, April 21.—Now that Senator Peffer has consented to permit his bond sale investigation resolution to be laid aside temporarily, although it is still the unfinished business and as such is entitled to be called up every day in the senate at 2 o'clock, the senate is to-day considering appropriation bills. The Indian appropriation bill is the immediate bill under discussion, but so far has not advanced a single step, the cause of delay being a debate on the amendment for the payment of the fees of some fifteen attorneys for legal services, characterized by some senators as lobbying, rendered to the "old settlers or western Cherokees."

House of Representatives.

There is nothing of importance on the programme of the house to-day. The passage of the general deficiency bill takes the last of the general appropriation bills out of the hands of the house. In the consideration of the general deficiency bill a prolonged debate was occasioned by the paragraph appropriating $850,000 to supply a deficiency in the collection of the customs revenues. The action of the secretary of the treasury in increasing the customs force at New York was criticised by Mr. Hepburn, rep., Iowa. This increase was due, according to Mr. Dingley, rep., Me., to the change from specific to ad valorem duties made by the Wilson-Gorman act. A general comparison of the tariff laws of 1890 and 1894, both as to the revenue produced by them and the cost of collecting the same, and a comparison of the appropriations of the four congresses made a lively debate which lasted nearly three hours.

WORLD'S FAIR AWARDS.

Beginning of the Distribution of the Medals and Diplomas.

Washington, April 21.—The long-expected distribution of Columbian world's fair diplomas and medals has begun at last, and about 3,000 diplomas and medals, covering all of the successful German exhibitors at the fair, have been turned over to Baron Thielmann, the German ambassador, who will ship them immediately to his government for distribution. Those awarded to American exhibitors will be ready for delivery within the next ten days or two weeks at the farthest, and the shipments to England, France, Russia, Spain, Italy and other foreign countries will be ready for delivery to their respective diplomatic representatives here within the next month. The medals and diplomas are said to be far superior in point of artistic merit to any ever before issued by any government on a similar occasion.

RECENT BOND SALES.

Information Sent to the Senate by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Washington, April 21.—In response to the senate resolution the secretary of the treasury sent to that body yesterday afternoon such information as was asked for concerning the recent sale of bonds. In addition to the printed list of bidders and the amount of the bids the secretary also says that all who made the first deposit have since either paid the remaining instalments as they fell due, or anticipated them by the payment of the full amount at the first payment. The aggregate amount of money thus paid in up to and including April 15 was $96,975,050 of the face value of the bonds, with a grand total of premium, accrued interest and principal aggregating $107,777,826.86.

THE BOY TRAIN WRECKERS.

Trial of Hildreth Being Continued Today at Rome.

Rome, N. Y., April 21.—The trial of Hildreth, one of the boy train wreckers, which was commenced yesterday afternoon, is being continued to-day. It is said that Hildreth's father will be present later at the trial and will possibly act as counsel. The most interesting question to be decided during the trial will be concerning the admission of the confession of the defendant as evidence. The defense will claim that the alleged confessions were secured under duress and are invalid.

Death of the Marquis of Bath.

London, April 21.—John Alexander Thynne, Marquis of Bath, whose death is announced from Venice, was the fourth of that title. He succeeded to the title in 1837. He leaves a widow, daughter of Viscount de Vesci, and five children. He will be succeeded by his eldest son, Viscount Weymouth, M. P.

REFORMS FOR CUBA

Informally Discussed by Secretary Olney and Minister De Lome.

PATRIOTS NOT LIKELY TO ACCEPT

Although Broad and Liberal, Their Adoption Is Practically Rendered Impossible by the Condition Precedent of Laying Down Their Arms.

Washington, April 21.—In the oral discussions of Cuban affairs which have taken place between the Spanish minister and Secretary Olney during the last two weeks an informal memorandum of some fifty or sixty reform measures which, under certain contingencies, the Spanish government is willing to accord to Cuba, is understood to have played an important part. These conditions are entirely distinct from the decree of the 15th of March, 1895, which was promulgated by the Spanish queen regent seventeen days after the outbreak of the insurrection, and which was countersigned by Buenaventura De Abarzuza, minister of the colonies, himself a native of Havana. That decree provided a system of government for the island of Cuba and for the readjustment of its civil administration, but left, as now, absolute revisionary power in the hands of the governor-general.

Not Likely To Succeed.

The new proposals of reform which have been informally brought under discussion between the Spanish minister and Secretary Olney are broader and more liberal than this decree and approach more nearly to practical autonomy, but are accompanied by conditions which will apparently render their adoption or even their consideration by the insurgents a matter of impossibility. As in the case of the ten years' war, Spain insists, as a preliminary to negotiation, that the insurgents shall first lay down their arms, as it is against the dignity of the Spanish crown to treat with armed rebels. The Cuban leaders assert that when they complied with similar conditions in 1878, in order to secure the reforms pledged to them by Martinez Campos, the pledges then made were chiefly left unfulfilled, and emphatically decline to be again deceived in like manner. Consequently the proffered measure of reform is likely to fall to the ground as far as Cuba is concerned, though some similar provisions may probably be tendered to Puerto Rico, where no rebellion exists. Nothing in the suggested plan, as it now stands, holds out any prospect of a speedy termination of the war.

Gen. Lee May Not Act for Months.

Private advices received here from Havana indicate that the hopes which were at first expressed that the appointment of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee as consul general to Havana might open up some way of adjustment have died away. It is doubted whether Gen. Lee will be able to take up his new duties for months to come. This is the beginning of the most deadly sickly season in Cuba. The cares and worries of responsibilities of the office of consul general at Havana to an unacclimated man of Gen. Lee's physique, it is said, would be likely to bring on an attack of yellow fever, the chances of recovery from which might be doubtful. He could not take refuge in the mountains because the hundreds of alleged naturalized American citizens who are clamoring for protection and reparation from Spain would render such an escape impossible. Friends of Gen. Lee, who have been long residents in Cuba, are said to have written to him strongly dissuading him from attempting to take up his duties until the rainy season is over.

THE WAR IN CUBA.

Reports of Engagements as Issued by the Officials at Havana.

Havana, April 21.—Gen. Melquizo reports that his command has dispersed parties of rebels near Jaruco, province of Havana. The rebels lost ten killed and the troops six wounded. The gunboat Centinels fired upon a party of rebels who were attacking a boat carrying supplies at Estero, near Manzanillo. Nine men forming part of the boat's crew of thirteen were disabled by the fire of the rebels. In a further engagement up the river between the rebels and the gunboat five more Spaniards were wounded. The rebel loss is supposed to have been heavy. The trial of Julio Sanguily, who is said to have been implicated in the kidnapping of Fernandez de Castro, a rich planter, will be held on Thursday before the supreme court in this city. De Castro obtained his release by paying a ransom of $20,000. Many fires in the cane fields are reported from the provinces of Havana and Matanzas. There have been frequent fires recently in stores in Matanzas. Incendiarism was suspected and an investigation led to the arrest of the owners of the stores. The buildings and stocks were heavily insured and the men arrested are charged with starting the fires in order to obtain the insurance money. Juan Urralde San Martin, who was arrested in Spain on the charge of being the author of the robbery perpetrated on August Belmont & Co. of New York, by means of a forged draft of $24,000 purporting to be signed by Hidalgo & Co., a well known firm of this city, is expected to arrive here on the Spanish mail steamer due on Friday next.

Boston, 21; Baltimore, 6.

Boston, April 21.—The only National league baseball game yesterday was played here, the home team winning by a score of 21 to 6 for Baltimore.

Filed His Oath of Office.

Albany, April 21.—Col. John S. Kidder, the new port warden of New York, has filed his oath of office with the secretary of state.

The new Chancery Clerk came into possession of the sum of $734,338.93 when he took office last month. This was money in the hands of the court, held for creditors of estates, corporations, partnerships, etc., in litigation, and it appears to be at the disposition of the Clerk to an extent rather surprising to the lay mind.—Newark Call.

There is a movement on foot among the merchants of West Front street looking to paving that thoroughfare with asaphalt from Somerset to Grove streets. The movement is headed by Edward White, the dry goods man. It is proposed that the cost shall be shared jointly by the abutting property owners, the city and the street railway company.

And now the Newark woman has arose from a talking position and will endeavor to accomplish something in a practical way. The work will be through an improvement association, and her especial line of attack will be the streets. If the Newark women will obliterate the clouds of dust that envelop the trolley cars between Newark and Jersey City, and which passengers are compelled to eat, they will be doing something worthy of praise from suffering humanity.

The Borough Marshal of Roselle, John F. Crest, rides a bicycle, and it is doubtful if even then he will be able to attend to the duties laid down for him by the Borough Council at its last meeting. He is to be Chief of Police, acting road overseer, sidewalk inspector, sewer inspector, report defective electric lights and kill all unlicensed dogs running at large. He is to take instructions from the Mayor and chairmen of committees and make reports twice each week. For all of this he is to receive about $500 a year.

It is said that James T. Bergen, of Somerville, will probably be selected as chairman of the Democratic State Committee between this time and the holding of the State Convention, on May 7th, for the election of delegates to the National Convention at Chicago. At the last meeting of the State Committee the subject of a chairman caused a good deal of discusion. Edward F. C. Young, who is the present head of the committee, refused to serve longer in that capacity. He said he could not spare the time, but he was persuaded to remain as the nominal chairman until the convention meets.

GET WELL AND STAY WELL.

Get Rid of What Makes You Sick and Stay Rid of It.

It is so simple to be well that we wonder why there are so many sick people.

Come to think about it, must be because they don't know what made them sick.

If they knew that, they would prevent it, and when they were sick, in some cases, in some cases cure themselves. But, so long as we don't take more care of our health, we shall always be more or less sick.

The simple rules of health are: Keep clean, take exercise, eat good food, scour out your stomach.

This last means: Don't tolerate indigestion. Cure it with Shaker Digestive Cordial. A stomach full of undigested, fermented, putrid food is the unhealthiest thing you can think of.

Half our diseases and troubles come from the poisons of undigested food. More than half of them could be cured with Shaker Digestive Cordial.

More than half, because often when we think we are sick we are only weak, and a course of nourishing food digested without effort by the stomach (with the aid of Shaker Digestive Cordial) would reinvigorate the whole system and make us well.

A ten cent trial bottle will prove it. At druggists.

DEVIL MASK DANCERS.

A Weird Lot of East Indians Who Perform Curious Dances.

Bright-eyed Madras dancing girls, sacred silver dancers from Kandy, Cotta dwarf dancers, dancers from the Hydrabad Theatrical Company, and many more of an equally strange kind are with the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth. One kind, however, called the devil mask dancers, are probably the most weird and uncanny ever seen in a civilized country. The troupe, with the others, perform in the exhibition called Illustrated Oriental India, and when executing their outlandish terpsichorean exhibition, cover their heads with enormously large devil's heads, which serves the purpose of completely hiding their faces from the gaze of the people. In the masks are cut holes through which the flashing eyes of the dancers shine brilliantly, giving a life-like appearance to the uncanny heads. The dance itself cannot be described, as it consists more of posing and gesticulating than anything else, and is only performed before the priests in the sacred temples, upon certain occasions. When executed, however, in the uncertain light shed by lamps the influence wrought upon the spectators is of a mysterious and absorbingly interesting character. All the dances, songs, and music of the curious people taking part in this entertainment are interesting because of their extreme novelty, while the trim and jaunty maidens are themselves subjects of surprise, most of them being handsome in face and figure. They will all be seen in the menageries, together with all the huts, temples, musical instruments, and other concomitants of the natives when the show comes here on May 6th, while such features as the horseless carriage, representations of living sovereigns, and the military of all nations will be seen in the street parade.

THEATRICAL.

There will be offered at Music Hall next Friday a play which while somewhat strange to Plainfield enjoys the prestige of the most flattering New York, Brooklyn and Chicago press opinions. The play in question is called "For Fair Virginia," the author of which is Mr. Russ Whytal, an actor of exceptionally high standing, and a dramatist from whom we can expect great things in the very near future. At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, where "For Fair Virginia" was first presented in its present interesting and intertaining form last season for a short run, it met with immediate and emphatic favor. At the end of the third act Mr. Whytal received such an ovation as to leave no doubt about the success achieved by his intelligent and praiseworthy first effort. The play is so wholly original and ingenious in general tone and construction as to give it an independent place as a remarkably strong piece of stage work. The story employed is essentially Southern and yet the Northern sentiment during the trying period of the late unpleasantness commands the amount of serious attention requisite to holding the pleasure of all classes of theatregoers. Indeed, this author has been commended for the delightfully refreshing manner in which he deals with so dangerous a theme. Mr. and Mrs. Whytal are seen to special advantage in a cast composed of splendid talent, and everything that scenic splendor and other special environments can add are potent factors in presenting a dramatic entertainment of the English order.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Being applied directly to the diseased membrane it affords instantaneous relief and will effect a perfect cure of catarrh.

TO CONVERT DRUMMERS.

Commendable Mission of a New Religious Society.

It Is Called the "International Commercial Travelers' Circle, Order of King's Sons" — Special Aims of the Unique Association.

Representatives of a brand new religious society have arrived in Chicago. They came during the week, fully equipped and prepared to convert the city by a novel method.

The society is called "The International Commercial Travelers' Circle, Order of King's Sons."

The circle is composed of commercial travelers in the United States and Canada, making it international in character. Its members, realizing the need of definite and systematic work for the upbuilding and enlargment of Christ's Kingdom among their fellow-travelers, have thus organized to aid in the work by the power of members, example, and right living and precept.

While still few in numbers, the small proportion of traveling men who are at work, quietly and conscientiously, feel that they can better the spiritual condition of their associates and stimulate Christian activity, and induce their fellow-men to throw their influence for good with the circle.

The special aim of the association is of course to reach the commercial travelers—who, the society claims, are sadly in need of reform.

The requirements for membership are stated in a printed circular, as follows:

"That a man be a lover of the Lord Jesus Christ. That he serve Him according to the dictates of the Holy Spirit. That he abstain from practices evil in His sight and strive to be a power for God. 'In His Name,' according to the motto of the order."

The badge of the Order of King's Sons is a silver cross, which members are earnestly requested to constantly wear.

Nor are dues forgotten, for every applicant must send his one dollar (the annual dues) with his application for membership.

But the novel feature of the whole organization is the method they have chosen to bring their work before the public and to distribute well-meaning advice and Scriptural texts and warnings among men, and of course the new women.

Tracts, whether they are presented under the guise or disguise of books, pamphlets, cards, or pictures, have long since lost their power to attract attention.

To reach the public something new had to be devised.

And if novelty alone in the manner of presenting religion to the public will carry conviction, the "King's Sons" have certainly struck it, for each member is provided for general distribution with 100 or more gay-colored, round, brass-rimmed disks, on which are inscribed appropriate texts, such as: "Jesus died for thee, seek ye Him;" "The gift of God is eternal life," and "Life is short, Death is sure, Sin is death, Christ's the cure."

The unsuspecting man, woman or child is handed one or more of these disks by the zealous brethren who belong to the King's Sons' society, and curiosity, if nothing else, will, it is hoped by the association, impel whoever receives them to read the good, if not original, verses inscribed upon them.

The officers of the society are: President, John De Witt, Brooklyn, N. Y.; first vice president, Gus Hannock, Albany, N. Y.; second vice president, R. M. Neilson, Baltimore, Md.; third vice president, C. P. W. Nims, Boston, Mass.; fourth vice president, H. G. Adams, Plainfield, N. J.; fifth vice president, John Cook Brown, Philadelphia, Pa.; secretary and treasurer, Edwin S. Robbins, Waterbury, Conn.

Longest Lawsuit on Record.

A law case which lasted 300 years has again come on for a hearing in a Bavarian court. It was waged between the market community of Burginn, at Unterfrauken, in Bavaria, and the Lords of Thungen. The case was commenced on the 21st of June, 1595, when the legal advisers of this community appeared before the legal tribunal which then held its sitting in Speier, against the Lords of Thungen for a sum of 2,000,000 marks as owners of a forest of noble oaks and beech trees. Centuries gradually thinned the ranks on each side, but others took up the cause, and when the case came up the other day matters seemed as fresh as ever. It is hoped, however, that the 21st of June, 1896, will see the last of the venerable suit.

A PRECOCIOUS PUN.

Mrs. Stuckey (a widow)—What are you staying behind for—are you tired?

Willy (who has overheard the proposal)—I should say so; I kin hardly ge a step-father.—Judge.

Domestic Strategy.

Husband—Why do you scold the butcher? It isn't his fault that the meat comes to the table all dried up. Scold the cook.

Wife—I don't dare to; but I'm in hopes that if I keep on scolding the butcher he'll get mad and come around and scold the cook.—N. Y. Weekly

We might tell you more about One Minute Cough Cure, but you probably know that it cures a cough. Everyone does who has used it. It is a perfect remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness. It is an especial favorite for children, being pleasant to take and quick in curing. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

WORK AND WEAR.

Repairs to Machinery While in Motion.

How Waste May Be Prevented and Energy Maintained.

If a machine works, it must wear out. It matters not whether it is the common plow of the field or the most complicated printing press. Work means waste. It is certain that these machines would last much longer if they did not wear out. Then only some accident would necessitate the purchase of new parts.

The human body is a complicated piece of machinery which is constantly at work. There is not an activity of the body, from the movement of a muscle to the digestion of food, which does not cause waste. Physiology teaches that we are constantly being supplied with new material to take the place of that which is worn out.

When the body is debilitated by disease, how quickly it could be built up, provided we could only allow all the parts complete rest. But, of course, this is impossible, for the changing of the foods into the various organs and tissues of the body means work, and this work means waste. However, we can aid the body in its work and save it much labor.

We can take especial care to use only those foods which are easily digested, and yet are highly nourishing. When it is necessary to add some valuable food which is also a medicine, as cod-liver oil, then we can save the body an immense amount of work by digesting the oil before giving it. How can an oil be digested? If you will consult some work on physiology you will learn that an oil is digested when it is broken up into minute globules, so small that high powers of the microscope are necessary to see the little drops of fat. When the oil has been digested in this way it is called an "emulsion."

This is why Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites is so easily borne by delicate stomachs, does not cause diarrhœa, and never produces gas in the stomach. When persons are ill, the digestion is also weak. But Scott's Emulsion is already digested, hence the body is not obliged to expend strength in preparing it for absorption. You at once see the advantage of Scott's Emulsion over raw cod-liver oil. It also contains the hypophosphites which every one recognizes as such strong tonics to the nervous system.

Scott's Emulsion has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. Ask your doctor. Because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. Insist on Scott's Emulsion with trade-mark of man and fish. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby.

The House of the Wolf

BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN

WITH PICTURES BY FRANK VERBECK

I suppose—for I saw the giant's color change and his lip quiver as I spoke—that his previous words had been only a guess. For a moment the devil seemed to be glaring through his eyes; and he looked at Marie and me as a wild animal at its keepers. Yet he maintained his cynical politeness in part. "Mademoiselle desires my congratulations?" he said, slowly, laboring with each word, it seemed. "She shall have them on the happy day. She shall certainly have them then. But these are troublous times. And mademoiselle's betrothed is, I think, a Huguenot, and has gone to Paris. Paris—well, the air of Paris is not good for Huguenots, I am told."

I saw Catherine shiver; indeed, she was on the point of fainting. I broke in rudely, my passion getting the better of my fears. "M. de Pavannes can take care of himself, believe me," I said, brusquely.

"Perhaps so," Bezers answered, his voice like the grating of steel on steel. "But at any rate this will be a memorable day for mademoiselle. The day on which she receives her first congratulations—she will remember it as long as she lives! Oh, yes, I will answer for that, M. Anne," he said, looking brightly at one and another of us, his eyes more oblique than ever, "mademoiselle will remember it, I am sure!"

It would be impossible to describe the devilish glance he flung at the poor sinking girl as he withdrew, the horrid emphasis he threw into those last words, the covert deadly threat they conveyed to the dullest ears. That he went then was small mercy. He had done all the evil he could do at present. If his desire had been to leave fear behind him, he had certainly succeeded.

Kit, crying softly, went into the house; her innocent coquetry more than sufficiently punished already. And we three looked at one another with blank faces. It was clear that we had made a dangerous enemy, and an enemy at our own gates. As the vidame had said, these were troublous times when things were done to men—ay, and to women and children—which we scarce dare to speak of now. "I wish the vicomte were here," Croisette said, uneasily, after we had discussed several unpleasant contingencies.

"Or even Malines, the steward," I suggested.

"He would not be much good," replied Croisette. "And he is at St. Antonin, and will not be back this week. Father Pierre, too, is at Albi."

"You do not think," said Marie, "that he will attack us?"

"Certainly not!" Croisette retorted, with contempt. "Even the vidame would not dare to do that in time of peace. Besides, he has not half a score of men here," continued the lad, shrewdly, "and counting old Gil and ourselves we have as many. And Pavannes always said that three men could hold the gate at the bottom of the ramp against a score. Oh, he will not try that!"

"Certainly not," I agreed. And so we crushed Marie. "But for Louis de Pavannes—"

Catherine interrupted me. She came out quickly, looking a different person; her face flushed with anger, her tears dried.

"Anne!" she cried, imperiously, "what is the matter down below—will you see?"

I had no difficulty in doing that. All the sounds of town life came up to us on the terrace. Lounging there we could hear the chaffering over the wheat measures in the cloisters of the market square, the yell of a dog, the voice of a scold, the church bell, the watchman's cry. I had only to step to the wall to overlook it all. On this summer afternoon the town had been for the most part very quiet. If we had not been engaged in our own affairs we should have taken the alarm before, remarking in the silence the first beginnings of what was now a very respectable tumult. It swelled louder even as we stepped to the wall.

We could see—a bend in the street laying it open—part of the vidame's house; the gloomy square hold which had come to him from his mother. His own chateau of Bezers lay far away in Franche Comte, but of late he had shown a preference—Catherine could best account for it, perhaps—for this mean house in Caylus. It was the only house in the town which did not belong to us. It was known as the House of the Wolf, and was a grim stone building surrounding a courtyard. Rows of wolves' heads carved in stone flanked the windows, whence their bare fangs grinned day and night at the church porch opposite.

The noise drew our eyes in this direction; and there, lolling in a window over the door, looking out on the street with a laughing eye, was Bezers himself. The cause of his merriment—we had not far to look for it—was a horseman who was riding up the street under difficulties. He was reining in his steed—no easy task on that steep, greasy pavement—so as to present some front to a score or so of ragged knaves who were following close at his heels, hooting and throwing mud and pebbles at him. The man had drawn his sword, and his oaths came up to us, mingled with shrill cries of "Vive la messe!" and half-drowned by the clattering of the horses' hoofs. We saw a stone strike him in the face, and draw blood, and heard him swear louder than before.

"Oh!" cried Catherine, clasping her hands with a sudden shriek of indignation, "my letter! They will get my letter!"

"Death!" exclaimed Croisette. "She is right! It is M. de Pavannes' courier! This must be stopped! We cannot stand this, Anne!"

"They shall pay dearly for it, by our lady!" I cried, swearing myself. "And in peace time, too—the villains! Gil! Francis!" I shouted. "Where are you?"

And I looked round for my fowling piece, while Croisette jumped upon the wall, and, forming a trumpet with his hands, shrieked at the top of his voice: "Back! he bears a letter from the vicomte!"

But the device did not succeed, and I could not find my gun. For a moment we were helpless, and before I could have fetched the gun from the house the horseman and the hooting rabble at his heels had turned a corner and were hidden by the roofs.

Another turn, however, would bring them out in front of the gateway, and, seeing this, we hurried down the ramp to meet them. I stayed a moment to tell Gil to collect the servants, and, this keeping me, Croisette reached the narrow street outside before me. As I followed him I was nearly knocked down by the rider, whose face was covered with dirt and blood, while fright had rendered his horse unmanageable. Darting aside, I let him pass—he was blinded and could not see me—and then found that Croisette—brave lad!—had collared the foremost of the ruffians and was beating him with his sheathed sword, while the rest of the rabble stood back, ashamed, yet sullen, and with anger in their eyes. A dangerous crew, I thought; not townsmen, most of them.

"Down with the Huguenots!" cried one, as I appeared, bolder than the rest.

"Down with the canaille!" I retorted, sternly, eyeing the ill-looking ring. "Will you set yourselves above the king's peace, dirt that you are? Go back to your kennels!"

The words were scarcely out of my mouth before I saw that the fellow whom Croisette was punishing had got hold of a dagger. I shouted a warning, but it came too late. The blade fell, and—thanks to God—striking the buckle of the lad's belt, glanced off harmless. I saw the steel flash up again—saw the spite in the man's eyes; but this time I was a step nearer, and before the weapon fell I passed my sword clean through the wretch's body. He went down like a log, Croisette falling with him, held fast by his stiffening fingers.

I had never killed a man before, nor seen a man die; and if I had stayed to think about it, I should have fallen sick perhaps. But it was no time for thought; no time for sickness. The crowd were close upon us, a line of flushed threatening faces from wall to wall. A single glance downwards told me that the man was dead, and I set my foot upon his neck. "Hounds! Beasts!" I cried, not loudly this time, for though I was like one possessed with rage, it was inward rage, "go to your kennels! Will you dare to raise a hand against a Caylus? Go—or when the vicomte returns, a dozen of you shall hang in the market place!"

I suppose I looked fierce enough—I know I felt no fear, only a strange exaltation—for they slunk away. Unwillingly, but with little delay the group melted, Brezers' following—of whom I knew the dead man was one—the last to go. While I still glared at them, lo! the street was empty; the last had disappeared round the bend. I turned to find Gil and half a dozen servants standing with pale faces at my back. Croisette seized my hand with a sob. "Oh, my Lord," cried Gil, quaveringly. But I shook one off, I frowned at the other.

"Take up this carrion!" I said, touching it with my foot, "and hang it from the justice elm. And then close the gates! See to it, knaves, and lose no time."

CHAPTER II.

THE VIDAME'S THREAT.

Croisette used to tell a story, of the facts of which I have no remembrance, save as a bad dream. He would have it that I left my pallet that night—I had one to myself in the summer, being the eldest, while he and Marie slept in another in the same room—and came to him and awoke him, sobbing and shaking and clutching him; and begging him in a fit of terror not to let me go. And that so I slept in his arms until morning. But as I have said, I do not remember anything of this, only that I had an ugly dream that night, and that when I awoke I was lying with him and Marie; so I cannot say whether it really happened.

At any rate, if I had any feeling of the kind it did not last long; on the contrary—it would be idle to deny it—I was flattered by the sudden respect Gil and the servants showed me. What Catherine thought of the matter I could not tell. She had the letter and apparently found it satisfactory. At any rate we saw nothing of her. Mme. Claude was busy boiling simples, and tending the messenger's hurts. And it seemed natural that I should take command.

There could be no doubt—at any rate we had none—that the assault on the courier had taken place at the vidame's instance. The only wonder was that he had not simply cut his throat and taken the letter. But looking back now it seems to me that grown men mingled some childishness with their cruelty in those days—days when the religious wars had aroused our worst passions. It was not enough to kill an enemy. It pleased people to make—I speak literally—a football of his head, to throw his heart to the dogs. And no doubt it had fallen in with the vidame's grim humor that the bearer of Pavannes' first love letter should enter his mistress' presence, bleeding and plastered with mud. And that the riffraff about our own gates should have part in the insult.

Bezers' wrath would be little abated by the issue of the affair, or the justice I had done on one of his men. So we looked well to bolts and bars and windows, although the castle is well-nigh impregnable, the smooth rock falling 20 feet at least on every side from the base of the walls. The gatehouse, Pavannes had shown us, might be blown up with gunpowder, indeed, but we prepared to close the iron grating which barred the way half-way up the ramp. This done, even if the enemy should succeed in forcing an entrance he would only find himself caught in a trap—in a steep, narrow way exposed to a fire from the top of the flanking walls, as well as from the front. We had a couple of culverines, which the vicomte had got 20 years before, at the time of the battle of St. Quentin. We fixed one of these at the head of the ramp, and placed the other on the terrace, where by moving it a few paces forward we could train it on Bezers' house, which thus lay at our mercy.

Not that we really expected an attack. But we did not know what to expect or what to fear. We had not ten servants, the vicomte having taken a score of the sturdiest lackeys and keepers to attend him at Bayonne. And we felt immensely responsible. Our main hope was that the vidame would at once go to Paris and postpone his vengeance. So again and again we cast longing glances at the House of the Wolf, hoping that each symptom of bustle heralded his departure.

Consequently it was a shock to me, and a great downfall of hopes, when Gil, with a grave face, came to me on the terrace and announced that M. le Vidame was at the gate, asking to see mademoiselle.

"It is out of the question that he should see her," the old servant added, scratching his head in grave perplexity.

"Most certainly. I will see him instead," I answered, stoutly. "Do you leave Francis and another at the gate, Gil. Marie, keep within sight, lad. And let Croisette stay with me."

These preparations made—and they took up scarcely a moment—I met the vidame at the head of the ramp. "Mlle. de Caylus," I said, bowing, "is, I regret to say, indisposed to-day, vidame."

"She will not see me?" he asked, eyeing me very unpleasantly.

"Her indisposition deprives her of the pleasure," I answered, with an effort. He was certainly a wonderful man, for at sight of him three-fourths of my courage, and all my importance, oozed out at the heels of my boots.

"She will not see me. Very well," he replied, as if I had not spoken. And the simple words sounded like a sentence of death. "Then, M. Anne, I have a crow to pick with you. What compensation do you propose to make for the death of my servant? A decent, quiet fellow, whom you killed yesterday, poor man, because his enthusiasm for the true faith carried him away a little."

"Did you take the wolf for a sheep?"

SPORTS

INS AND OUTS.

The cranks may take heart, for this city is to have a first-class baseball nine. It will play under the name of the Y. M. C. A. as last year, but will be materially strengthened. Neither the makeup of the team or the schedule have been completed, but they will be published as soon as they are announced.

Arrangements were completed this morning by which the Y. M. C. A. team will have grounds of their own. The site of the new baseball field is on the old athletic field beside Green brook, near the corner of Washington avenue and West Front street. This site will be very convenient, as it is quite near the centre of town and is easily reached from the outskirts by the trolley. Work will be started at once on a grand stand and at grading the field. There will be no need of a fence to enclose the grounds, as the brook and the Park Club property prevent admittance from one side, and the private residences on two of the other sides leave the only entrance from Washington avenue.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

While gigging at New Market pond last evening George Fisher, of West Second street, captured two carp that weighed six pounds each. Harvey Drake, of West Second street, captured one of the same weight.

The athletes of the Senior class at the High School are planning to hold a little field day of their own next Friday afternoon on the Crescent Oval. Although there are not very many boys in the class, most of them take to some form of athletics. The meet will be an informal one, similar to the practice contests of the track team, no admission being charged and no prizes offered, except that only members of the Senior class will be allowed to compete. Most of the men will enter in all the events, and try to secure the greatest number of points.

CYCLING COMMENT.

To make a proper patch on the inner tube of a double tube, clean the tubing thoroughly around the puncture with sandpaper. remove the white powder from the tube, cut a patch from pure rubber, leaving ample margin, apply to both tube and patch a thin coat of rubber cement. Dry about two minutes or until the benzine in the cement is evaporated. If possible, use two coats of cement on both patch and tube, allowing time for drying between first and second applications, then apply the patch and be sure to press it down securely at every point; the inner tube is then ready to be returned to its place. Care must be taken while placing it to avoid liability of opening an air passage under the patch.

WITH ROD AND GUN

Ed Campbell and Wm. Grattan went to the New Brooklyn pond yesterday and succeeded in shooting three black ducks and catching seventeen catfish and eels.

Another tale of patience rewarded has come to light. A few days ago Bob Skinner sat for many weary hours upon the bank of Tier's pond, and had almost given up hope of a bite, when he landed a four-ounce carp. Bob feels much elated over his capture, and has been receiving a steady stream of congratulations ever since.

LAWN TENNIS.

The Dunellen Tennis Club will open its courts on the second Saturday in May when an afternoon tea will be given by the members. Work on the courts will be begun in a few days. Last season was a very successful one for the club, but this year is expected to be even more so. Several tournaments will probably be held during the summer.

AT THE TRAPS.

David C. Allen and Fred Parsh spent a night gigging for suckers in Green brook lately, and returned with a large catch.

It is not a miracle. It wont cure everything, but it will cure piles. That's what DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will do, because it has done it in hundreds of cases. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Studying the Good Book.

There was an excellent attendance at the meeting of the Primary Teacher's Union in the Y. M. C. A. building yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Harold Serrell conducted the devotional exercises and the lesson "Use of the Bible" was taught by Mrs. Batchelor and Mrs. Powlison. The members indulged in a discussion of the lesson afterward. The president, Miss Nettie Beeching, announced that Mr. Stultz, a noted primary speaker would address the teachers and their friends next Sunday afternoon at 4:15, in the Sunday-School room of the First Baptist church. All interested are invited to attend. Next Monday afternoon the union will hold a business meeting.

Want Sunday Closing Observed.

The Epworth League of Westfield is considering the enforcement of the Sunday law, which directs the closing of all places of business on Sunday. Since the advent of the Italian fruit and candy stores in town they have been kept open on Sunday, and in summer that is their best day for business.

The children going to and from Sunday-school patronize them liberally. The Italians say that that if they are forced to close they will see that the law is applied to barber shops and drug stores.

Town Improvement Association.

The various committees of the Town Improvement Association are being organized as rapidly as possible. Until they are fully formed communications may he addressed to the president, and membership dues may be forwarded at once to Mrs. Alex. Gilbert. The dues are as follows: Active members, (women) 50 cents; young people, (under 18), 10 cents; associate members, $1; sustaining, $10; life, $25. The work proposed appeals to all, and the hearty co-operation of all is earnestly solicited.

Charles Hudnut, of North Plainfield, spent Sunday at White House.

The Misses Noretta Doyle and Kathryn Meaney returned home from New York today after visiting friends.

W. C. T. U. DECLARE IT TO BE AN ALCOHOLIC DRINK.

Other Things Considered and Espoused at the Spring Convention of the W.C.T.U. at Dunellen.—Plainfield Women Active.

The spring convention of the Union County W. C. T. U. was held in Dunellen yesterday. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson called the delegates from nine local unions to order soon after ten o'clock in the Methodist church.

Mrs. T. C. Bodide, president of the Dunellen union, led the devotional exercises, after which Rev. Mr. Custard welcomed the convention to his church.

Col. Deitrich, of Plainfield, who had been mobbed with Owen Lovejoy in old anti-slavery days, wished the women God-speed in their work. Miss Emma Starr, of Westfield, read a paper by Mrs. Mosher, on the "Best Methods of Distributing Literature." Mrs. S. R. Krom, of Plainfield, gave a report of the recent legislation in regard to the sale of tobacco to minors. Mrs. Noe, of Elizabeth, read a paper on finance.

The State President, Mrs. Emma Bourne, closed the morning exercises with a Bible reading. Luncheon was served in the lecture room of the church.

The afternoon opened in a very practical manner, with classes for secretaries, treasurers, superintendents, etc., led by the officers present, in in different parts of the church.

Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, President of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., then gave a Bible reading. Mrs. S. R. Krom spoke on "Temperance Drinks" Root-beer, advertised even in religous papers, was not a temperance drink, as it always contained alcohol and often as much as ale and lager beer.

Miss Mary Campbell, State secretary of that department, spoke on Young Women's Work. She said they had an influence with children and young men that they ought to use for temperance. The next exercise was of especial interest. It was a meeting of a model union conducted by Mrs. Tomlinson, in which most of the members of the Plainfield Union took part. They all sat together in the front seats and were decorated with immense white paper bows. Reports were read, business was discussed and everything was done in a correct, parliamentary manner. Even humorous resolutions were discussed seriously much to the amusement of the audience.

Miss Yates, Mrs. Cahoone, Mrs. Blair, Mrs. French, Mrs. McNaughton, Mrs. Brokaw, Mrs. Case, Mrs. Parse, Mrs. Dobbins, Mrs. Maxon, Mrs. Winters, Mrs. Titsworth, Miss Cahoone and Miss Tomlinson were among those who took part in the instructive exercise.

The resolutions adopted favored thorough temperance instruction in the public schools, the ballot for women, that pastors be urged to preach sermons on temperance every three months and the formation of anti-cigarette leagues. The afternoon session closed by replies from Mrs. Bourne to the inquires found in the "Question Box."

There was a large attendance in the evening when Mrs. Hammel gave an address on Christian Citizenship. One of the interesting incidents of the meeting was the sending off of three homing pigeons from in front of the church by Mrs. Noe, of Elizabeth.

Mrs. Noe found upon her return home in the evening that the birds had reached Elizabeth at 11 a. m., forty minutes after the start. The weather was very cloudy or the trip would have been made quicker.

Pleased With the Exhibition.

The attendance at the Camera Club exhibit last night was quite large and all those who came expressed themselves as being pleased with the exhibition. This afternoon the teachers and pupils of the High School attended the exhibition in a body and the committee is on duty to explain the different exhibits to them.

HOLY SPIRIT FOR SERVICE.

Christian Alliance Members Hear a Missionary Talk of Her Work.

A very interesting and helpful meeting was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms last evening by the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance. The meeting was in charge of Miss Louise Shepard, of New York, assisted by Miss Margaret Suman, an outgoing missionary to the Congo. Miss Shepard sang a beautiful selection, "What would Jesus do," and made a few remarks. The subject of the meeting was "Filled with the Holy Spirit for Service." She spoke of Christian duties, that those who were called should immediately respond, and the blessings of so doing. Miss Suman told of her call to the foreign field and her joy and happiness in being able to respond. She sails the middle of next month for Africa.

Miss Shepard made a stirring appeal to those who wished the blessings of the better life to assist in the work. Her appeal was responded to by a liberal collection which will go to the support of Miss Mary T. Maxwell Ford, whom the Plainfield Branch is now supporting at Jerusalem. The attendance at the meeting was very large.

WHAT GOOD ROADS DO.

Plainfield Real Estate Dealers Feel Confident of the Future.

The Mail and Express last Saturday published the following:

Plainfield is probably, with reason, expecting a better spring season than any of the other New Jersey towns, and already real estate men there report active inquiry. The town is looking very attractive in its spring dress, its detached houses, surrounded by fine gardens and lawns, being all kept in shipshape order, even in winter.

The roads are, as elsewhere in New Jersey, a surprise to new comers; the street committee of Plainfield spent $17,000 last year, and will spend about as much in 1896, and when to this is added the interest of a house-owning population—three houses in five are owned by their occupants—the result is a series of streets that would make Commissioners Hedges and Waring green with envy.

A great incentive to good roads in and around the city is the marvelous number of cyclists in the town—no less than 4,000 out of a total population of 18,000. A bicycle stands on the piazza of every house, and the wheel is considered a necessity in the household. The roads in and around Plainfield are undoubtedly as fine as any in the country, and just as every road led to Rome, so when one goes driving in any direction from the city, if he turns down a road leading either to right or left, it is pretty sure to bring him back to Plainfield eventually.

University Extension Lectures.

The University Extension committee announce a course of twelve or more lectures for the winter of 1896-7. Six will be on Astronomy by Prof. Robert M. Prentice. They will be illustrated by lantern slides and commence Tuesday, November 3d. The remaining lectures will be delivered by Prof. James F. Griggs on "Vital Forces in Modern History," and will begin early in January. The price of the tickets for the course will be $1.50.

Fountain Must Have Stop Valves.

L. W. Randolph, the druggist, asked the Water Supply Company yesterday to turn the water on in the public fountain on Front street. The company said that if Mr. Randolph would have the fountain arranged with stop valves they would furnish the water. This action is taken on account of the many complaints made regarding the moist condition of the sidewalk when the water is continually running. Mr. Randolph will have it fixed.

How Many Letter Boxes Are There?

"Did you ever realize how many letter boxes we have?" remarked Postmaster Hetfield to a Press reporter yesterday afternoon. The Press reporter had never thought much about the subject and said so. Mr. Hetfield then told how he had just completed a new list and that there were just seventy-six different boxes where the letters and other mail might await the coming of the carriers.

His Reins Were Crossed.

As the heavy truck belonging to William Hand was coming from the freight house Monday night with a heavy load of gas pipe, Jack Fillmore, who was driving, got his reins crossed and pulled the horses right into the iron fence that surrounds the grass plot there, breaking the fence. Luckily the horses escaped injury.

Presbyterian Trustees Organize.

The trustees of the First Presbyterian church met last evening and organized by selecting Clarence E. Bond, president; H. A. Pope, secretary; and W. H. Shotwell, treasurer.

CHAPTER NO. 2 IN THE TROUBLE BETWEEN D. VITROILO AND WIFE.

A Brother Assaults the Italian's Wife When She Went to Her Husband's Shoe Shop—The Brothers Will Meet in Jail.

The quarrel between Dominick Vitroilo, the Italian, who keeps a cobbler's shop on South Second street, and his wife, and its outcome at the city court, as was told in The Press several nights ago, was followed by another scrap which proved a sequel to the first. This one also was brought into the city court.

When Dominick Vitroilo went "down the road," or in plain English, was sent to Elizabeth, his brother, Antonio Vitroilo, proceeded to take possession of the absent man's shop. Yesterday Mrs. Vitroilo went to the shop and started to enter when her brother-in-law appeared on the scene. His love for Mrs. Vitroilo had not been increased by the knowledge that it was she that had had his brother arrested and locked up, and so his reception of her was anything but agreeable. He ordered her out of the place, but she refused to go as she said the place belonged to her husband.

A lively war of words ensued, and then he resorted to violence. He struck her, pounded her, kicked and beat her until she was one mass of bruises.

As soon as the police heard of the matter, Antonio Vitroilo was arrested and placed in the rookery. Late yesterday afternoon the case came up for trial before Judge DeMeza and Mrs. Vitroilo was arrested and placed in the rookery. Late yesterday afternoon the case came up for trial before Judge DeMeza and Mrs. Vitroilo, with a black eye, and numerous black and blue spots, appeared against him. There were several Italians among the spectators, and they took a lively interest in the case.

After hearing both sides of the case, Judge DeMeza gave the brother-in-law his choice between a fine of $20 or sixty days free board at Elizabeth. The Italian decided to join his brother in jail.

The Third Tea.

The third of Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen's charming teas was given yesterday afternoon at her home on Rockview avenue. Mrs. McCutchen was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Charles McCutchen, Miss Florence Marsh, Mrs. George Chapman, Mrs. Baldwin, of Montclair, Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mrs. William Roome, Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Howell. The table decorations were smilax and white roses. Mrs. Walter McGee and Mrs. George Evans presided at the table. The young ladies assisting in the dining room were the Misses Grace Yerkes, Grace Cooley, Hattie Shreve and Ada Smock.

A Sociable Arranged.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Warren chapel held a meeting yesterday afternoon that was largely attended by the members. A letter was read from the missionary, to whom the society sent a barrel of necessities about a month ago, thanking them for their kindness. Letters from the home and foreign boards, thanking the society for recent donations, were also read. It was decided to hold a sociable some time in the near future, the entertainment at which will be mainly of a musical nature. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gavett will be in charge.

Their Semi-annual Election.

The members of the Parliamentary Club are specially urged to be present at the meeting tomorrow, Thursday, as the semi-annual election of officers will take place. The quotations at roll call will be from the writings of Shakespeare, it being the anniversary of his birth, and short extracts from the poet's life will be read by several members of the club.

Violated a City Ordinance.

George Jacobson, Alfred Mountijohn and Arthur Moore were shooting at a target near West Third street, when Roundsman Fredrickson happened to hear them and this morning the three men had to answer to the charge of using firearms in the city limits. Sentence was suspended on them.

Junior Rally Proposed.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Superintendents of the local union are considering the advisability of holding a Junior rally during the coming Christian Endeavor State Convention. Some are opposed while others favor it. The question will be decided in the near future.

A Prohibition Delegate.

At the meeting of the Prohibitionists held in Elizabeth on Monday, Sylvester Scribner was elected a delegate to attend the convention to be held at Trenton.

HUM OF THE TROLLEY.

IT WILL SOON BE HEARD ALONG THE NEW EXTENSIONS.

Notwithstanding the Slight Delay Caused by Rejection of Ties, the Work is Being Pushed Rapidly Along.

The street railway contractors are hard at work again after the delay caused by the rejection of the ties by Supt. Adleman, of the street railway. A new supply of ties has been received and the work is going on with its usual rapidity. Had not the delay occurred the track would have been laid and covered to Watchung avenue by last night, one day ahead of Supt. Yarnell's estimate. At 2 o'clock this afternoon the track had been laid almost up to Park avenue, and all of Fourth street will probably be completed by tomorrow noon at the latest, unless another serious obstacle is met with.

The work of the contractors on Fourth street has been remarkable, especially on account of the rapidity with which it has been done. They labored under numerous disadvantages on the Netherwood extension, but now that the force is regularly organized, everything is proceeding smoothly. During the last five days 5,860 feet of track has been laid, despite the various delays, a record hard to equal.

VISION AND LIFE.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich Addresses Congregationalists at Newark Yesterday.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of this city, the retiring moderator of the Congregational Association, who were in convention at Newark, yesterday, made a short address. "Vision and Life" was his subject, and he said that it was largely because of the increase of material wealth that the poor were crushed and crowded into tenement houses. "Man," he said, "is not a tool that should be used by others. Those that labor for the intellect of men and for the material things for men are to be honored, but their labor should all be tributary to that done by the church. If one can put the likeness of Christ into a human heart it is more than to write a great poem or paint a great picture."

After touching upon the discipline of the Congregational church, which, he said, was simple in its machinery, the speaker said: "The church stands for liberty, progressiveness of thought for the spirit of religion and law."

Funeral of George Lissignolo.

The announcemect of the death of George Lissignolo came with a sudden shock to many Plainfielders who had known to like and respect him. His remains will be brought to this city for interment in Evergreen cemetery tomorrow. Inasmuch as Mr. Lissignolo was a man of extremely retiring and modest disposition, his relatives decided not to have a church service in this city, but to convey the remains direct to the cemetery where Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards will conduct a short service, and to which Mr. Lissignolo's friends in this city are invited to attend. The remains will arrive on the 4:33 p. m. train.

A Quiet Marriage.

Harry Bush, the tillerman on the hook and ladder truck, was quietly married to Miss Minnie Limbarger, of Netherwood, at Newark about six weeks ago. Mr. and Mrs. Bush are now residing at 340 East Second street. The marriage was a surprise to Bush's friends in the fire department.

A Pleasant Sociable.

The Friendship Social Club, Sons of Temperance, held a sociable in their hall in the Elkwood building last night. The hall was well filled. A programme of vocal and instrumental music, dialogues and recitations was rendered.

Congressional District Convention.

The Eighth Congressional District Convention will be held at Orange tomorrow. There are seventeen delegates from this city.

Barry Case Before the Grand Jury.

Sixteen witnesses were called to Somerville from the borough this morning to testify in the Barry case.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

HOME MISSIONS TALKED ABOUT.

First Baptist Church Women Elect Officers and Hear Reports.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church met in the Sunday-school room of the church yesterday afternoon and heard the reports of the secretary and treasurer. The latter report showed that the society had contributed $592 during the past year to work among the colored people of the south, and the Indians of Oklohoma. Three barrels of clothing, etc., had been sent to Nebraska, and the balance of the money has been sent to the Home Board of Missions in Chicago.

The new officers of the society recently elected are as follows: President, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes; vice-presidents, Mrs. J. D. Runyon, Mrs. R. Knox, Mrs. Frank E. Kinsman; secretary, Mrs. S. T. Wilson; treasurer, Mrs. D. Bowman.

There are now 42 life members in the society each paying $25 a year. During the year two have died. The society is in a healthy, prosperous condition and is doing good work.

GIVE SKIN FOR THEIR SISTER.

Brother and Sisters of Maggie Cotter Trying to Save Her From Her Burns.

Miss Maggie Cotter, of Brooklyn, who was terribly burned about her body by her clothes catching fire from a gas stove, was taken to the Elizabeth City Hospital today and Dr. Victor Mravlag commenced the skin grafting process.

A sister of the burned girl lay alongside of her and submitted to having large patches of skin cut from her body. The skin was quickly laid on the burns of the suffering girl.

The girl's burns are so bad that two other sisters have volunteered to undergo the ordeal of having skin cut from their bodies to help their sister.

Dr. Mravlag says that it will be necessary also to cut big pieces of skin from the girl's brother, who has offered to supply the deficiency. The girl by that time will have been made almost entirely over with the skin of her entire family, except her mother.

THREW ROTTEN EGGS.

Malicious Borough Youngsters Hauled Up in Police Court.

Certain residents of the borough have been much annoyed lately by boys throwing spoiled eggs at their houses. It was exceedingly difficult to detect them at it, but yesterday some other boys informed the marshals who the guilty ones were, and accordingly Marshal Hansen arrested them. Last evening two were taken before Justice Crosley, and this morning the remaining one was arraigned. They were given a severe reprimand and upon their promise to cease their depredations were released. On account of the boy's parents their names are withheld, though The Daily Press is in possession of them. It would have been a better plan if the boys had been fined $10 each for their nightly amusement.

Elizabeth's New Water Supply.

One of the huge drive wheels which John Kean, Jr., president of the Water Company, is sinking at "The Hummocks," one mile from Elizabeth on Morris avenue, is completed. It was sunk to a depth of 360 feet, where they struck a vein of the purest spring water, which flows from the standpipe at the rate of 600 000 gallons a day. Nine other wells are now being driven. S. W. Titus and John Heerdegen, of New York, and Arthur J. Connelly, of Newark, are under contract to furnish ten million gallons of water a day from these wells, and if the other wells yield as well they will do it, with a million gallons a day to spare. This water is cold, clear and very pleasant to the taste. It will be pumped to the big reservoir of the company's for Elizabeth's use.

Death of T. H. Clarkson.

Thomas H. Clarkson, aged 52 years, of 540 West Front street, died at his home last evening after an illness of about four years with consumption. He was confined to his room since last August. He was a painter by trade, and several years ago was in partnership with his brother, James B. Clarkson. He was a faithful member of the Congregational church and attended service regularly when able. A wife survives him. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the house.

The Clothes Returned.

Jesse Eckard, who stole clothing, shoes and hats from the home of Geo. Kirch, of Somerset street, last week, as published exclusively in The Press, returned the coat and vest yesterday. It is thought that the rest of the goods will gradually come back.

Complication of Diseases From Measles.

Antonio Lusardi's little daughter died at his home on Park avenue this morning at about 10 o'clock. The little girl died very suddenly with a complication of diseases that started with measles.

A NEW CITY TO ARISE.

LARGE TRACT OF LAND TO BE DEVELOPED NEAR PLAINFIELD.

A Syndicate Makes a Very Liberal Offer to the General Electric Light Company Who Will Give Work to 10,000 People.

All residents of this neighborhood will be deeply interested in an announcement to be made by the Electrical Review today. It will state that it is credibly informed that the General Electric Company will close its large factories at Schenectady, N. Y.; Lynn, Mass., and Harrison, N. J., and will remove its entire manufacturing business to a new and modern plant to be erected by the company near Elizabeth.

"The deal," it says, "is one of great magnitude, and has been hanging fire for over a year and a-half. Nearly all the obstacles to its successful accomplishment have been disposed of, and it is expected that the final arrangements may be concluded this week.

"The idea had its origin with a syndicate of Elmira (N. Y.) and western capitalists, who have formed the New Orange Industrial Association. C. W. Manahan is general manager of the company. Matthew Arnot, a banker of Elmira, is heavily interested in the company. He is credited with being worth $16,000,000.

"The association has acquired a tract of land lying between Elizabeth and South Orange, aggregating five square miles in area. Five prominent railroads cross the tract of land. In order to make this tract of land valuable it was necessary to attract manufacturers, and to that end the company is said to have made a most liberal offer to the General Electric Company.

"This offer is stated to include the following: The land company will build, to the extent of $1,000,000, a manufacturing plant after the General Electric Company's own designs, the plant to be turned over in fee-simple to the General Electric Company on its completion. The land company is to give the electric company a cash bonus of $400,000 and a further allowance of $175,000 for moving expenses. The old factories belonging to the General Electric Company remain their property, and in time may be sold or leased for a considerable sum.

"The combination of the company's manufacturing interests in one place means that 10,000 or more hands will find employment in their factories, and that a good-sized town will be required to accommodate the workmen and their families."

CONNECTICUT REPUBLICANS MEET

Resume of the Work Transacted by Massachusetts and Rhode Island Democrats in State Convention—Election in Louisiana.

New Haven, Conn., April 22.—The republican state convention opened in the Hyperion last night and the organization of the convention was perfected. Judge Edgar M. Warner of Putnam was selected as the temporary presiding officer. The allusion of Judge Warner in his address to the various candidates formed the first sensational episode of the convention. The mention of Allison and Morton evoked strong applause, but prolonged cheering followed the presentation of the names of Speaker Reed and ex-Gov. McKinley. Samuel Fessenden made a brief address and created great enthusiasm by stating that Reed was the logical candidate to support. The committees of the convention were then appointed by Judge Warner and the convention adjourned until to-day. The caucuses of the different counties took place after the adjournment for the selection of the delegates. The Reed men claim Brewer, Fessenden, Allen, Keeler, Searles, Williams and Douglass. The McKinley adherents claim Bulkeley, Hutchinson, Cheney, Brewer, Allen, Sykes and Searles. Allen, Searles and Brewer, the doubtful candidates, will not declare themselves in interviews.

MASSACHUSETTS DEMOCRATS.

Synopsis of the Work Transacted at Their Convention in Boston.

Boston, April 22.—The democratic state convention, with John R. Thayer of Worcester as permanent chairman, transacted its business speedily and without any hitch. John E. Russell of Leicester, George Fred Williams of Dedham, John W. Corcoran of Clinton and James W. Donovan of Boston were elected delegates-at-large and F. M. Ezequel of Springfield, W. P. Butler of Holyoke, Henry V. Cunningham of Boston, Fisher Pearson of Lowell alternates-at-large. The platform, after congratulating President Cleveland's administration, says: "We demand the maintenance of the existing gold standard of value, and that the government shall keep all its obligations at all times redeemable and payable in gold; and we oppose the free coinage of silver and any further purchases of silver bullion or the coinage thereof on government accout. We reaffirm the demands of our recent state platform that the government shall take the initial steps for the withdrawal from circulation of the legal-tender notes issued in the time of war under the pledge of prompt retirement." The name of ex-Governor Russell was most earnestly recommended to the consideration of the Chicago convention as the candidate of Massachusetts' democrats for the office of president.

Rhode Island Democrats.

Providence, April 22.—Rhode Island democrats at their convention yesterday declared themselves in favor of William E. Russell of Massachusetts for the democratic nomination for president, approved the adminstration of President Cleveland, demanded that the gold standard be maintained and opposed the free coinage of silver. The Monroe doctrine was affirmed and the Wilson bill declared to be a step in the right direction and should be given a fair test. Delegates to the Chicago convention were selected as follows: Richard B. Comstock of Providence; George W. Greene of Woonsocket; Miles A. McNamee of Providence; Jesse H. Metcalf of Providence; James F. Van Alen of Newport; David S. Baker of North Kingstown; John H. Tucker of Warwick, and John E. Conley of Warren.

McKinley's Boom at Amsterdam, N. Y.

Amsterdam, N. Y., April 22.—Last evening a mass meeting was held in this city in the interest of ex-Governor McKinley for president. Ex-assemblyman E. Watson Gardiner presided, and the speakers were senator Frank D. Pavey, Charles H. Dennison, T. St. John Gaffey and Col. Lovell H. Jerome, all of New York. Resolutions endorsing Mr. McKinley for president were adopted. Embodied in the resolutions was the following: "That the republican state convention recently held in New York did not represent in its action the attitude of the majority of the republicans of the state, and that the convention was called at a time before there could be a chrystalization of republican sentiment in the state."

Harrisburg Filling with Republicans.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 22.—The hotels are filling with delegates to the republican state convention which meets to-morrow morning. The chief interest centres in the fight for state chairman. Indications point to the election of John P. Elkin of Indiana county, although Frank Willing Leach says he will win. Beacon and Grow will be the nominees for congress at large.

Alabama Democrats for Free Silver.

Montgomery, Ala., April 22.—The democratic state convention held here last night was run by the free silver delegates in the interest of the white metal. The platform was for free and unlimited coinage and the delegation to Chicago will be of the same way of thinking.

Signed by Gov. Griggs.

Trenton, April 22.—Gov. Griggs has signed the bill under which it will hereafter be illegal to employ for oyster dredging non-residents of New Jersey.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

The New York Bar Association Presents Plans to the President.

Washington, April 22.—A committee of the New York State Bar association appointed to prepare a plan for creation of an international court of arbitration called on President Cleveland by appointment yesterday afternoon and presented a plan recommended for that purpose. Mr. Cleveland promised to give careful consideration to the views presented. The proposal is to establish a permanent international court of arbitration, to be composed of nine members, each representative to be a member of the supreme or highest court of the nation he shall represent, and to be chosen by a majority of his associates, because of his high character as a publicist and judge and his recognized ability and irreproachable integrity. Each judge is to hold office during life or the will of the court selecting him. The court thus constituted is to make its own rules and to fix its place of meeting. Controverted questions are to be submitted by treaty between the disputing nations to the court with an express stipulation that all parties shall conform to whatever determination the court shall make of the controversy. Independent powers not represented in the tribunal may submit controversies to its decision by complying with the rules of the court on contributing such stipulated amount to its expenses as may be provided for by the rules or determined by the court. It is recommended that the president enter at once into correspondence with representatives of the governments of Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia, The Netherlands, Mexico, Brazil and the Argentine Republic.

TREASURY GOLD RESERVE.

$125,000,000 Withdrawn Since July 1 of Last Year.

Washington, April 22.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day stood at $125,912,637. Only $2,000,000 of gold remain to be turned into the treasury from the last bond sale of $100,000,000. On February 10 of this year the gold reserve had declined to $44,000,000, its lowest point. The highest point reached after that date was $128,000,000 as the gold from the last bond sale was paid. Since February 10 there have been withdrawn from the treasury in the redemption of United States notes and treasury notes $39,000,000 in gold, and since July 1, 1895, the withdrawals have been $125,000,000 or nearly $15,000,000 more than was derived from the last bond sale. The total withdrawals for the present month have been $4,725,000.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau Weekly Bulletin for the Eastern States.

Washington, April 22.—The weather bureau has issued its crop bulletin for the week ending last evening. The following are abstracts: New England; grass and fruit buds have started very fast, the latter dangerously so; snow drifts and frosts still in extreme north. New York; tress budding and grass and wheat brightening wonderfully, but good rains badly needed; rye generally wintered poorly; sugar season almost over, quality good; hops being uncovered. New Jersey; abnormally high temperatures have given great impetus to all vegetation; early fruit trees blossoming; rye improving. Pennsylvania; wheat and grass improving, but many fields injured by last year's drought; tobacco plants up and fruit trees blooming; rain needed.

Yale Baseball Rule Enforced.

New Haven, Conn., April 22.—The management of the Yale baseball association have put into effect the rule recently announced by the faculty, that no member of the 'Varsity team who has played on an athletic team club during the summer shall be eligible. Two candidates for the Yale team, Ben Farnham of this city and George Wakefield of Boston, have been notified to stop training on this ground.

HIGH DESTINY THEIRS

Cleveland Hopes To See the English-American Ties Strengthened.

LETTER TO BIRMINGHAM CELEBRATION

British Press Sees a Friendly Move in the Message and Expresses the Hope That Salisbury Will Give a Return Grasp of the Hand.

Birmingham, April 22.—The thirty-second annual Shakespeare commemoration of the Birmingham Dramatic and Literary club was held last night in the Grosvenor room of the Grand hotel. About 300 guests were present, among them being Ambassador Bayard and Mrs. Bayard. George W. Parker, the American consul and president of the club, occupied the chair. A letter was read by Mr. Parker from President Cleveland ackowledging an invitation to attend the celebration. Mr. Cleveland said: "Everything that tends to keep alive the memory of Shakespeare and preserve a proper appreciation of his work challenges my earnest interest and approval, and though I cannot be with you on the occasion you contemplate I am glad to know that our American people will be prominently represented. There is much said and written in these days concerning the relations that should exist, bound close by the strongest ties, between the English speaking peoples, and concerning the high destiny that awaits them in concerted effort. I hope we shall never know the time when the ennobling sentiment will be less often expressed or in the least lose their potency and influence. Surely if English speech supplies the token of united effort for the good of mankind and the impulse of an exalted international mission, we do well to honor fittingly the name and memory of William Shakespeare."

SHAKESPEARE CELEBRATION.

Friendly Comment of the London Press on President Cleveland's Letter.

London, April 22.—The Daily News will to-day say that it sees in Mr. Cleveland's letter to Consul Parker a deliberate intention to facilitate the closing of an unpleasant episode in the relations between Great Britain and the United States, and adds that it reciprocates the intention. It further expresses the wish that President Cleveland would endorse his sentiments in the shape of a draft of a treaty for a permanent arbitration tribunal. The Chronicle will say: President Cleveland in an admirable letter extends an open hand to the old country. Will Lord Salisbury give Mr. Bayard a return grasp to-morrow? He might, at least, send a cordial telegram to the mayor of Stratford.

Bayard Talks on Literature.

Birmingham, April 22.—Mr. Bayard delivered a speech at the Shakespearean celebration banquet last evening in the course of which he dwelt upon literature as one of the chief buttresses of liberty and civilization. By its influence, he said, the progress of the world could be continued and the gains from barbarism be maintained.

AGAINST ITS DEMOLITION.

Efforts To Save the State House Designed by Bulfinch on Beacon Hill.

Boston, April 22.—A mass meeting was held in Faneuil hall yesterday afternoon attended by hundreds of patriotic men and women, who had gathered to protest against the demolition of the state house which Bulfinch designed on Beacon Hill. Mayor Bancroft of Cambridge presided, and eloquent speeches were made and resolutions were adopted declaring that the unnecessary destruction and mutilation of such a building would cause irreparable loss, not only to Massachusetts, but to all America, and would be an act of wanton vandalism. Every building of this character should be preserved from generation to generation as a source of inspiration and patriotism. A committee on preservation was appointed.

Reading-New England Settlement.

Philadelphia, April 22.—It is stated that negotiations are in progress looking to an adjustment of the long-pending claim of the Philadelphia, Reading & New England bondholders against the Philadelphia & Reading company. The amount of bonds outstanding is about $6,000,000 and no interest has ever been paid on them.

Greater New York Bill.

Albany, April 22.—Speaker Fish said this morning that the Lexow Greater New York bill would be called up in the assembly to-day and re-passed over the vetoes of Mayors Strong and Wurster. The speaker is of the opinion that the bill will receive at least eighty affirmative votes, seventy-six being necessary to re-pass it.

THE FRENCH CRISIS

Announced This Morning That the Bourgeois Ministry Will Resign.

THE SENATE'S ACTION THE CAUSE

Will Not Step Out, However, Until After They Have Laid the Facts in the Madagascar Matter Before That Body.

Paris, April 22.—The all-absorbing subject of discussion in France to-day is the action of the senate in postponing the vote on the Madagascar credits until a cabinet is formed which enjoys the confidence of both chambers. despite the urgent protest of the premier, M. Bourgeois. The radical senators and deputies visited M. Bourgeois and his colleagues and urged them to continue the struggle. Later the ministers went to the palace of the Elysee to consult President Faure. It was believed that they decided not to resign, but to convoke the chambers in national assembly and demand a revision of the constitution, presumably in the direction of withdrawing the cabinet from direct responsibility to the chambers.

Will Explain Facts of the Situation.

It was officially announced this morning that the ministry had decided to resign, but were unwilling to abandon office before explaining to the chamber of deputies the facts of the situation. Subsequently M. Bourgeois informed President Faure of the result of the conference, and afterwards conferred with M. Brisson, president of the chamber of deputies who then summoned that body to meet to-morrow. The chamber adjourned on April 2, not intending to meet again until May 19.

CAN SEE THE HUMAN HEART.

Wonderful Results Obtained by Nikola Tesla with the Reontgen Ray.

New York, April 22.—Nikola Tesla is still devoting a great deal of his time to the scientific investigation of the Roentgen ray effects. In a long communication to the Electrical Review, to be published to-day, he announces, among others, two interesting results he has achieved. One of these is that if a sensitive film be placed between two plates, say of magnesium and copper, a true Roentgen radiograph would be obtained after a very long exposure in the dark. Another wonderful result Tesla has obtained is that by the use of a new type of flourescent screen, devised in his laboratory, he has been able to greatly increase the sharpness of the outlines in a shadow on the screen and to actually see the human heart. Regarding this Tesla says: "By the use of the above apparatus I have been enabled to examine much better than before the body by means of the flourescent screen. Presently the vertebral column can be seen quite clearly, even in the lower part of the body. I hav also clearly noted the outlines of the hip bones. Looking to the region of the heart I have been able to locate it unmistakably. The background appeared much brighter, and this difference in the intensity of the shadow and surrounding has surprised me. The ribs I could now see on a number of occasions quite distinctly as well as the shoulder bones.

Gloversville, N. Y., April 22.—A syndicate of Gloversville and Johnstown capitalists has been formed with a large financial backing to engage in operations for the removal of gold from the sands in this city. An engineer commenced the survey of the gold-bearing sand tracts yesterday to ascertain the best location for the erection of a large mill, and it is expected that operations will be begun in a few weeks.

Appointments by Gov. Griggs.

Trenton, April 22.—Gov. Griggs has appointed Benjamin A. Vail to be a member of the board of managers of the New Jersey state reformatory. He has also named as a new state board of pharmacy the following: Herman J. Lohman of Jersey City, term one year; G.W. C. Phillip, Jersey City, two years; William T. Brown, Madison, three years; George R. Davis, Orange, four years; Henry A. Jordan, Bridgeton, five years.

For Cheaper Armor Plate.

Washington, April 22. — Senator Smith has given notice of an amendment to the naval bill which will instruct the secretary of the navy to make no contracts for the armor plate or other armament for the battleships authorized in the naval bill unless such plate can be secured for a sum not to exceed $300 a ton of 2,000 pounds. The present price of armor plate is $500 per ton.

Young Highwayman Sent to Prison.

Waterbury, Conn., April 22.—Judge Root has committed Louis Durocher, aged 13, to the state school for boys at Meriden during his minority, for being the ringleader of a gang of boys who waylaid Daisy Wood, aged 16, and took from her a purse containing $25.

Armenians' Condition Terrible.

London, April 22.—The Daily News to-day publishes a dispatch from Constantinople saying that news from all parts of Armenia continues to be terrible. The people everywhere hardly dare resume work, and the farmers are wholly without seed.

Death of a Young Newspaper Man.

New York, April 22.—Ferdinand J. Bennett, a well-known newspaper man, died of pneumonia and laryngitis yesterday in Brooklyn. His body was sent to his parents' home in Fulton, N. Y He was 28 years old.

LOUISIANA ELECTIONS.

The Citizen's League Carry New Orleans and the Democrats Win in the State.

New Orleans, April 22.—The Citizen's league elect their candidate for mayor by upwards of 10,000 majority over congressman Charles F. Buck. They also elect their entire city and councilmanic ticket. The negro vote went almost solidly for the Citizen's league. The combination of Citizen's leaguers and republicans was engineered to success by the political skill of ex-Gov. H. C. Warmouth. The vote for Gov. Foster and Pharr, republican candidate for governor, is close, but Foster will probably have 1,000 majority. The democrats will carry the state and control the legislature. The returns are coming in slowly, as many of the parishes have no telegraphic communication. No trouble has been reported from any country point, even St. Landry having a peaceable election, contrary to expectation. The election passed off peaceably in the city.

FOR HER NEW TRIAL.

Maria Barberi To Be Returned To New York from Sing Sing This Week.

New York, April 22.—Maria Barberi, the Italian woman who was yesterday afternoon granted a new trial, will probably be returned to the Tombs this week from Sing Sing, where she has been confined since her conviction and sentence to death by electrocution for the murder of her betrayer. The opinion handed down by the court of appeals contained about 6.000 words and was written by Judge O'Brien, all the other judges concurring. In substance, Recorder Goff's charge to the jury is characterized as biased and unfair. The case of Maria Barberi is one of the most noted in the criminal annals of the state. The girl, an Italian of very low intelligence, followed her lover into a saloon and killed him by slashing him savagely with a razor She seized his head with one hand and with the other drew the razor time and again across his throat, almost decapitating him. The murderess was tried and the jury found her guilty of murin the first degree. Immediately a number of men and women took up the girl's case. Letters and petitions by the thousands poured in upon Gov. Morton, urging him to save her.

NO BASIS OF TRUTH.

How Cubans View Government Stories of Rebel Defeats.

Havana, April 22.—Col. Vila reports having had several engagements with bands belonging to Maceo's command near Segua Cabanas. The insurgents were dislodged from the Tapia hills after a heavy fire of cannon and musketry. They fled in different directions, leaving behind them twenty-five killed and wounded. The troops are still in pursuit of the rebels. Col. Vila also reports that while a detachment of his command was leaving Cabanas for Bramales estate the center and rear guards were attacked by rebels, who were repulsed. The troops followed them to Vigia and San Claudio. Numerous rebel groups who were in ambush were dispersed after three hours' fighting. The rebel loss is supposed to have been large. No mention is made of any Spanish loss in either fight. For this reason Cubans here look upon the reports with suspicion, believing them to be,l ike many other official announcements, without any basis in truth. Forty guerrillas of San Antonio de los Banos in an engagement with a local rebel band captured four residents of the town who had disappeared in the confusion of the fight with the intention of joining the rebels. They were killed by the guerrillas.

Abbey-Grau Testimonial.

New York, April 22.—The auction sale of boxes and seats for the grand testimonial performance to Messrs. Abbey and Grau, tendered by the artists of the Italian Grand Opera company, to be held at the Metropolitan opera house next Friday evening, took place last night in the auditorium of the opera house. A goodly number of bidders was realized. Jean de Reszke bid in seat No. 13 in the orchestra circle for $100 and a similar price was paid for several other seats.

Maryland Republicans Uninstructed.

Baltimore, April 22.—The republican stare convention will meet to-day at the Lyceum theatre. It is understood it will select an uninstructed delegation to St. Louis and the delegates-at-large will probably be Messrs. James H. Gary, Geo. L. Wellington, Wm. T. Malster and Robert P. Graham. The financial plank of the platform will declare unequivocally against the free coinage of silver.

Ohio's Fatal Cyclone.

Toledo, O., April 22.—Reports this morning from Sandusky county show that the cyclone was more disastrous than it was at first said to be. At least five more persons are fatally injured. Mrs. Schorf and her child were found after having laid out all night wet to the skin. The loss to property is estimated at $200,000.

Oliver Blackwell Stout Dead.

New York, April 22.—Oliver Blackwell Stout, one of the oldest newspaper men in the city, in point of service, is dead of a complication of diseases, Mr. Stout was fifty-five years connected with the New York Dispatch, and severed connections with that paper only four months ago. He also reported for several other papers.

Canals To Open May 1.

Albany, April 22.—Supt. Aldridge of the state department of public works has ordered that the Erie and Champlain canals shall open for navigation Friday morning May 1, 1896. Notice of the opening of navigation on the Oswego, Black river and Cayuga and Seneca canals will be given later.

FRIEND OF HIS RACE

Baron Hirsch's Death a Sad Blow To Oppressed Hebrews.

GAVE MILLIONS TO RELIEVE THEM

His Charities in Other Directions Also Dispensed Upon a Colossal Scale—A Successful Banker and Almost as Rich as the Rothschilds.

Vienna, April 22.—Baron Maurice de Hirsch, whose death occurred yesterday afternoon of heart disease, was born at Munich sixty-three years ago. He was known all over the world as a successful financier and his charities were wide-spread and world famous. His career at the Athenee was not marked by any peculiar promise, and at seventeen he went into business. Before long his capacity as a financier became evident; his moderate patrimony soon doubled itself, and his personal influence was greatly increased by a matrimonial alliance with Mlle. Bischoffsheim, the daughter of a Belgian senator. In 1866 the commercial collapse of M. Langrand Dumonceau, which shook the money world of Belgium to its foundations, gave him his opportunity. He secured the most valuable of the assets, including the Turkish railways, and by his skilful manipulation of them built up in a quarter of a century a fortune which is almost equal to that of the Rothschilds. No man who has acquired such vast riches has made more charitable use of them.

Offered $10,000,000 To Relieve Distress.

He soon became deeply interested in the miserable condition of the Jews in Russia, and he determined to take all possible steps to come to their assistance. He entered into negotiations with the Russian government to this effect, and proposed to devote the sum of $10,000,000 to that object. Certain stipulations imposed by the donor, though of a kind usual in such cases—such as that the money should be invested in the hands of trustees—were not in accordance with the desire of the Russians, who wished to have the whole and sole handling of the money, and Baron de Hirsch was obliged to withdraw his offer. He thereupon decided to take other steps. This, however, did not prevent him, as a proof that he had no religious prejudice, from handing to the chief of the holy synod, M. de Pobiedonostzet, a gift of $200,000 for the orthodox Russian schools.

Gave Enormous Sums for Emigration.

Baron de Hirsch then began to encourage and help Russian Jews to emigrate. Enormous sums have been given by him for this purpose. America was the first country looked to, and to provide funds for the emigrants and for the education of their children was the prime object of his munificent gift of $2,400,000. But, the persecution of the Jews still continuing in Russia, it became necessary to find some other outlet than the United States, and he sent a commission composed of three competent men—an English officer of engineers, a Belgian, and a German—to the Argentine republic to report on the agricultural prospects of that country. Their report being favorable, a further important sum was provided by Baron de Hirsch to enable Russian Jews to emigrate to that country and purchase land there for their benefit.

His Charities Colossal.

In other directions, and especially in the neighborhood of his magnificent establishments in Bavaria, his charities have been dispensed upon a colossal scale. He has expended millions for school and hospital purposes, and has always exhibited the largest liberality of mind as well as of purse, being notably free from all religious prejudice. At Eichorn and Johann he entertained in princely style, and his collections of art treasures in both places are of inestimable value. A visit which the Prince of Wales paid to the financier some years ago caused a good deal of comment. The baron was an enthusiastic sportsman, was a good shot and rider, and was fairly successful upon the turf, owning some of the best bred horses of the day.

Opposed to the Reformatory.

Hartford, April 22.—The board of directors of the Connecticut reformatory, which was established by act of the last legislature, has purchased twenty-eight acres of land on the outskirts of this city for $10,000. It adjoins a parcel of twenty-seven acres recently purchased and the reformatory will be erected thereon. The property holders in the city are opposed to having the reformatory located here and they will fight the matter.

To Reimburse Loyal Southerners.

Washington, April 22.—The senate committee on claims has reported favorably as an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill the omnibus bill appropriating $552,466 to cover the claims reported favorably by the court of claims under the Bowman act for stores and supplies furnished the federal troops during the war of the rebellion by loyal citizens residing in the south.

To Investigate Only One Soldiers' Home.

Washington, April 22.—The resolution of Representative Blue providing for an investigation of any or all of the National Soldiers' homes has been amended so as to apply only to the home at Leavenworth, Kas., which was the subject of much criticism on the floor of the house last week.

Still this is nice weather.

The Salvation Army and American Volunteers cannot win sinners by writing desultory letters.

Plainfield has not had the real article of baseball in several seasons now. Oh! give us back the days of the old Crescents.

Ex-Senator Benjamin A. Vail, of Rahway, has been appointed a member of the State Board of Managers of the Reform School, in the place of John J. Daly, deceased. A good man succeeds a good man.

Governor Griggs yesterday signed an important bill legalizing the de facto borough governments throughout the State and providing for their continuance under the Borough act of 1878. A knotty problem is thus disposed of.

The election in Louisiana yesterday was a surprise to Democrats, though it is estimated that they have carried the State by 22,000 plurality. The Republicans seemed to make gains all over the State. Incidentally there were several men killed about the polls, but such a thing is too common to excite comment in Louisiana.

Charles J. Baxter, of this city, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has named May 4th as a day for all public schools to devote special exercises appropriate to the one hundreth anniversary of the birth of Horace Mann, whose labors and far reaching influence have done more for the public schools than those of any other American.

New Brunswick is infested with policy shops—one of the worse forms of gambling known to exist. The Prosecutor of Middlesex county presented evidence to the Grand Jury against the proprietors of the joints, but they returned without any indictments in that direction. The Judge sent them back to further consider and investigate the matter. It was a good idea on the part of the Judge.

Laborers on our city streets are paid $1.50 per day. Other local laborers get less and are capable of doing decidedly more work.—New Brunswick Home News.

That is a mean remark. A dollar and a half a day is little enough for any laboring man to receive. And it comes with poor grace from a New Brunswick newspaper. It would be far more graceful for The Home News to address such remarks to the top list of municipal officials, whose salaries are notoriously exhorbitant.

James J. Bergen, of Somerset county, who is mentioned as a possible successor to E. F. C. Young, as chairman of the Democratic State Committee, would make an aggressive man for the Republicans and a popular one for the Democrats. He has been speaker of the Assembly, and in that position acquired a wide and influential acquaintance that would be of great use to him in piloting the Jersey Democracy back to victory.

—If you and your girl are out for a quiet walk this evening and would like to spend the rest of the evening in a social manner it would be well for you to attend the first anniversary and reception of Lucetta Council, No. 28, in Central Hall.

—Next Sunday afternoon Rev. Louis D. Stultz, New Jersey's Home Department secretary, will give a talk on Home Department work in the Sunday-school. All interested are cordially invited.

SPRINKLING MAY COST MORE.

A Correspondent Says Under New Ordinance Street Sprinkling Will be Double.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In two letters published in last Sunday's Sun, two points of view are represented on the street sprinkling question in New York. The first is a complaint from a wheelman because of the sprinkling of a certain street, paved with asphalt, on which he happened to slip up while riding his wheel. He modestly requests The Sun to use its great influence toward having the sprinkling stopped on this particular street, to which the editor replies as follows: "This makes us ponder. When will the wheelmen so overawe the land that the watering of streets will have to be stopped for their benefit? We suggest to our correspondent to permit the dust to be laid and to ride more carefully." The second letter is a "kick" in the opposite direction and the writer says in effect that Col. Waring's "white angels" seem to be trying to keep the air filled with germ-ladened dust and filth in their efforts to keep the streets clean; all because they do not have the streets sprinkled enough, and compared the business to a sort of Japanese game, the principle of which is to keep the dust always in the air. The foregoing is apropos at this time, as our city fathers are considering the adoption of an ordinance which, if passed, will enforce the use of the wagon used in New York, but with a valve so much smaller that within thirty minutes after a dirt or macadamized road has been sprinkled, the dust will fly again. What will do the work on a block or asphalt pavement will not answer for our streets.

I learn on good authority that the agent for the wagon specified in the proposed ordinance says that it will be necessary to sprinke the surface five times, where two times should suffice. Thus causing two and one-half times the work. Have you any idea, Mr. Editor, that the people of this city want to pay double the price they are now paying for street sprinkling.

In Memorium.

Elston M. Dunn was born in Plainfield, N. J., September 9th, 1832, and died in Milton March 25th, 1896. He was the eldest of seven children born to William and Hannah Marsh-Dunn.

Mr. Dunn spent his boyhood in his native town. He was a precocious boy, but winning in his manner and always had many friends. He was a bright scholar especially in the languages wherein he made rapid advancement under the tutorship of a Frenchman. While attending school at DeRuyter Institute, in DeRuyter, N. Y., he was converted and baptized. Afterwards he attended the University at Alfred, and Union College, Schenectady, both in New York. From the latter, but for failing health, he would have been graduated in the class of 1857. This institution subsequently conferred the degree of Master of Arts upon him.

Ill health not permitting him to enter the theological school, his attention was turned in other directions. For eight years after 1861, he was postmaster in his native town. He then entered upon the duties of United States deputy collector of internal revenue, which place he occupied for ten years.

At this time Mr. Dunn entered the Baptist Theological Seminary in Chicago, from which he was graduated in two years. While yet in school he supplied the pulpit of the S. D. B. church in Milton and soon was called to be its pastor and was ordained.

Mr. Dunn was married in 1857 to Miss Helen Clarke, daughter of Ephriam and Angeline Clarke. To them came three children. The eldest, Clara, is the wife of Prof. J. N. Humphrey, of the Whitewater Normal School; Alexander C. is the city passenger and ticket agent of the Union Pacific Railway in Omaha; the youngest, Imogene, was married last October to H. Lewis Belknap, of the Creamery Package Manufacturing Company, and lives in Oak Park, Ill.

At one time during his pastorate Mr. Dunn was professor of Greek, and mental and moral philosophy in Milton College, which position he very ably filled for three years. He was for many years a member of the board of trustees of the college. In 1890 the degree of D. D. was conferred upon him by Milton College.

His death was the result of bladder trouble with which he had suffered somewhat for several years. About February 1st he was taken severely ill. A surgical operation and the best of medical aid, combined with the tenderest care, prolonged his life nearly two months.

To Elder Dunn belongs the rare distinction of having held only one pastorate, extending from his graduation from the theological seminary until his death—a period of almost twenty years. His was a bright and sunny disposition. His cheerful nature combined with tact and good judgment enabled him to surmount difficulties and to endear himself to the hearts of his people in an unusual degree. As a sermonizer he ranked high and was celebrated, not only throughout the entire denomination but quite generally in southern Wisconsin.

THEATRICAL.

There is an unquestionable healthier demand for stage entertainment, and the public appears to grow even more particular about the quality of the offerings. There promises in "For Fair Virginia," which will engage the boards of Music Hall next Friday, a very superior dramatic treat. The play owes its creation to Mr. Russ Whytal, a young author of great promise whose work secured a remarkably encouraging hearing at the Fifth Avenue Theatre last season. "For Fair Virginia" has certainly received more than ordinary attention in all the cities where it has been presented this season, and the verdict everywhere must be a source of deep gratification to one who has secured a firm position to his initial work. The play while belonging to no one of the familiar types of Southern romances, deals with the South during the critical period in an entirely original and delightfully interesting manner. Mr. and Mrs. Whytal and an exceptionally competent company of players are engaged in the production which it is assured will show some very beautiful scenic ideas.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

An old resident of Dunellen was in Plainfield yesterday morning, and in conversation with a Daily Press reporter, regarding the trolley question, said that the Street Railway Company had made no concessions to the Dunellen people, hence their objection to the trolley entering their town. He said that Superintendent Adleman had told him the fare to Plainfield would be 10 cents, in case the road passed the city line into Dunellen. This would be no benefit as the Central Railroad had promised to put their fare down, and if the street railway fare is five cents the Central will come down and charge the same.

There was a large attendance at the Marconnier chapel Monday evening, when old and young turned out to celebrate the second anniversary of the founding of the chapel. The occasion was a joyful one and happiness was the predominating spirit. Rev. At the close of his interesting talk a general reception and sociable was held, and every man wrung his neighbor's hand and planned to work harder during the next year. AS IT OFTEN HAPPENS.

BY W. J. LAMPTON.

I WAS nineteen, and pretty Lois Tanner was three years my junior. Sweet sixteen! Is there in all this world anything sweeter? There may be other sweet sixteens, but the comparative degree of the adjective in this connection has grown rusty from long disuse and sweet sixteen remains positive in kind and superlative in degree.

And Lois Tanner was sixteen.

From the first day of our meeting—we were the children of wealthy parents and were summering by the sea—some intangible influence, some inexplicable force seemed to draw us to each other and to run the lines of our lives parallel. For two years we had known each other, and one day—it was the third summer after our meeting—we sat on the rocks by the shore and as the waves beat in rhythmical measures upon the silver sands stretching out at our feet, I looked into her sweet blue eyes and knew that Lachesis as she drew two threads from Clotho's spindle was twisting them into one cord, forever indivisible.

In early youth, how far the eyes, undimmed by years, can see into the future, and how keen is young love to decipher the handwriting on the wall.

"Lois," I said, as we sat there in the fading twilight, "do you know how long we have known each other?"

"Does it seem long, Mr. Belden?" she replied, with a coy little smile.

"It has been two entire years, Miss Tanner," said I, falling into her mock formality of manner.

"And one learns a great deal in two years," she added.

"In one direction I have learned nothing, Lois," I said, with a quietness I did not feel.

"Why, Jack!" she exclaimed, "I don't see how you could stand still."

"But I have," I insisted.

"How?" and her eyes looked her guilelessness.

"In loving you, Lois," I broke forth. "I couldn't love you any more in a thousand years than I loved you after our first meeting."

"Oh, Jack!" she cried, nervously; "what made you say that?"

"Why shouldn't I say it?" I answered, with a dogged resolve not to be put down by any woman's whim.

"Because, Jack," she said, very earnestly, "papa has been saying all along that you and I were together too much, and the first thing the family knew there would be a case of puppy love to cure."

"Did your father say that?" I asked, with the anger showing in my face.

"He did, Jack, and he says—"

"Well, I don't want to hear what he says, or has said or will say," I interrupted. "If he says anything like that he doesn't know what he is talking about and hasn't the most remote idea of what a man truly in love with the one woman in all the world for him feels."

"Papa isn't so awfully bad, Jack," she said, in extenuation of the paternal weakness.

"I never thought he was, either, until you told me what you have," I admitted. "But, Lois," and I grew hard again, "you must know that no father who regards the future happiness of his daughter can take the position he does and assume to dictate the course of two lives which in the nature of things must be independent of his."

"Papa says your papa said the same thing and agreed with him thoroughly," she replied, arguing as women do.

"Lois," I said in my firmest tone, "don't speak to me about your father again. If you do I shall be tempted to do him some bodily injury."

The dear little woman laid her hand on my arm restrainingly and smiled with such irresistible sweetness that I even forgot the wound my own father had given me.

"Let it go, dear," she pleaded. "They have forgotten they were ever young."

"Do you remember what I said a few moments ago?" I asked, returning to the previous subject.

"DO YOU LOVE HIM?" I ASKED.

"What did you say?" she replied, trembling a little, I thought, for she surely could not have forgotten so soon.

"I said, darling?"—it was the first time I had ever called her that, and it almost frightened me—"I said that there was one thing I had not learned in the last two years, and that was to love you better than I did when I first met you. Do you think I should have learned?"

"Perhaps, Jack," she blushed, "if you had, you would have gone ahead of me in the class."

"Oh, Lois," I began to say, and then began to stammer and grow red in the face. I could feel the blood fly along my neck, and my hands shook so I could not have put them out to her if she had asked me to. I had never spoken of love to a woman, and now my inexperience was painful to me. I knew that the brave man could win a triumph now, but I was not brave. On the contrary, I was a coward, an arrant coward, and in my fear I slipped down off the rock, where we had been sitting, and walked out upon the sand.

"Where are you going, Jack?" she called to me. "I don't want to be left here all alone. I'm sure Charlie Verder wouldn't treat me like that."

That was enough to set me wild. Verder was the one fellow I dreaded, and he hadn't known her six months, either. I went back to the rock and stood at the foot of it, just near enough to touch the hem of her gown—such a sweet, white gown with a bit of blue showing through it as the blue sky peeps in and out from the fleecy white clouds.

"Do you like him?" I asked suddenly.

"Not any more, I guess, than you like Mattie Swann," she retorted, with a perk of her nose and a shake of her fluffy hair.

"Then you like him pretty well," I said in worse humor than ever, and quite insistent upon nagging her all I could.

"Perhaps I do," she snapped, "and if I do, I'm sure he is a very nice fellow."

"Not any nicer fellow than Mattie Swann is a girl," I put in as mean as I knew how.

"Well, I don't care," she said, as she slipped off of the rock and touched the sand as lightly as a thistle down. "I'm going home, and when you get me to come away off down here in this lonesome place again at this time of day, or any other time, I think you'll know it."

Then she started off along the beach toward the row of cottages. It was a mile or more, and I thought I would keep within call, so I let her get some distance ahead of me. I poked along behind, gazing out to sea and wondering where all the beauty of the purple shadows had gone, and why it was the waves looked so cold and cruel and clammy. They were the same shadows and the same waves, and there I was, and—but where was Lois? Fifty yards up the shore and hurrying along as if she were afraid of twilight ghosts or other strange inhabitant of the crepuscular air. I looked over my shoulder nervously, and all around, and shivered. What it was I don't know, but on the instant I called to her and went after my call as fast as I ever ran after a football.

HURRYING ALONG AS IF SHE WAS AFRAID.

"Lois, Lois," I kept on calling, but she gave no heed. Her face was set away from me and she was going with it rapidly. But not so fast that I could not catch her in the next fifty yards or so.

"Oh, Mr. Belden," she said in a tone of pretty surprise as I came up panting by her side, "how you frightened me. I had no idea you were on the beach this evening."

"Oh, Lois, Lois," I pleaded, though I puffed as I did so. "Don't talk like that. We are not children to let a trifle come between us and our love. You know I love you and I know I love you. It was because I love you so that I grew wild with jealousy when you spoke of Verder. I don't care a rap of my finger for Mattie Swann, even if you do like Charlie Verder."

"Mr. Belden," she began very stiffly—

"Call me Jack," I cried with all my feeling come again. "Call me Jack, as you have always called me."

"Perhaps I'd better," she said coldly "You have acted so childishly that Mr seems scarcely an appropriate title."

"You shan't talk that way to me, Lois Tanner," I exclaimed as I stepped in front of her and blocked her path. "I have done wrong, and I apologize humbly for it. Now as a lady you cannot do otherwise than accept it."

"I accept the apology, and pray, let that end the matter."

"No, it shall not. I insist upon your accepting the apology and the apologizer as well. I want you, Lois, and that's what I started to tell you down there on the rocks. Answer me now with only the sea and sky and the sweet twilight as witnesses."

I was about to take her hand and more tenderly urge my claim to an answer, when she gave a slight scream and sprang to one side as if she had stepped on a mouse in the sand.

"Look there," she whispered, pointing to a couple seated on an old spar half in the sand, and which until then was not visible. I looked and saw Verder and Miss Swann, very close together and talking earnestly.

But it was too dark for them to see, and when Lois and I walked by them in the duskier shadows of the later evening, she had promised to be my wife, and though the great sun of the heavens had set over the world and the earth was full of shadows, the greater sun of love had risen in our hearts and they were filled with the light inextinguishable.

That was a dozen years ago, and today Lois is the proud and happy mother of three of the prettiest and sweetest children in the world except four that I am the proud and happy father of.

She is Mrs. Charles Verder and Mrs. Belden was Miss Swann.—Detroit Free Press.

A Great Battle.
Do consumptives recover? Yes, thousands of them. Even after the disease has a firm hold? Yes, no doubt about it. After cavities have been formed and hemorrhages have occurred? Yes, even then. If the system is too weak, the disease will probably conquer, but if the body can be reinforced there is a fair chance for a winning fight. For twenty years, thousands have testified how they gained the victory.
Scott's Emulsion
of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites is still coming to the rescue. Out-door life, fresh air, and good pluck are of immense value. But in addition to these the body must be supplied with that peculiar kind of fat which is found only in cod-liver oil; combined with valuable medicinal agents; and there must be the tonic effect which comes from the hypophosphites. It is a great battle, and a great victory is often gained.
"Just as Good" is not SCOTT'S EMULSION.

"Whom I killed because he drew a dagger on M. St. Croix de Caylus at the vicomte's gate," I answered, steadily. I had thought about this, of course, and was ready for it. "You are aware, M. de Bezers," I continued, "that the vicomte has jurisdiction extending to life and death over all persons within the valley?"

"My household excepted," he rejoined, quietly.

"Precisely; while they are within the curtilage of your house," I retorted. "However, as the punishment was summary, and the man had no time to confess himself, I am willing to—"

"Well?"

"To pay Father Pierre to say ten masses for his soul."

The way the vidame received this surprised me. He broke into boisterous laughter. "By our lady, my friend," he cried, with rough merriment, "but you are a joker! You are, indeed. Masses? Why, the man was a Protestant!"

And that startled me more than anything which had gone before; more, indeed, than I can explain. For it seemed to prove that this man, laughing his unholy laugh, was not like other men. He did not pick and choose his servants for their religion. He was sure that the Huguenot would stone his fellow at his bidding; the Catholic cry: "Vive Coligny!" I was so completely taken aback that I found no words to answer him, and it was Croisette who said, smartly: "Then how about his enthusiasm for the true faith, M. le Vidame?"

"The true faith," he answered—"for my servants is my faith." Then a thought seemed to strike him. "What is more," he continued, slowly, "that it is the true and only faith for all, thousands will learn before the world is ten days older. Bear my words in mind, boy! They will come back to you. And now hear me," he went on in his usual tone, "I am anxious to accommodate a neighbor. It goes without saying that I would not think of putting you, M. Anne, to any trouble for the sake of that rascal of mine. But my people will expect something. Let the plaguy fellow who caused all this disturbance be given up to me, that I may hang him, and let us cry quits."

"That is impossible," I answered, coolly. I had no need to ask what he meant. Give up Pavannes' messenger, indeed! Never!

He regarded me—unmoved by my refusal—with a smile under which I chafed, while I was impotent to resent it. "Do not build too much on a single blow, young gentleman," he said, shaking his head, waggishly. "I had fought a dozen times when I was your age. However, I understand that you refuse to give me satisfaction?"

"In the mode you mention, certainly," I replied. "But—"

"Bah!" he exclaimed, with a sneer, "business first and pleasure afterwards! Bezers will obtain satisfaction in his own way, I promise you that! And at his own time. And it will not be on unfledged bantlings like you. But what is this for?" And he rudely kicked the culverin, which apparently he had not noticed before. "So! so! understand," he continued, casting a sharp glance at one and another of us. "You looked to be besieged! Why, you booby, there is the shoot of your kitchen midden, 20 feet above the roof of old Fretis store! And open, I will be sworn! Do you think that I should have come this way while there was a ladder in Caylus? Did you take the wolf for a sheep?"

With that he turned on his heel, swaggering away in the full enjoyment of his triumph. For a triumph it was. We stood stunned; ashamed to look one another in the face. Of course the shoot was open. We remembered now that it was, and we were so sorely mortified by his knowledge of our folly, that I failed in my courtesy, and did not see him to the gate, as I should have done. We paid for that later.

"He is the devil in person!" I exclaimed, angrily, shaking my fist at the House of the Wolf, as I strode up and down impatiently. "I hate him worse!"

"So do I!" said Croisette, mildly. "But that he hates us is a matter of more importance. At any rate we will close the shoot."

"Wait a moment!" I replied, as, after another volley of complaints directed at our visitor, the lad was moving off to see to it. "What is going on down there?"

"Upon my word, I believe he is leaving us!" Croisette rejoined sharply.

For there was a noise of hoofs below us, clattering on the pavement. Half-a-dozen horsemen were issuing from the House of the Wolf, the ring of their bridles and the sound of their careless voices came up to us through the clear morning air. Bezers' valet, whom we knew by sight, was the last of them. He had a pair of great saddle-bags before him, and at sight of these we uttered a glad exclamation. "He is going!" I murmured, hardly able to believe my eyes. "He is going after all!"

"Wait!" Croisette answered dryly.

But he was right. We had not to wait long. He was going. In another moment he came out himself, riding a strong iron-gray horse; and we could see that he had holsters to his saddle. His steward was running beside him, to take, I suppose, his last orders. A cripple whom the bustle had attracted from his usual haunt, the church porch, held up his hand for alms. The vidame as he passed, cut him savagely across the face with his whip, and cursed him audibly.

"May the devil take him!" exclaimed Croisette in just rage. But I said nothing, remembering that the cripple was a particular pet of Catherine's. I thought instead of an occasion, not so very long ago, when the vicomte being at home, we had had a great hawking party. Bezers and Catherine had ridden up the street together, and Catherine giving the cripple a piece of money, Bezers had flung to him all his share of the game. And my heart sank.

Only for a moment, however. The man was gone; or was going at any rate. We stood silent and motionless, all watching, until after what seemed a long interval, the little party of seven became visible on the white road far below us—to the northward, and moving in that direction. Still we watched them, muttering a word to one another, now and again, until presently the riders slackened their pace, and began to ascend the winding track that led to the hills and Cahors; and to Paris also, if one went far enough.

Then at length with a loud "Whoop!" we dashed across the terrace, Croisette leading, and so through the courtyard to the parlor; where we arrived breathless. "He is off!" Croisette cried, shrilly. "He has started for Paris! And bad luck go with him!" And we all threw up our caps and shouted.

But no answer, such as we expected, came from the women folk. When we picked up our caps, and looked at Catherine, feeling rather foolish, she was staring at us with a white face and great scornful eyes. "Fools!" she said. "Fools!"

And that was all. But it was enough to take me aback. I had looked to see her face lighten at our news; instead it wore an expression I had never seen on it before. Catherine, so kind and so gentle, calling us fools! And without cause! I did not understand it. I turned confusedly to Croisette. He was looking at her, and I saw that he was frightened. As for Mme. Claude, she was crying in the corner. A presentiment of evil made my heart sink like lead. What had happened?

"Fools!" my cousin repeated, with exceeding bitterness, her foot tapping the parquet unceasingly. "Do you think he would have stooped to avenge himself on you? On you! Or that he could hurt me 100th part as much here as—as—" She broke off stammering. Her scorn faltered for an instant. "Bah! he is a man! He knows!" she exclaimed, superbly, her chin in the air; "but you are boys. You do not understand!"

I looked amazedly at this angry woman. I had a difficulty in associating her with my cousin. As for Croisette, he stepped forward abruptly, and picked up a white object which was lying at her feet.

"Yes, read it!" she cried, "read it! Ah!" and she clenched her little hand, and in her passion struck the oak table beside her, so that a stain of blood sprang out of her knuckles. "Why did you not kill him? Why did you not do it while you had the chance? You were three to one!" she hissed. "You had him in your power! You could have killed him, and you did not! Now he will kill me!"

Mme. Claude muttered something tearfully; something about Pavannes and the saints. I looked over Croisette's shoulder, and read the letter. It began abruptly without any term of address, and ran thus: "I have a mission in Paris, mademoiselle, which admits of no delay, your mission, as well as my own—to see Pavannes. You have won his heart. It is yours, and I will bring it to you, or his right hand, in token that he has yielded up his claim to yours. And to this I pledge myself."

The thing bore no signature. It was written in some red fluid—blood perhaps—a mean and sorry trick! On the outside was scrawled a direction to Mlle. de Caylus. And the packet was sealed with the vidame's crest, a wolf's head.

"The coward! The miserable coward!" Croisette cried. He was the first to read the meaning of the thing. And his eyes were full of tears—tears of rage.

For me, I was angry exceedingly. My veins seemed full of fire, as I comprehended the mean cruelty which could thus torture a girl.

"Who delivered this?" I thundered. "Who gave it to mademoiselle? How did it reach her hands? Speak, some one!"

A maid, whimpering in the background, said that Francis had given it to her to hand to mademoiselle.

I ground my teeth together, while Marie, unbidden, left the room to seek Francis—and a stirrup leather. The vidame had brought the note in his pocket, no doubt, rightly expecting that he would not get an audience of my cousin. Returning to the gate alone he had seen his opportunity, and given the note to Francis, probably with a small fee to secure its transmission.

Croisette and I looked at one another, apprehending all this. "He will sleep at Cahors to-night," I said, sullenly.

The lad shook his head and answered in a low voice: "I am afraid not. His horses are fresh. I think he will push on. He always travels quickly. And now you know—"

I nodded, understanding only too well.

Catherine had flung herself into a chair. Her arms lay nerveless on the table. Her face was hidden in them. But now, overhearing us, or stung by some fresh thought, she sprang to her feet in anguish. Her face twitched, her form seemed to stiffen as she drew herself up like one in physical pain. "Oh, I cannot bear it!" she cried to us in dreadful tones. "Oh, will no one do anything? I will go to him! I will tell him I will give him up! I will do whatever he wishes if he will only spare him!"

"Yes, read it," she cried.

Croisette went from the room crying. It was a dreadful sight for us—this girl in agony. And it was impossible to reassure her! Not one of us doubted the horrible meaning of the note, its covert threat. Civil wars and religious hatred, and I fancy Italian modes of thought, had for the time changed our countrymen to beasts. Far more dreadful things were done then than this which Bezers threatened—even if he meant it literally—far more dreadful things were suffered. But in the fiendish ingenuity of his vengeance on her, the helpless, loving woman, I thought Raoul de Bezers stood alone. Alas! it fares ill with the butterfly when the cat has struck it down. Ill indeed!

Mme. Clause rose and put her arms round the girl, dismissing me by a gesture. I went out, passing through two or three scared servants, and made at once for the terrace. I felt as if I could only breathe there. I found Marie and St. Croix together, silent, the marks of tears on their faces. Our eyes met, and they told one tale.

We all spoke at the same time. "When?" we said. But the others looked to me for an answer.

I was somewhat sobered by that, and paused to consider before I replied. "At daybreak to-morrow," I decided, presently. "It is an hour after noon already. We want money, and the horses are out. It will take an hour to bring them in. After that we might still reach Cahors to-night, perhaps; but more haste less speed, you know. No. At daybreak to-morrow we will start."

They nodded assent.

It was a great thing we meditated. No less than to go to Paris—the unknown city so far beyond the hills—and seek out M. de Pavannes, and warn him. It would be a race between the vidame and ourselves; a race for the life of Kit's suitor. Could we reach Paris first, or even within 24 hours of Bezers' arrival, we should in all probability be in time, and be able to put Pavannes on his guard. It had been the first thought of all of us, to take such men as we could get together and fall upon Bezers wherever we found him, making it our simple object to kill him. But the lackeys M. le Vicomte had left with us, the times being peaceful and the neighbors friendly, were poor-spirited fellows. Bezers' handful, on the contrary, were reckless Swiss riders—like master, like men. We decided that it would be wiser simply to warn Pavannes, and then stand by him if necessary.

We might have dispatched a messenger. But our servants—Gil excepted, and he was too old to bear the journey—were ignorant of Paris. Nor could any of them be trusted with a mission, so delicate. We thought of Pavannes' courier, indeed. But he was a Rochellois, and a stranger to the capital. There was nothing for it but to go ourselves.

Yet we did not determine on this adventure with light hearts, I remember. Paris loomed big and awesome in the eyes of all of us. The glamour of the court rather frightened than allured us. We felt that shrinking from contact with the world which a country life engenders, as well as that dread of seeming unlike other people which is peculiar to youth. And we trembled. If we had known more—especially of the future—we should have trembled more.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Jersey wheel will be placed on the market about May 1st.

Wm. Titus, of Mountain avenue, has received his new Niagara wheel.

John Doyle, of Richmond street, has purchased a new Spalding wheel.

A. D. Cook, of East Sixth street, has purchased a '96 Columbia wheel of the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

The Columbia wheel is built to stand up, and when a rider is mounted on a Columbia he feels perfectly safe.

A meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen, Jr.s, will be held tomorrow night at 7 o'clock at their club house, 812 Park avenue.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company received a shipment of twenty wheels yesterday, fifteen of them were Columbias and five Hartfords.

Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer, has a full line of supplies for cyclists and most anything on the market can be found at his store.

Secretary Bassett, of the L. A. W., reports the increase in the three principal divisions for the week as follows: New York, 624, total, 11,871; Massachusetts, 134, total, 4,998; New Jersey, 9, total, 2,370.

Ex-Captain Charles P. Staubach, the well-known century rider, has resigned from the Manhattan Bicycle Club. He is now Captain of the "bicycle company" of the Eighth Regiment. Last year he made an attempt on the Crescent Oval to break the club record for 50 miles, but failed.

Something which women riders ought to study with more than usual care, says the New York Times, is a good style of dismounting. Few are able, or rather few do, dismount in a graceful and easy manner. Nineteen times out of twenty the woman jumps down from her wheel as though it were a dogcart or some other vehicle equally high. There is no need for this. She will find it infinitely easier and far more becoming to her dignity and modesty, to step off lightly and at the proper time, with the down stroke of the pedal.

C. W. Gilbert, of Westfield is having a special racing wheel made for him through the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co. at the Western Wheel Company's works. The wheel will differ considerably from the regular Crescent wheel especially in the bearings which will be somewhat similar to the roller bearings. The gear will be 90. When the wheel comes from the factory Mr. Gilbert is going to have aluminum tubing put inside of the frame and and will make several other changes. He expects to do some fast riding on both track and road and will probably appear at the Crescent Wheelmen's meets. He already has the reputation of being a speedy road rider and has won several events on the road.

New York state is likely to have a law somewhat similar to the one recently passed by the New Jersey legislature, whose object is to have similar ordinances throughout the state. The New York Times says on that subject: "Wheelmen who have been arrested for unwittingly violating some obscure country ordinance will appreciate the provisions of a bill now pending before the State Legislature. This bill provides that cyclists arrested for the violation of local cycling ordinances, may leave their wheels at station houses in lieu of bail. Last season there were many cases where riders were gathered in by wily constables for riding too fast, on the sidewalks or without lights, and were forced to languish in jail pending the arrival of friends. Such a bill as the one referred to would prove justifiable in eight cases out of ten."

One of the principal events of this part of the cycling world is the annual century run from Newark to Philadelphia. For seven years has this run been held and F. L. C. Martin, of this city, has always been in command. This year it will be held on Saturday, June 13th, and, as stated in yesterday's Press, Mr. Martin will not be in his usual place. The schedule is as follows:

Miles.		Time.

Prizes will be given to the three clubs having the largest number of survivors and to the club, with membership of 50 or less, having the largest number of survivors. A handsome medal will be given to all those that ride the complete century.

Chief Consul Gentle and the Board of Officers of the New Jersey State Division of the League of American Wheelmen, held a meeting at Elizabeth on Saturday night. Reports from different sections were very gratifying as to the prospects for a large increase in membership, and to boom things during the height of the season, a number of prizes were offered. A high-class bicycle will be given to the person who secures the largest number of members between April 24 and July 1. Every person getting twenty-five new members within that time will receive a solid gold "L. A. W." emblem. Those securing one new member will get a division button, those getting two will receive a cap pin, and three will entitle a member to a tour book. Then, if a wheelman finds himself in financial straits and desires to join the league without paying the $2, he can get a membership ticket free by drumming up four recruits. The State race meet will be held in July under the auspices of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey. The place and date have not yet been decided upon. The track and grounds at Asbury Park will not be available for this meet, as a syndicate has leased them for the season for other purposes and Trenton seems the most available place. Plainfield was hardly considered.

Owen Smith, of The Press staff, purchased a Hartford wheel today, of the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

Chauncey Colthar, of The Press composing room, has purchased a Silver King wheel, of the Union Tire Company.

—Grant Taynor, of Monroe avenue, buries his second child this afternoon and another one is very ill. They were taken with the measles which developed into pneumonia. Mr. Taynor is a brother-in-law of F. M. Whitely, of the borough.

BLUE LINER WHIZZED BY A KNIGHT OF THE ROAD HAS A NARROW ESCAPE.

A Tramp Made an Unsuccessful Effort to Board a Coal Train and Had to Drop to Escape Being Hit by a Flyer.

Those who happened to be around the North Avenue station yesterday afternoon shortly after 4 o'clock thought they saw a man struck by one of the Blue Line flyers. It was only a very narrow escape, however, in which the victim had his arm cut by a projection on the engine.

A "knight of the road" on his way from Cleveland to Jersey City, came to Plainfield yesterday and tried to ride the rest of the way on an eastbound coal train. About 100 yards east of the Richmond street bridge he attempted to board a coal train but could not. He started to return across the main track, but seeing a Blue Line flyer close upon him he threw himself on the ground between the two trains. His arm was badly cut by a projection on the engine. As soon as the Blue Liner had passed the man arose and walked away. He was very pale and trembled like a leaf. He told a lad who helped him to bind up his wound that he was going to quit railroading and walk after this.

BUILT ON THE WRONG LOT.

A Warrenville Man Erects a House on Land Owned by Another Man.

A very amusing incident has just come to light which is now puzzling those interested. Some time ago ago Harry Morrison, son of T. W. Morrison, of Mountain avenue, purchased two lots on the latter avenue from a New York lawyer. One of the lots was purchased by Assessor J. H. Cooley, who shortly afterward sold it to a Mr. Holcomb, of Warrenville. Mr. Holcomb commenced the erection of a house which is now nearly completed. A few day ago while investigating, he discovered that he had built his house on Mr. Morrison's lot. As both lots are the same size and there is scarcely any difference in the price, it is thought quite likely that an exchange of deeds will be made. The result is now awaited with no little interest.

CONVERTED IN THAT CELL.

Supt. Hadley Prays on the Spot Where He Reformed.

Supt. S. H. Hadley, of the McAuley Mission, New York, who is well-known in this city, Sunday night entered the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street police station and asked permission to pray in one of the cells. His request was granted. He said he had been locked up in that cell fourteen years ago for drunkenness, and had there become converted. He had been discharged on his promise to reform, and for eight years has been in charge of the McAuley Mission.

Annoyed the Horse.

While a son of Thomas Rutledge, of Warren street, was passing through Manning avenue yesterday he met a horse and wagon in front of a house. He could not resist the temptation to annoy the animal, and as a result gave him a slap on the leg. The horse became frightened and upset the wagon. The shafts were broken, but the horse did not get away. The owner was inside the house and learning who the boy was, sought his father. The affair was explained and Mr. Rutledge secured a new pair of shafts.

Business From All Over.

Curtis M. Thorpe, of Park, avenue, dealer in tiling, mantels, etc., has many designs to select from. Among the recent houses that have been furnished are the following: J. B. Mills, Carleton avenue; Mr. Moody, East Sixth street; and J. E. Martine, two houses, East Ninth street. Mr. Thorpe has also been doing work at New Brunswick, putting in vestibules and tile mantels. This house makes a specialty of bathroom work, and the prices are reasonable.

Lay Between the Tracks.

A small boy was caught between two trains in South Elizabeth last evening and escaped death by throwing himself flat on the ground between the tracks. He lay perfectly still until the danger was past. The boy's name was not ascertained, as he ran away when he got up.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. For sale at 50c per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

NINE TOWNS AFFECTED.

The School Board Treasurers' Salary Act Declared Unconstitutional.

Justice Magie, in the Somerset Court, in Somerville, has filed an opinion which takes away the compensation of treasurers of Boards of Education in towns and boroughs where the Board of Education is under a special charter. There are nine such towns: Fort Lee, Englewood, Ridgefield, Irvington, Caldwell, Princeton, Morristown, Long Branch and Somerville. The decision also requires the treasurers to refund any compensation they have already received.

In 1878 a law was passed providing that the treasurer should receive the same compensation as township collectors for like services. In Somerville, L. M. Codington was elected treasurer and served five years without compensation. In 1891 and the three successive years he presented his bill at the rate of three-quarters of one per cent. of the amount of moneys disbursed, and the township committee, under advice of counsel, ordered the bills paid. The present township committee, under the advice of their counsel, Theodore Hoffman, refused to pay the bill, whereupon a friendly suit was instituted.

The decision of Justice Magie just handed down leaves the Board of Education with a treasurer, but without power to receive any public money from the collector of the township, and without compensation for services previously rendered for disbursing the money of the district. The law of 1878, providing for the compensation of the treasurer, and under which he disbursed moneys, is declared unconstitutional by reason of the exclusion from its provisions of districts in certain towns and boroughs, this being held special legislation.

DECLARES FOR PROHIBITION.

And Would Have A Constitutional Amendment Passed at Trenton.

The Elizabeth Presbytery finished its annual session yesterday and elected four delegates to the General Assembly, which meets in Saratoga in May: Rev. Dr. J. L. McNulty, of Woodbridge; Rev. George Backle, of Elizabeth; Elders A. W. Marshall, of Metuchen; and I. J. Ayers, of Clarksville.

The Presbytery passed a resolution favoring prohibition and appointed Dr. Kempshall, of Elizabeth, to lay the matter before the Synod of New Jersey and urge that body to appeal to the next Legislature to pass a Constitutional amendment for the suppression of the liquor traffic.

The Presbytery has thirty-three churches and three chapels within its jurisdiction.

Married Last Evening.

The marriage of Mrs. A. Anderson, of 212 Park avenue, and Alexander E. Littell, of Hooperstown, N. J., was celebrated last evening at the home of the bride, Rev. W. D. Johnson, of Westfield, officiating. The bridemaid was Miss Dora Parson and the best man Frank Nelson, both of this city. The bride wore a gown of brown silk, trimmed with lace. Diamonds were used for ornaments and a handsome bridal bouquet was carried. A reception followed and guests from New York, Newark, Florida, Petersburg, Va., and Philadelphia were present. A large collection of presents were received by the happy couple. They will reside at 212 Park avenue.

Frightened at the Steam Roller.

A horse attached to one of the Union Meat Market's delivery wagons became frightened at the steam roller on Park avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets, this morning and broke the harness. The horse was released from the wagon and ran as far as Fourth street where it was stopped by A. E. Hoagland. The only damage was to the harness.

Prohibition Convention.

The Prohibition State Convention will be held in Association Hall, Trenton, Wednesday, May 6th, commencing at 10 o'clock. Twenty-eight delegates to the National Convention at Pittsburg will be chosen and ten Presidential electors. Between 400 and 500 of the 706 delegates who comprise the convention are expected to be present.

A Bad Man at One Time.

John Jaeger, well known as "Dutch John," of the Water Street Mission, will speak to men at the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday at 4:15 p. m. Mr. Jaeger, although at one time an Anarchist, opium-eater, drunkard and thief, is now one of the prominent mission workers of New York city.

Trolley Line to be Sold.

The Rahway and Middlesex Electric Railway, which is now in the hands of a receiver, will be sold next Monday, and parties are now negotiating for its purchase with the view of extending it from Rahway to Boynton Beach, Sewaren and Woodbridge by June 1.

LET CRANKS REJOICE.

THE Y. M. C. A. TO FURNISH A GOOD ARTICLE OF BASERALL.

Conveniently Located Grounds and Bang-up Ball Tossers Will No Doubt Make a Successful Season—Schedule.

Plainfield is to have at least one strong baseball nine in the field, and this year it will be under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., as was exclusively announced in Tuesday's Press. New grounds have been procured as was exclusively stated in this paper, and now the management makes the schedule public.

The team will be much stronger than last year, and games have been arranged with some of the best amateur clubs in this vicinity. Some exciting contests may be expected, and the cranks will have a chance to root to their hearts content. Regarding the new team, the Y. M. C. A. bulletin says:

The Association takes pleasure in notifying the public that they have secured the old Plainfield Athletic Club grounds in the rear of West Front street near Washington avenue, for the purpose of playing baseball and other sports during the coming season.

Among those who will represent the Association on the diamond are: Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Messrs. Burt, Schoonmaker, Johnson, Major, McLoughlin, Symons, Townley and Dennis. They will open the season May 16th with the Cranford Club. Other games have been scheduled as follows:

May 23--Westfield.
May 30--Woodbridge Athletic Club, morning and afternoon.
June 6--At Woodbridge.
June 13--Rutgers College.
June 20--Montclair Athletic Club.
June 27--Flemington.
July 4--Original Acmes, morning and afternoon.
July 11--Woodbridge.
July 18--Elizabeth Athletic Club.
July 25--Flemington.
August 1--Riverdall Athletic Club.
August 8--New Jersey Athletic Club.
August 15--Seventh Regiment, of New York.
August 22--Elizabeth Athletic Club.
August 29--" " " "
September 5--" " " "
September 7--" " " morning and afternoon.
September 12--Elizabeth Athletic Club.
September 19--" " " "

The balance of the schedule will be filled with the Englewoed Field Club, Harlem Athletic Association, Original Acmes and others.

The management would be pleased to give any one desiring to play on the team an opportunity to do so, and by addressing the Baseball Department, Y. M. C. A., they will be furnished with full particulars.

To properly prepare the field and equip the team, about $300 is needed. Any contribution toward this fund will be gladly received by the Baseball Department. The earnest support of all is solicited.

The committee in charge of the Baseball Department consists of George R. Cornwell and Joseph Gavett. John McLoughlin will manage the team.

Conveyance to the Mountain Park Inn.

Hereafter on Fridays and Saturdays a stage will be run from the end of the trolley line on Somerset street to the Mountain Park Inn. Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway, this morning told a representative of The Press that the trolley road would doubtless be extended to the hotel within the next six weeks. While nothing definite has been decided, it seems probable that the route for the extension will be up this side of the mountain, which will avoid the dangerous curves that would be necessary to make in the track if the road was built through the Notch and then back to the hotel from Washingtonville. The cars to be used on this branch will be equipped with double sets of brakes so as to reduce the danger of a runaway car to the minimum.

City Bank Contracts.

H. G. Runkle, J. Fred MacDonald, J. F. Hubbard and J. B. Coward, the City National Bank building committee met yesterday and gave out the contracts for the new building. John Abbott has the carpenter work, J. P. Emmons, mason; George J. Tobin, plumbing; and W. T. Kirk, iron. The inside cabinet work will be given out later.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

Remarkable Health Record.

There have been fourteen cases of measles at the Children's Home, one of which proved fatal last Saturday night. This is the first death of a child at the Home since October, 1831. This is a most remarkable record in a family nnmbering twenty children.

Delinquent Taxes Being Paid.

As a result of the item in the Daily Press columns on Monday, urging delinquent taxpayers to settle with Collector E. H. Bird, several hundred dollars has already been received. Mr. Bird says the response was most gratifying.

—The Junior Endeavor Society of the Congregational church will meet Friday afternoon at 3:45. All the members should be present as arrangements will be made for a picnic.

—It was a son that Antonio Lusardi lost by death by a complication of diseases from measles, instead of a daughter, as reported yesterday. He was a bright little fellow and much thought of by his parents. The funeral will be held from 218 Park avenue tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

PARLIAMENTARY CLUB ELECT.

Besides Choosing Officers They Start a New Department of Work.

The semi-annual meeting of the Parliamentary Club was held this morning in the Y. M. C. A. building, at which time the following officers were elected: President, Miss C. R. Yates; vice-president, Mrs. Stephen Cahoone; recording secretary, Miss May Cahoone; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. I. Cooley; treasurer, Mrs. Carman Parse.

Several short papers on Shakespeare were prepared and read by the members, and this formed an interesting feature of the meeting.

The question of annual dues was laid on the table till the next meeting. It was decided to give a tea and reception during May in honor of Mrs. Benjamin, of Portland, Mich., who expects to come east. She will meet the women of New York who are interested in parliamentary work, after which she will be invited to this city. The committee having the matter in charge is as follows: Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Miss May Cahoone, Mrs. M. I. Cooley, Miss Brown, Mrs. Oliver King, Miss C. R. Yates.

A new branch of work was started this morning entitled the "Art and Science Department." Mrs. M. I. Cooley is the chairman. Mrs. Cahoone, chairman of foreign affairs, will make a report at the next meeting of the club.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY AND RECEPTION.

Lucetta Council, Daughters of Liberty, Enjoy a Pleasant Evening.

Lucetta Council, No. 28, D. of L., celebrated their first anniversary in their rooms, the Fireman's Hall, last evening. The programme arranged for the evening was to have been an initiating contest between the teams of the local council and the Pride of the Juniors Council, of Newark, but the latter team failed to put in an appearance. So as not to disappoint the visitors present, which included National Secretary W. O. Staples, of New Haven, Conn., National Treasurer G. H. Burton, of New York, and large delegations from the various councils in this vicinity, the home team showed their skill and ability by initiating two new members, which was highly complimented by all.

After the meeting closed the visitors were invited to attend the reception which was then in progress in Central Hall, where they enjoy dancing until an early hour this morning. The grand march was led by the team in full uniform, preceded by Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Stratton and G. S. Martin and Miss Bertha Rockfellow. During the evening National Secretary Staples in behalf of the Council presented Mrs. C. L Stratton with a handsome gold badge, consisting of the emblem of the order, for bringing in the most members for the past five months. At midnight refreshments were served.

IONA COUNCIL ENTERTAIN.

A Pleasant Social Event Given in Red Men's Hall.

An enjoyable sociable was held in Red Men's Hall last night by Iona Council, D. of P., I. O. R. M., and the attendance was such that the hall was comfortably filled. A programme had been arranged by the committee in charge and the part that was rendered was encored to the echo, but the committee was disappointed in a part of the talent which failed to appear.

The following was the programme as rendered: Overture, orchestra; piano solo, Miss Lillian Epner, accompanied by Miss Mabel Benner; recitation, Miss Lucy Casper; piano solo, Miss Mabel Benner; piano solo, Mr. Lawson.

After the programme had concluded, dancing began and continued until long after midnight. The music was furnished by Bert Naylor. A repast was enjoyed about midnight.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Charles Holstein, chairman; Miss Lizzie Dunlap, Mrs. James Radin, Mrs. Stiglitz and Mrs. Bowman.

A Church on His Hands.

Rev. J. B. Jennings, the Episcopal clergyman, who has caused no end of trouble in Westfield, is anxious to get Grace church off his hands, the courts having given him the building to satisfy his claim for salary. Mr. Mills, who holds second mortgage, interposes objection, and the people of St. Paul's P. E. church are reluctant about a deal, as the property is in a bad condition. The ex-rector begins to think that he has a white elephant on his hands.

Mervil Teeple, of Park avenue, has received his new Crescent.

Bert. Townley, of New street, has returned home after visiting friends in Mt. Horeb.

Mrs. Alex. Lusardi, of West Front street, has returned home after visiting friends in Newark.

AMONG WORKS OF ART.

HIGH SCHOOL DAY AT THE LOAN EXHIBITION OF THE CAMERA CLUB.

Many Students Avail Themselves of the Special Price of Admission and Are Entertained and Instructed by the Show.

The second week of the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club promises to be more successful than the first, as far as the attendance is concerned, for the Plainfield people seem to be awakening to the realization of the fact that there is an art exhibition in Plainfield well worth a visit.

Yesterday afternoon was especially devoted to the pupils at the public schools and a special price of admission was set for them. There was a good attendance throughout the afternoon and evening, also a number of the young people spent the afternoon very pleasantly and profitably there.

One of the most interesting exhibits which has, in previous descriptions of the exhibition, received but slight notice is the collection of oil paintings, tapestry paintings, watch color sketches and drawings, all of which were loaned by residents of this city.

Of course, the most valuable of all this exhibit is the original sketch by Michael Angelo of "The Lost Soul," but there are other pictures of considerable value. One of the largest of the oil paintings is a view of the snow-capped mountain "Jungfrau" with a little village nestling at its base.

There are two small pictures of the Puritan maiden, which arrived too late to be catalogued. One shows her on her way to church and the other in the field. They were loaned by Mrs. R. A. Meeker.

Plainfield's great military artist, Julian Scott, has several of his works on exhibition, loaned by other people. Among them is "Changing Guard," a country scene apparently in the time of the Revolution with a group of American soldiers in the foreground. "The Recall" is a watercolor sketch of an incident in the Civil War. A large portrait of J. H. McVey is all the work of Julian Scott.

A painting of considerable value is one of the "Madonna" of the Christ child, which is said to have been the work of Murillo, the famous Italian artist. A series of three oil paintings entitled "Winter," "Autumn" and "Summer," are the work of a local artist, Harold Serrell. They are all landscapes and the effect in each is very pretty. A marine view, "The Coming Shower" is another of his works. Another marine view, painted in blue by Mrs. Nelson Runyon, is quite striking in its effect.

An attractive picture of a stormy night at sea is "The Life Boat," in which the artist has reproduced the rolling and foaming billows in an excellent manner. "Marguerite," painted by Mrs. John D. Rnnyon, is very attractive. A number of her other paintings were also displayed. A charming ocean scene is exhibited although omitted from the catalogue. It is the work of Miss Kate W. Newhall. A water color sketch, "After the Masquerade," is a winter street scene in which two masqueradrers discover the identity of the other. The color effects are remarkable in the sketch "A Burning Mountain" done in pastel by F. Keppel. Several sketches of Plainfield and vicinity are shown as the work of Miss Flora R. Petrie.

There are many other paintings and sketches that deserve mention and are as well done as those already spoken of but lack of space prevents a more complete description. The best way, however, to learn what is there is to make a personal visit to the rooms of the Camera Club in the Babcock building where the exhibit is being held.

At White's.

Never were there greater attractions at Plainfield's busiest store than now. Every department is filled with the newest and brightest of spring and summer goods, and it is remarkable what small prices are asked for fine goods. Their advertisement tells of many good things that will interest you.

Building at Netherwood.

Charles H. Hand, who recently purchased of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association the lot on LaGrande avenue, Netherwood, has decided to erect three dwelling houses on the lot.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

AN ENGLISH ALLIANCE

Edward Atkinson's Idea of Rendering War Impossible.

HIS PLANS FOR UNIVERSAL PEACE

Results Following the Appointment of the Venezuelan Commission Used as an Illustration — Commerce Protectors, Not Commerce Destroyers.

Washington, April 23.—Edward Atkinson, of Brookline, Mass., in his address before the Washington conference on arbitration, said he desired to disabuse the minds of his hearers that he advocated "peace at any price." He argued in favor of an international union of the great manufacturing and commercial states for the enforcement of peace upon the high seas by making use of their naval power to police the ocean. "The time now seems ripe," he said, "for such a treaty among nations, to the end that in place of the base title of 'commerce destroyers,' the ships of the navy of this and other Christian nations may bear the honorable of 'commerce protectors.' The conscience of the English speaking people has been aroused even by the hint of possible warfare between the two great families into which they are now divided. Not only in this country but in Great Britain suggestions tending toward this great advance in the cause of peace have been made in the parliament of the United Kingdom. Shall we let this opportunity pass without securing even greater safeguards for the maintenance of peace than a mere agreement to submit our disputes to arbitration?

Mr. Atkinson's Plans.

"It need not necessarily be a permanent court, but a submission of each and every cause of dispute as it arises to a tribunal qualified either as a court of law or a court of equity to report upon the rights of the case in the next twelve months, each tribunal selected as each case may arise with a view to the standing and qualifications of its members to deal with the subject at issue. How supremely absurd and ridiculous has the position of the jingoes in our congress become and how superfluous any threat of war on the Venezuelan boundary since the commission of most eminent men was appointed only on our part to whom access has been so readily given by the government of the United Kingdom to all the evidence on which they rest their case. The mere delay required in establishing the rights in this and every case has sufficed, as it would in every other, to expose the sham pretense of patriotism which seeks only personal notoriety by appeals to passion and prejudice.

Taxation Here and Abroad.

"Owing to the terrible necessity which rests upon Great Britain to maintain her existence through her sea power, her budget has been increased while our national taxation is being diminished. The cost of our national government for twenty years averaged but five dollars per head of population. Under the impulse to build a new navy and to fortify the coast this charge, after having diminished to only four dollars and a quarter, has been rapidly increased of late—yet our contribution now is only five dollars—it is being reduced relatively by the rapid increase of population. The budget of Great Britain of the present year calls for taxation of nearly thirteen dollars per head for national purposes only. That of France is eighteen dollars; that of Germany, adding to the imperial taxes a part of the budgets of the kingdoms and duchies which are of that nature, ten dollars per head.

Advocates an English Alliance.

"What is our duty and our opportunity? Shall we join in that petty jealousy which has isolated Great Britain among the European states for the very reason that her rule is that of equity and her dominion unimpaired by any effort to retain the sole control of commerce in her great domain to herself alone? Shall we ally ourselves with Spain in her effort to subdue Cuba? Shall we ally ourselves with the junkers of Germany under the rule of 'blood and iron,' of privilege and dynastic control? Shall we ally ourselves with Russia? Or shall we shut up ourselves within our own limits until by the very weight of our crops we are 'smothered in our own grease?' Shall we not rather put aside our petty jealousy and bearing witness to the great function of the English-speaking people and the charge which is upon them to establish personal liberty and the dominion of law wherever they go, may we not now grasp the opportunity which the circumstance of the hour have put within our reach? Shall we not make such a union among the English-speaking people of the world, and all others who may join, as shall render it forever impossible to incite war among them and also impossible for any other state or nation to weaken the bonds of mutual service by which we may now become united? Would not that be a larger patriotism and a grander idea than has yet been developed in the world?"

In Gov. Morton's Hands.

Albany, April 23.—The Greater New York bill, which was passed by the assembly yesterday by a vote of 78 to 69 over the vetoes of the mayors of New York and Brooklyn, is now in the hands of Gov. Morton for his signature, it having been previously passed by the senate.

Canadian General Elections.

Ottawa, April 23.—It is announced officially that the general elections will take place on June 23, nominations being made a week earlier, June 16. Writs are made returnable July 13.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Pension Bill in the House—Appropriation Bill in the Senate.

Washington, April 23.—The house to-day is engaged in debate on the general pension bill reported from the committee on invalid pensions. The debate is likely to continue throughout the week. Its provisions were explained at length by Mr. Pickler, rep., S. D., chairman of the committee, who occupied two and one half hours in making his speech. The intent of the bill, he said, was to fix and determine certain controverted questions which had arisen in the administration of the pension bureau, so as to prevent secretaries of the interior and pension commissioners from undoing the work and reversing the rulings of their predecessors. In the house yesterday a vote was taken on the resolution declaring Albert T. Goodwyn, pop., to have been elected representative from the fifth district of Alabama, and entitled to the seat occupied until yesterday by James E. Cobb, dem. The resolution was agreed to, and Mr. Goodwyn was thereupon sworn in. The bills to continue the present government of Greer county, which the supreme court of the United States on March 16 declared was a part of Oklahoma and not of Texas, and to confirm the titles of settlers on the public lands therein, were passed. Mr. Scranton, rep., Pa., endeavored to secure consideration for the bill providing for the election of a delegate in congress from Alaska, but Mr. Crisp dem., Ga., objected.

In the Senate.

The Indian appropriation bill is occupying the attention of the senate today, various matters in connection with Choctaws, Chorokees, Creeks and "squaw men" being under discussion. The bill as it came from the house appropriated $1,135,000—increased by the senate to $1,325,000—for support of day and industrial schools for Indian children. But this appropriation is accompanied by a provision absolutely prohibiting future payment for education of Indian children in sectarian schools. Mr. Cockrell offered an amendment to substitute for that provision a declaration that it is the settled policy of the government to make no appropriation whatever for the education of Indian children in any sectarian school, just as soon as it is possible for provision to be made for their education otherwise. It also provides that the secretary of the interior may make contracts with present contract schools during the fiscal year 1897, to half the amount used for the fiscal year 1896. This amendment was agreed to.

RAILROAD NOT TO BLAME.

Canadian Pacific's Fatal Accident Due to a Bad Washout.

Greenville Junction, Me., April 23.—A construction crew, working since Tuesday morning, has a track laid around the wreck near Holeb, Me., on the Canadian Pacific railroad and traffic has been resumed. State Caroner Additon of Skowhegan, who investigated the cause of the accident, finds the railroad company in no way culpable for the accident or death of the three emigrants killed on Monday last, but that the accident was caused by a bad washout. All passengers had been warned not to go upon the car platforms at all, but they disobeyed.

DANGERS OF OCEAN TRAVEL.

One Hundred Icebergs and an Immense Ice Field Passed by the Michigan.

Boston, April 23.—Capt. Oxford of the steamer Michigan, from Liverpool, reports that on April 18 he passed about 100 icebergs and an immense field of pack ice, four or five miles in extent, near the bergs. Capt. Oxford says the bergs and ice are directly in the path of ocean vessels, making their passage very dangerous.

Chaplain at West Point.

Washington, April 23.—Rev. Herbert Shipman of Christ Episcopal church, New York city, has been appointed chaplain at the United States military academy, West Point, to serve four years.

The Boy Train Wreckers' Case.

HIS NARROW ESCAPE

President Cleveland's Coolness Saves Him from Death.

ACCIDENT WHILE DRIVING HOME

Horses, Maddened by a Fall, Plunge and Kick, Damaging the Carriage—Remained in His Seat Until Danger Was Past.

Washington, April 23.—The rumor that President Cleveland had been seriously injured by the overturning of his carriage through a collision with a cable car while on his way to Woodley from the executive mansion, was only partly true. While President Cleveland sustained no injury whatever, he had a very narrow escape, and had it not been for his presence of mind he might have lost his life. While the president was being driven to Woodley one of the horses fell, causing the other horse also to lose its footing. The animals kicked vigorously, broke one of the lamps of the carriage and also broke the dashboard and ruptured the harness. The president did not immediately alight, as the coachmen were quickly on the ground and disentangled the animals from the victoria.

His Presence of Mind.

An eye-witness of the accident says that the president displayed remarkable presence of mind in remaining in the vehicle until the horses were disentangled from the harness, for, although he was in serious danger in his position, had he alighted near the maddened animals he might have been seriously injured, perhaps killed, by a kick from one of the brutes. When the president left his carriage Hon. Gardner G. Hubbard, who was driving along the road, seeing the plight he was in, stopped and courteously tendered his carriage to the president who accepted a seat in it and was conveyed home in time for dinner.

DANBURY'S FIRE.

The Total Loss Inflicted Will Reach Fully $70,000.

Danbury, Conn., April 23.—The fire yesterday afternoon which destroyed Mackinzie & Sons' and Davenport & Von Gals' hat factories and George Taylor's tobacco store, near Taylor street, inflicted a total loss of fully $70,000. The fire started in the drying room of the Mackinzie factory. Engineer Charles B. Pickering smelled smoke, and on opening the door of the drying room the flames burst out and drove him back. There were but a dozen operatives in the place, as the factory had been shut down to make repairs. The flames spread so quickly that they had barely time to make their escape. Fifteen minutes after the fire started the Mackinzie factory was in ruins and the flames had spread to Davenport & Von Gals', fifty feet distant. From there they leaped to the Taylor building. Lee & Hawley's factory just beyond and H. McLaughlin's opposite were on fire several times and with the strong wind that was blowing it looked as though it would be impossible to save them. All buildings were large three-story frame structures. Mackinzie & Sons employed 150 hands and Davenport & Von Gals, 125. Both shops were fairly busy. Mackinzie & Sons' loss is $25,000; insurance, $20,000. Davenport & Von Gals' loss is $35,000; insurance, $20,000. George Taylor's loss is $8,000; insurance, $4,000.

My

Nerves are weak, many people say, and yet they do not seem to know that they are literally starving their nerves. Weak, pale, thin blood cannot give proper sustenance — that is why you are nervous, tired, exhausted. The cure for this condition is to purify, vitalize and enrich your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla fairly and faithfully, and the rich, red blood, which it makes, will soon feed the nerves the elements of true strength they require; they will cease their agitation and will resume their proper place — being under the control instead of controlling the brain and body. Read Miss Bartley's letter:

"I want to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. My health has been very poor for three years, due to trouble with my

Kidneys

I was nervous, had pains in my back. I cannot tell what I suffered. My eyesight became affected and I was so despondent I did not have any interest in life. I had two physicians, but my complaints became worse. I was told that I was affected with Bright's disease. A relative urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did so and in a short time I began to notice a change in my condition. Things began to appear brighter, my eyes improved and did not trouble me so severely. My appetite returned and I gained strength every day. I am now able to do my own work, and feel perfectly well. I cannot find words to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me and I gladly recommend it." MISS ELLA BARTLEY, 213½ S. Grant Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

Chronic Alcoholism

is a disease hard to cure, as is the morphine habit. Every organ of the body is affected. A continual demand for a stimulant is called for. Food ceases to gratify, in fact, often cannot be retained on the stomach, or when it is the vitiated blood ceases to absorb nourishment from it. Give such sufferers that greatest of food stimulants, blood-enrichers, flesh-creators, a highly concentrated extract of the vital principles of lean beef, it is retained by the weakest stomach and nourishes quickly, so that with renewed tissue and returned strength morbid cravings vanish. Dr. J. B. Mattison of the Brooklyn "Home for Habitues" writes of Bovinine. "It is the best thing on earth of its kind. It is sustaining, nourishing, helpful in every way to patients of my special class."

Bovinine

MUST LEAVE CUBA

Rev. Albert Diaz and His Brother Released from Custody.

SIX DAYS' TIME ALLOWED THEM

The Exodus from the Island Continues—Newspaper Representatives Released on Bail—Weyler Attempts To Justify His Threats.

Havana, April 23.—Rev. Albert Diaz, the American Baptist missionary, and his brother Alfred, who were arrested last week, have been set at liberty, but have been ordered to leave the country before the expiration of six days from the time of their release. The exodus from the island continues. The last Spanish mail steamer had on board 865 passengers, and all the rooms on the next steamer to sail have been engaged. Messrs. O'Leary and Darley, American newspaper representatives, who were arrested at Matanzas on charges of maintaining relations with Alfonso Lopez, who is suspected of being a rebel spy, have been released on bail, which was furnished by the American vice-consul. Little war news is obtainable, the only information received being of slight importance. Louis Morales, a negro, was tried by court martial for having insulted the Spanish army and nation. The result of his trial is not known.

WEYLER'S ACCUSATIONS.

He Attempts To Justify His Threats of Exterminating the Cubans.

Havana, April 23.—Governor-General Weyler's chief of staff publishes a list of acts of insurgents which caused Gen. Weyler to proclaim them criminals and threaten them with death. Gen. Weyler authorizes its publication, "that the facts may be proven and the world may see to what use the arms sent to the insurgents are really put." These deeds were all done within the week before the proclamation was issued. He accuses the insurgents of burning villages at night while the inhabitants were asleep, the murder of inoffensive people, including women, boys and old men, destroying sugar estates, and the burning of fully 30,000,000 pounds of sugar. In nearly every case, the chief of staff says, where sugar plantations were destroyed, it was because the owners and workmen do not stop work and let themselves and their families starve, at the order of these men, whose acts, as above stated, Gen Weyler holds, show them to be bandits, deserving naught less than extermination. Gen. Weyler declares that if the outrages are committed by the Cuban or Spanish troops under him, he does not know it or order it; that they are retaliations for such outrages as the above, but he says he is here to protect the peaceful and industrious people of Cuba against such wrongs, and intends to do it.

REFORMS FOR CUBA.

Will Not Be Applied Until Circumstances Are Favorable.

London, April 23.—The Post to-day publishes a dispatch to a news agency from Madrid saying that Senor Canovas del Castillo, the prime minister, states that political reforms in Cuba will not be applied until circumstances are favorable for such action and Captaing-General Weyler requests that it be taken. The dispatch also states that the prime minister reaffirms positively that there is not the slighest foundation for the reports that negotiations are being carried on between the governments at Madrid and Washington.

NEWFOUNDLAND SEALERS.

The Total Catch Will Aggregate About 180,000 Skins.

St. Johns, N. F., April 23.—The sealing vessels Esquimaux and Terra Nova have arrived here from the seal fishery. The former has on board 10,000 young and old seal skins, equal in weight to 20,000 prime seal skins. The Terra Nova's catch is about half that of the Esquimaux, and her trip has been an unprofitable one. Only six more vessels are out. The total catch will aggregate about 180,000 skins.

Maryland Delegates Uninstructed.

Baltimore, April 23.—The republican state convention elected the following delegates-at-large: George S. Wellington, James A. Cary, Wm. T. Malster and Robert P. Graham. Electors-at-large: Gen. Adam E. King and J. Cookman Boyd. The convention voted down a resolution instructing the delegates for McKinley and they will go uninstructed.

TO CONSTRUCT CANALS.

Bill To Incorporate a Company To Build Waterways in New York.

Washington, April 23.—Mr. Cooper of Wisconsin has introduced in the house a bill to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of America. It empowers the company to construct canals from some point near the head of tidewater navigation in the Hudson river to Lake Champlain; from Lake Champlain to Lake St. Francis; from the head of Lake St. Francis to the Long Sault rapids on the St. Lawrence, and from Lewiston on the Niagara river to a point above Niagara falls, all to have channels of twenty feet navigable depth and sufficiently wide for the largest vessels to pass. The company is also authorized to widen, deepen and straighten the Champlain & Hudson canal between the points where their canal crosses the Champlain & Hudson canal, and provides that the company in so doing shall donate to New York state locks connecting its own canal with the Champlain & Hudson canal, and the Glen Falls feeder, such locks to be of the dimensions of the present Erie canal locks. Provision is also made for the disposal by the company of their terminals and other appurtenances whenever desired. Authority is also given to the company to hold, but not to alienate so much of the land covered with the waters of the rivers and lakes which the canal may traverse as may be required for their wharves and other works.

Resume of the Work at Their State Convention in New Haven.

New Haven, April 23.—A resume of the work of the Connecticut republican state convention, held in New Haven yesterday, is as follows: Resolutions were passed declaring for a gold standard for protection, and for the Monroe doctrine, and pledged its support to the man who should be nominated at St. Louis. The delegates go to the national convention uninstructed. They are: Morgan J. Bulkeley, John I. Hutchinson, A. H. Brewer and Samuel Fessenden. County and district delegates: J. A. Cheney, George Sykes, Rufus W. Blake, J. M. Douglass, Chas. E. Searles, Thomas H. Allen, E. A. Kellar and Hubert Williams. The new state central committee by districts is as follows: First, W. B. Dwight, Hartford; second, P. S. Bryant, East Hartford; third, George B. McLean, Simsbury; fourth, Robert A. Porter, Bristol; fifth, C. E. Turner, Waterbury; sixth, L. M. Jackson, Colchester; twelfth, W. S. Mead, Windham.

VICTORY FOR STRIKERS LIKELY.

Philadelphia Contractors Sign the Children's Jacket Makers' Agreement.

Philadelphia, April 23. — Meyer Shoenfield, organizer of the United Garment Workers of America, spent the greater part of his time in this city in visiting manufacturers to discuss with them the action of the contractors in refusing to renew last year's contracts with the children's jacket makers. Present indications point to a victory for the striking jacket makers. Five contractors have agreed, it is said, to renew the agreement. Mr. Shoenfield says that several contractors have gone to New York to secure new hands. The local unions of the United Garment Workers in that city have been requested to endeavor to dissuade children's jacket makers there from coming to this city.

EXIST ONLY ON PAPER.

Immense German Estates, Claimed by American Citizens, Are Fictitious.

Washington, April 23.—W. Henry Robertson, United States consul at Hamburg, has informed the state department that at his request the authorities there investigated the supposed existence of the Fischer or Fisher estate, to which American citizens have made claim, and reported to him that, after a most careful search, they have been unable to find anything bearing upon the persons or estates of Stephen Fischer beyond the records of a few marriages and deaths of parties bearing similar family names. The same answer was given in regard to other alleged estates. The authorities say that all these immense estates exist only on paper.

READ LURID LITERATURE.

Fourteen-Year-Old William Shaefer Commits Suicide in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, April 23.—Fourteen-year-old William Shaefer ended his life yesterday afternoon by hanging in the cellar of his home, 734 West street. The lad had been morbid and despondent for some time past. He refused to attend school and recently, after being reprimanded by his parents for inattention to his studies, he told several playmates that he would take his life. They at the time considered it an idle boast. Young Shaefer was an eager reader of lurid literature.

Railroad Rumor Denied.

New York, April 23.—C. H. Foster says there is no truth in the statement made in a Philadelphia dispatch that negotiations are pending for a settlement between the Reading and the Philadelphia, Reading & New England railroad, which contemplates an exchange of Philadelphia, Reading & New England bonds into new securities under the Reading reorganization plan.

Its Work Not Finished.

Utica, N. Y., April 23.—The extraordinary grand jury summoned in the United States court for the purpose of considering the Elmira bank cases, although in session all day yesterday, has not yet finished its work.

TWO TO DIE TO-DAY

Pustalka and Hermann To Be Executed at Sing Sing.

EACH MAN MURDERED HIS WIFE

Expected That They Will Meet Death Firmly — Visitors to the Condemned Men—Final Test of the Electrical Apparatus This Morning.

Sing Sing, N. Y., April 23.—Warden Sage has made all necessary preparations for the double execution of wife murderers Louis Hermann and Charles Pustalka to-day. Pustalka was visited yesterday by Father Creeden and two Sisters of Mercy from New York, who remained with him nearly all day. Pustalka was also visited by his youngest child, a girl aged 4 years, accompanied by two Dominican Sisters from the home Blauvettsville, N. Y., where all four of Pustalka's children are being cared for. Pustalka was very much affected by the visit of his child. Hermann was visited by his brother from Philadelphia and his brother-in-law of Brooklyn. Hermann was not affected in the least by their visit. He was also visited by Chaplain Weillis. Hermann says he was baptized in the Episcopal church, was married in the Episcopal church and will die in the Episcopal faith. He will be accompanied to the chair by Chaplain Weillis. Pustalka will be accompanied by Father Creeden of this place and Father Bruder of Poughkeepsie. Both men are bearing up bravely and will meet their fate, it is thought, without making any trouble. State Electrician Davis has made the final test of the electrical apparatus.

ADJOURNED SINE DIE.

Senator Quay Thanks the Pennsylvania Republicans for Last Fall's Results.

Harrisburg, April 23.—At the republican state committee meeting yesterday afternoon the report of the committee on the contest from Allegheny county was presented. The report favored seating the contestants. Senator Flynn presented a minority report and made a vigorous speech in defense of his position. The majority report prevailed. A delegate from the fourth district of Luzerne county said the district had elected two delegates but Chairman Quay ruled that the district was entitled to but one, and each delegate was accordingly accorded half a vote by the committee. Senator Quay thanked each member for the part he took in achieving the "magnificent results" of last November, and then declared the committee adjourned sine die.

RAINES LIQUOR LAW.

Opinion of New York's Corporation Counsel on the Hotel Provision.

New York, April 23.—Corporation Counsel Scott sent an opinion to Chief of Police Conlin holding in effect that so long as a man holds a hotel license regularly issued by the excise board he is a hotel proprietor within the meaning of the law, and where the police have a suspicion that any provision of the law is being violated, but no tangible evidence can be secured, the matter should be referred to the district attorney for investigation and indictment if the case warrants.

President Faure May Resign.

London, April 23.—The Daily News publishes to-day a dispatch from its Paris correspondent in which President Faure is represented as very uneasy, hardly knowing which way to turn. According to the dispatch, M. Faure meditates reverting to the policy formerly adopted by M. Sadi-Carnot of shuffling off the outgoing cabinet and bringing it in again as a new one. If the chamber of deputies support M. Bourgeois a deadlock will ensue unless President Faure shall ask the senate to join in dissolving or resign himself.

Mrs. Pietzel Will Demand Restitution.

Philadelphia, April 23.—Thomas A. Fahy, counsel for Mrs. Benjamin F. Pietzel, said to-day that his client will arrive in this city, probably this afternoon. The object of Mrs. Pietzel's visit is to demand restitution from Holmes for the $6,000 insurance money due her upon the death of her husband and which Holmes collected shortly before the murder of the Pietzel children.

McKinley and Protection.

Rutland, Vt., April 23.—The republican city caucus last evening elected delegates to the state and district conventions on tickets headed "McKinley and Protection," and unanimously and enthusiastically adopted a resolution declaring the hope that McKinley would be the next president.

Stanchfield Wants To Be Governor.

Albany, April 23.—The gubernatorial candidacy of John B. Stanchfield of Elmira, the democratic leader in the assembly, was formally launched last night at a dinner at the hotel Kenmore, given to Mr. Stanchfield by his democratic associates in the lower house of the legislature.

Baron Hirsch's Death.

Budapest, April 23.—Investigation into the cause of the death of Baron de Hirsch proves that the rumors put into circulation to the effect that his death was not due to natural causes are entirely without foundation. The autopsy shows that his death was the result of an attack of apoplexy.

Victory for Dixon.

Long Island City, L. I., April 23.—The fight at the Eureka Athletic club here last night between Johnny Lavack of Cleveland, and Tommy Dixon of St. Paul, resulted in a victory for Dixon at the end of the twentieth round.

What's in a name? An "absolutely fire proof" building in New York was damaged $25,000 worth by flames yesterday.

The ice trust now commands attention in New York. Their rates are ten cents more a hundred than those of Plainfield dealers.

The coming at the same time of leap year and the discovery that the Roetgen rays are capable of allowing the naked eye to view the human heart is along the line of the eternal fitness of things.

The Elizabeth Leader says that Frederick C. Marsh will be called upon to accept the Democratic Senatorial nomination of Union county for the election next fall. Ex-Sheriff Hicks is also named as a possible candidate for Sheriff by the Democrats.

At a recent church fair in Bar Harbor a young woman allowed the general public to kiss her for ten cents per kiss and made a large sum of money for the cause thereby. Such self-sacrificing devotion cannot fail to result in an unprecedented spread of piety and microbes.—Rochester Union

At an Epworth League convention in Orange yesterday, when reports as to the work of the society were being given, one young woman declared that their League had formerly been handicapped by a president who was in love and couldn't take time from his sweetheart to look after the League, but he had been succeded by a president who was in love with the church and was getting along swimmingly.

Now comes the time when the Honorables of the Congressional halls fairly reek with importance and glory. Seed time is here and many a horny-handed tiller of the soil will receive a package of pumpkin or asparagus seeds from Uncle Sam through the grace of an indulgent postal service and a liberal appropriation by the men who grow inestimably in the minds of the agriculturists when the latter read the rubber-stamped inscription "Compliments of Hon. Josephus Biggun."

James E. Martine, resourceful in ideas as any man, says that the Women's Town Improvement Association cannot do anything better for the beauty of Plainfield than to agitate the subject of planting shade trees on the business streets. The Farmer Orator is an enthusiast in this direction, and believes that the accomplishment of such an idea would add inestimably to the worth of the city as a desirable residential place while it would in no way interfere with its commercial progress.

Charles J. Baxter, of this city, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has issued a letter to the teachers in the public schools, informing them that if they desire to become beneficiaries of the "Teachers' Retirement Fund," provided for in the passage of a bill by the recent Legislature, they must notify the Boards of Education, under whose supervision they are, by June 11th. The law provides the Board of Education or the Board of Trustees shall receive monthly and pay over to the State Treasurer one per cent. of the salaries or annuities paid each month to the teachers who shall, prior to June 11th, 1896, give notice of their intention to enjoy the benefits of the fund. The benefits of the law are as follows: "Whenever any teacher entitled to the benefits of this act has taught in the public schools of this State for a period of twenty years, and shall become incapacitated from performing the duties of a teacher, such teacher shall thereafter receive an annuity out of said fund of a sum equal to one-half of the average annual salary received for the five years immediately preceding the time of retirement; provided, that no annuity granted under this act shall be less than two hundred and fifty dollars or more than six hundred dollars, but in case any teacher should be retired within five years after the passage of this act, he or she must, in order to receive the benefits thereof, pay into the fund a sum equal to twenty per cent. of his or her annual salary at time of retirement; and provided further, that if at any time there shall not be sufficient money in said fund to pay the warrants drawn thereon as presented for payment, the treasurer shall register said warrants, and mark on the back of each these words: 'Presented for payment and not paid for want of funds. Treasurer of State of New Jersey;' and such warrants shall be paid in the order of registration, and bear interest at five per cent. per annum from date of registration."

Not Yet Accepted.

A despatch from Boston says that the General Electric people say that, while a syndicate has recently made an offer to the General Electric Company of valuable land and other privileges at Elizabeth, if the company would consolidate and remove its manufacturing plants to that place, the company has not accepted the offer. The proposition has been met by a counter-proposition, which, if accepted, would involve the expenditure of $1,500,000 to $2,000,000, and is not likely, therefore, to be considered.

The work is being done by the colonists, and the houses will be neat, six-room structures. Each colonist will have about an acre of land. Gardening will be carried on by the men, who are mostly New York artisans, and will commute.

THEATRICAL.

"For Fair Virginia," a romantic play dealing with a domestic episode during the rebellion will invite consideration at Music Hall tomorrow night. This excellent dramatic composition is the work of Russ Whytal, a comparatively unknown playwright, but from the reception accorded his efforts at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York, where it received its initial production last season and the subsequent favors bestowed upon its genuine merits by the critics in Chicago and other important points, it is not beyond the range of probability that the name of Whytal will be linked with those whose very mention in connection with a theatrical offering is a guarantee of superiority. Mr. Whytal modestly proclaimed himself the author of "For Fair Virginia," but with a well justified confidence in his reward, he presented his play in admirable form. Even the minutest details received marked attention from an artistic standpoint, and the result proved a very pleasant surprise. "For Fair Virginia" as its title suggests, is a play reared upon lines, wherein the patriotism and loyality of the Southern people stand out in bold relief, and yet so ingenuously has Mr. Whytal utilized his ideas, that the treatment of the subject is altogether refreshing. In no particular instance are the sentiments hostile to either section allowed to provoke displeasure on the part of the most sensitive, in fact so delicately does the author of this success play handle a theme of absorbing interest as to command the admiration of all classes of theatre patrons.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

SOUTH AFRICAN AFFAIRS.

Great Britain Determined To Prevent Foreign Intervention.

London, April 23.—In a speech at the Constitutional club last evening Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, reiterated his formerly expressed views regarding South African affairs. He insisted that Great Britain must above all things prevent foreign intervention and expressed hope that harmony would soon be restored. In his remarks Mr. Chamberlain divulged nothing regarding the negotiations now in progress. The government, he said, was fully alive to the serious position resulting from the revolt in Matabeleland, but believed that the repression of the outbreak could be best achieved by the local forces, and, therefore, unless an unexpected emergency should arise, would not send a large detachment of imperial troops to the scene of the trouble.

Affidavits as to personal character may be necessary to allay suspicion or to attract the simple minded; but what has the manufacturer's private character to do with the efficacy of his so called "cure?" Ely's Cream Balm depends solely upon its reputation of years as a successful cure for catarrh in all its stages. It is absolutely free from mercury or any other drug injurious to the system. Being applied directly to the diseased membrane it affords instantaneous relief and will effect a perfect cure of catarrh.

WORTH A FORTUNE.

This Dog Possesses Fifty Thousand Dollars in His Own Right.

There's a dog in Denver, Col., at this writing who fell heir to $50,000 and enjoyed the legacy so far as canine enjoyment of such a sum is possible, until ordinary consumption marked him for a victim.

Now there is a skilled surgeon retained at a big fee to attend him; he has a nurse whose sole duty it is to feed him and care for him and administer medicines at the times designated by the surgeon who has the case under consideration. Incidentally the whole family of the dead man has accompanied the dog to the west, where the canine was ordered to be taken for his health.

This particular dog, which is without doubt the richest dog in the world, is a small fox terrier, and he literally fell into his good fortune. He was a waif in the streets of Philadelphia when a wealthy native of the Quaker city named Davis found him and took him home. That was some years ago.

Davis conceived a great fondness for the terrier, and the terrier manifested a great deal of affection for Davis. The poor dog and the rich man got on together famously and became inseparable companions.

When Davis fell ill the dog seemed to realize that the illness was of a serious nature and refused to be comforted. He neither ate nor slept while Davis was sick. Davis was touched by the devotion of his canine friend. And when Davis had died and his will was read it was found that he had left to the dog a legacy of $50,000. No provision was made for the disposition of the legacy in the event of the terrier's death.

Soon after the dog fell heir to the fortune he, too, became ill. Skilled medical men were consulted, and they said the dog was suffering from consumption.

The legatee was treated with all the consideration which would have been accorded a human who had a bank account of $50,000. A trained nurse was engaged to care for the terrier to see that the orders of the dog's physicians should be carried out to the letter. Cod liver oil was administered in prescribed doses and at regular intervals throughout the day and night.

But the condition of the terrier did not improve. He grew worse steadily, and finally the physicians ordered a change of climate. It was suggested that he be taken to Denver. He was taken there in the hope that the change of air might benefit his lungs, says the Denver Republican. At the present time the dog, in common with the family of the dead man, is quartered at the leading fashionable hotel of Denver.

It is an interesting question whether the $50,000 reverts to the family in the event of the dog's death, which is certain, or goes to the state of Pennsylvania.

COMMANDER BRICE.

The Gallant Record of the New United States Fish Commissioner.

Commander John J. Brice, of California, whom President Cleveland has just appointed fish commissioner, is one of the most popular naval men on the Pacific coast. He has been identified with the work of the United States fish commission since 1890. When first ordered to that duty he became intensely interested in the work and soon became very proficient. His appointment as fish commissioner was made at the solicitation of Senator White, of California, who was backed in his recommendation by a large number of persons interested in the fish culture of the coast. Commander Brice entered the volunteer navy in 1861. His first duties were with the United States steamer Freeborn. He was twice promoted for gallant conduct, and in 1863 was transferred to the regular navy. He served in the South Atlantic squadron until 1870, in which year he was transferred to the hydrographic office. After that he served the navy department in many capacities, until 1878, when he was ordered to the navy yard at Mare Island. In 1885 Commander Brice was ordered to the Iroquois, of the Pacific squadron. In 1889 he was stationed at the navy yard in Washington.

Number of Stars Visible.

To the average eye not more than 5,000 stars are visible; some persons having extraordinarily strong eyes can see about 8,000 stars. Through the Lick telescope and other powerful instruments about 50,000,000 stars are visible.

BOATS FOR A DOLLAR.

A Fleet That Carries the Life of the World.

Millions of Tiny Craft With Human Blood for Their Sea.

The microscope has revealed many wonderful things, but none more wonderful than the minute bodies which exist in the blood. They are called corpuscles or cells, and are of two kinds, the white and the red. Just a few words about these red cells. They are so minute that there are countless numbers of them in the tiniest drop of blood. Yet each one has a peculiar shape, for which none of them ever vary.

An adult of medium weight has about twelve pints of blood in the body, and yet every small drop of this contains millions of red corpuscles. The number of them in the blood cannot be comprehended by the human mind. Of what use are they?

One great object of breathing is to bring the oxygen of the air in close contact with the blood which is in the lungs, for oxygen is necessary for the support of life. It is the business of these little red cells in the blood, to carry the oxygen which we breathe in the lungs to every part of the body. The most minute part of every organ and tissue in the body must have its supply of oxygen or it will perish, and the only way the oxygen can reach all these parts is by means of these little red cells. No matter how pure the air may be which we breathe, if there are not enough red cells in the blood to carry a sufficient amount of oxygen through the body we will surely suffer. Plenty of fresh air is essential, and so is an abundant supply of these little "oxygen-carriers" necessary. These little red bodies have been called "boats for carrying oxygen." Certainly not a very bad name for them.

Oxygen starvation is shown by poor circulation, loss of appetite, debility, anaemia, nervousness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, repeated colds, muscular and mental weakness, and many other symptoms. What is the remedy? Something which will make more of these oxygen-carrying "boats." Nothing will accomplish this quicker than Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It goes to the foundation of things. It greatly increases the number of red corpuscles in the blood. What follows? More oxygen is carried through the system, and new life and vigor are imparted. The oil nourishes the body, and the hypophosphites gives stability and strength to the nervous system. As the large size of Scott's Emulsion sells for one dollar, so you can get "oxygen boats for one dollar."

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

But we were young, and with our fears mingled a delicious excitement. We were going on an adventure of knight-errantry in which we might win our spurs. We were going to see the world and play men's parts in it! to save a friend and make our mistress happy!

We gave our orders, but we said nothing of Catherine or Mme. Claude, merely bidding Gil tell them after our departure. We arranged for the immediate dispatch of a message to the vicomte at Bayonne, and charged Gil until he should hear from him to keep the gates closed, and look well to the shoot of the kitchen midden. Then, when all was ready, we went to our pallets, but it was with hearts throbbing with excitement and wakeful eyes.

"Anne! Anne!" said Croisette, rising on his elbow and speaking to me some three hours later, "what do you think the vidame meant this morning when he said that about the ten days?"

"What about the ten days?" I asked peevishly. He had roused me just when I was at last falling asleep.

"About the world seeing that his was the true faith—in ten days?"

"I am sure I do not know. For goodness' sake let us go to sleep," I replied. For I had no patience with Croisette, talking such nonsense, when we had our own business to think about.

CHAPTER III.

THE ROAD TO PARIS.

The sun had not yet risen above the hills when we three, with a single servant behind us, drew rein at the end of the valley, and easing our horses on the ascent turned in the saddle to take a last look at Caylus—at the huddled gray town, and the towers above it. A little thoughtful we all were, I think. The times were rough and our errand was serious. But youth and early morning are fine dispellers of care; and once on the uplands, we trotted gayly forward, now passing through wide glades in the sparse oak forest, where the trees all leaned one way, now over bare, wind-swept downs; or once and again descending into a chalky bottom, where the stream bubbled through deep beds of fern, and a lonely farmhouse nestled amid orchards.

Four hours' riding, and we saw below us Cahors, filling the bend of the river. We cantered over the Vallandre bridge, which there crosses the Lot, and so to my uncle's house of cali in the square. Here we ordered breakfast, and announced with pride that we were going to Paris.

Our host raised his hands. "Now there!" he exclaimed, regret in his voice. "And if you had arrived yesterday you could have traveled up with Vidame de Bezers! And you a small party—saving your lordships' presence—and the roads but so-so!"

"But the vidame was riding with only half a dozen attendants also!" I answered, flicking my boot in a careless way.

The landlord shook his head. "Ah, M. le Vidame knows the world!" he answered, shrewdly. "He is not to be taken off his guard, not he! One of his men whispered me that 20 stanch fellows would join him at Chateauroux. They say the wars are over, but—" and the good man, shrugging his shoulders, cast an expressive glance at some fine flitches of bacon which were hanging in his chimney. "However, your lordships know better than I do," he added, briskly. "I am a poor man. I only wish to live at peace with my neighbors, whether they go to mass or sermon."

This was a sentiment so common in those days and so heartily echoed by most men of substance both in town and country that we did not stay to assent to it; but having received from the worthy fellow a token which would insure our obtaining fresh cattle at Limoges, we took to the road again, refreshed in body, and with some food for thought.

Five-and-twenty attendants were more than even such a man as Bezers, who had many enemies, traveled with in those days; unless accompanied by ladies. That the vidame had provided such a reinforcement seemed to point to a wider scheme than the one with which we had credited him. But we could not guess what his plans were; since he must have ordered his people before he heard of Catherine's engagement. Either his jealousy therefore had put him on the alert earlier, or his threatened attack on Pavannes was only a part of a larger plot. In either case our errand seemed more urgent, but scarcely more hopeful.

The varied sights and sounds however of the road—many of them new to us—kept us from dwelling over much on this. Our eyes were young, and whether it was a pretty girl lingering behind a troop of gypsies, or a pair of strollers from Valencia—jongleurs they still called themselves—singing in the old dialect of Provence, or a Norman horse dealer with his string of cattle tied head and tail, or the Puy de Dome to the eastward over the Auvergne hills, or a tattered old soldier wounded in the wars—fighting for either side, according as their lordships inclined—we were pleased with all.

Yet we never forgot our errand. We never, I think, rose in the morning—too often stiff and sore—without thinking: "To-day or to-morrow or the next day"—as the case might be—"we shall make all right for Kit!" For Kit! Perhaps it was the purest enthusiasm we were ever to feel, the least selfish aim we were ever to pursue. For Kit!

Meanwhile we met travelers of rank on the road. Half the nobility of France were still in Paris enjoying the festivities which were being held to mark the royal marriage. We obtained horses where we needed them without difficulty. And though we had heard much of the dangers of the way, infested as it was said to be by disbanded troopers, we were not once stopped or annoyed.

But it is not my intention to chronicle all the events of this my first journey, though I dwell on them with pleasure; or to say what I thought of the towns, all new and strange to me, through which we passed. Enough that we went by way of Limoges, Chateauroux and Orleans, and that at Chateauroux we learned the failure of one hope we had formed. We had thought that Bezers when joined there by his troopers would not be able to get relays; and that on this account we might by traveling post overtake him; and possibly slip by him between that place and Paris. But we learned at Chateauroux that his troop had received fresh orders to go to Orleans and await him there, the result being that he was able to push forward with relays so far. He was evidently in hot haste. For leaving there with his horses fresh he passed through Angerville, 40 miles short of Paris, at noon, whereas we reached it on the evening of the same day—the sixth after leaving Caylus.

We rode into the yard of the inn—a large place, seeming larger in the dusk—so tired that we could scarcely slip from our saddles. Jean, our servant, took the four horses, and led them across to the stables, the poor beasts hanging their heads and following meekly. We stood a moment stamping our feet and stretching our legs. The place seemed in a bustle, the clatter of pans and dishes proceeding from the windows over the entrance, with a glow of light and the sound of feet hurrying in the passages. There were men, too, half a dozen or so, standing at the door of the stables, while others leaned from the windows. One or two lanthorns just kindled glimmered here and there in the semi-darkness, and in a corner two smiths were shoeing a horse.

We were turning from all this to go in, when we heard Jean's voice raised in altercation, and thinking our rustic servant had fallen into trouble, we walked across to the stables near which he and the horses were still lingering. "Well, what is it?" I said, sharply.

"They say that there is no room for the horses," Jean answered, querulously, scratching his head; half sullen, half cowed, a country servant all over.

"And there is not!" cried the foremost of the gang about the door, hastening to confront us in turn. His tone was insolent, and it needed but half an eye to see that the fellows were inclined to back him up. He stuck his arms akimbo and faced us with an impudent smile. A lanthorn on the ground beside him throwing an uncertain light on the group, I saw that they all wore the same badge.

"Come," I said, sternly, "the stables are large, and your horses cannot fill them. Some room must be found for mine."

"To be sure! Make way for the king!" he retorted. While one jeered "Vive le roi!" and the rest laughed. Not good-humoredly, but with a touch of spitefulness.

Quarrels between gentlemen's servants were as common then as they are to-day. But the masters seldom condescended to interfere. "Let the fellows fight it out," was the general sentiment. Here, however, poor Jean was overmatched, and we had no choice but to see to it ourselves.

"Come, men, have a care that you do not get into trouble," I urged, restraining Croisette by a touch, for I by no means wished to have a repetition of the catastrophe which had happened at Caylus. "These horses belong to the vicomte de Caylus. If your master be a friend of his, as may very probably be the case, you will run the risk of getting into trouble."

I thought I heard, as I stopped speaking, a subdued muttering, and fancied I caught the words: "Papegot! Down with the Guises!" But the spokesman's only answer aloud was "Cock-a-doodle-doo!" "Cook-a-doodle-doo!" he repeated, flapping his arms in defiance. "Here is a cock of fine hackle!" And so on, and so forth, while he turned grinning to his companions, looking for their applause.

I was itching to chastise him, and yet hesitated, lest the thing should have its serious side, when a new actor appeared. "Shame, you brutes!" cried a shrill voice above us—in the clouds it seemed. I looked up, and saw two girls, coarse and handsome, standing at a window over the stable, a light between them. "For shame! Don't you see that they are mere children? Let them be," cried one.

The men laughed louder than ever; and for me, I could not stand by and be called a child. "Come here," I said, beckoning to the man in the doorway. "Come here, you rascal, and I will give you the thrashing you deserve for speaking to a gentleman!"

He lunged forward, a heavy fellow, taller than myself and six inches wider at the shoulders. My heart failed me a little as I measured him. But the thing had to be done. If I was slight, I was wiry as a hound, and in the excitement had forgotten my fatigue. I snatched from Marie a loaded riding whip he carried, and stepped forward.

"Have a care, little man!" cried the girl, gayly—yet half in pity, I think. "Or that fat pig will kill you!"

My antagonist did not join in the laugh this time. Indeed, it struck me that his eye wandered, and that he was not so ready to enter the ring as his mates were to form it. But before I could try his mettle, a hand was laid on my shoulder. A man appearing from I do not know where—from the dark fringe of the group, I suppose—pushed me aside, roughly, but not discourteously.

"Leave this to me!" he said, coolly stepping before me. "Do not dirty your hands with the knave, master. I am pining for work, and the job will just suit me. I will fit him for the worms before the nuns above can say an Ave!"

I looked at the newcomer. He was a stout fellow; not over tall, not over big; swarthy, with prominent features. The plume of his bonnet was broken, but he wore it in a rakish fashion; and, altogether, he swaggered with so daredevil an air, clinking his spurs and swinging out his long sword recklessly, that it was no wonder three or four of the nearest fellows gave back a foot.

"Come on!" he cried, boisterously, forming a ring by the simple process of sweeping his blade from side to side, while he made the dagger in his left hand flash around his head. "Who is for the game? Who will strike a blow for the little admiral? Will you come one, two, three at once; or all together? Anyway, come on, you—"

And he closed his challenge with a volley of frightful oaths, directed at the group opposite.

"It is no quarel of yours," said the big man, sulkily; making no show of drawing his sword, but rather drawing back himself.

"All quarrels are my quarrels! and no quarrels are your quarrels. This is about the truth, I fancy!" was the smart retort; which our champion rendered more emphatic by a playful lunge that caused the big bully to skip again.

There was a loud laugh at this, even among the enemy's backers. "Bah, the great pig!" ejaculated the girl above. "Spit him!" and she spat down on the whilom Hector—who made no great figure now.

"Shall I bring you a slice of him, my dear?" asked my rakehelly friend, looking up and making his sword play round the shrinking wretch. "Just a tit-bit, my love?" he added, persuasively. "A mouthful of white liver and caper sauce?"

"Not for me, the beast!" the girl cried, amid the laughter of the yard.

"Not a bit? If I warrant him tender? Ladies' meat?"

"Bah! no!" and she stolidly spat down again.

"Do you hear? The lady has no taste for you," the tormentor cried. "Pig of a Gascon!" And deftly sheathing his dagger, he seized the big coward by the ear, and turning him round, gave him a heavy kick which sent him spinning over a bucket, and down against the wall. There the bully remained, swearing and rubbing himself by turns; while the victor cried, boastfully: "Enough of him. If anyone wants to take up his quarrel, Blaise Bure is his man. If not, let us have an end of it. Let some one find stalls for the gentlemen's horses before they catch a chill; and have done with it. As for me," he added, and then he turned to us and removed his hat with an exaggerated flourish: "I am your lordships' servant to command."

This is delightful weather to ride your wheel, and if you are a New York business man you can ride your bike to the station and leave it with the Jersey Wheel Company. They will take good care of it until you return from the city.

Fred J. Titus, of the Riverside Wheelmen, has announced his intention to enter the Millburn road race. Titus has been suspended from all L. A W. tracks for life, but as the league refuses to recognize racing, he is eligible to ride in the Decoration Day contest.

The Race Committee of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs have decided to invite Will R. Pitman to act as referee of the Irvington-Millburn handicap road race on Decoration Day. The judges and scorers will be announced at the general meeting of the association on Friday evening. Frank P. Prial will do the handicapping.

All of the prominent manufacturers are decreasing the number of forgings in a wheel each year. It is the forgings in bicycles that develop flaws and cause fractures; they are not always reliable. The metal undergoes considerable "torture" under the hammer, and after being reduced to the extreme limit for lightness it is impossible to foresee when or where a flaw or fracture will develop.

Nearly all the bicycle rental establishments have added tandems to their stock this year, and they are in great demand. One advantage which a hired tandem has over a hired horse is that the owner of the outfit does not care how fast you make it go. Anyone can ride on the front seat of a tandem, no matter if they never saw a bicycle before, provided the rider behind knows his business. All the inexperienced one has to do is to follow the motion of the pedals with his feet, and hold onto the handle bars, but not too tightly, however. Either front or rear rider can do the steering, and each soon learns to anticipate the desires of the other in regard to direction to be taken until it becomes almost an instinct. Tandem riding is very similar to single wheel riding with but a few exceptions. Care should be taken that the steering connection rods are tight, for if they are not, the steering will be uneven, and if too tight, the steering head will bend. The front chain should be somewhat tighter than the chain on the rear wheel, but not tight enough to bind.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The athletes of the Senior class of the High School are busily preparing for their athletic games tomorrow afternoon. The committee in charge, Volney F. Green, J. Hazelwood Craig, and Henry Eggerding, have announced the following events: 100 yard dash, 440 yard run, one-third mile bicycle race, putting the shot, running high jump, standing broad jump, pole vault. This list is subject to change. Quite a number of entries are expected for each event, and the Seniors are planning to have lots of sport out of the field day.

Self-Preservation.

The professor swims from the sinking boat and climbs up on the bank. Then, dashing in again, he returns to the wreck and rescues his wife.

"But why didn't you save her before?" asks the looker-on, in wonderment.

"Ah, my dear sir," was the learned man's reply, "I was bound to save myself first. Self-preservation is the highest law of nature."—Providence Journal.

THE PAST AND PRESENT.

MEDIAEVAL AND MODERN ILLUMINATIONS AT THE CAMERA CLUB.

Some of the Exhibits Date Back as Far as the Twelfth Century, and the Color Work is Something Wonderful—Initial Letters.

It seems strange that Plainfield should not give the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club something of the support it realy deserves. There has been an increase, however, during the last week in the number of visitors and the people of this city are beginning to realize the wonderful and beautiful display of works of art that the Camera Club has collected. The attendance last evening was very good while a number attended during the afternoon.

A small but very interesting collection is that of the mediaeval and modern illuminations, loaned by G. A. Audsley. The oldest is one from the twelfth century and is an initial letter from a Choral Book of that century executed on fine vellum. The color work is something remarkable. There are three illuminations from the fourteenth century, one of which is said to contain one of the finest initial letters known to exist. It is most delicately executed in rich colors on a raised gold ground. A frame contains a series of designs for illuminated card backs drawn in gold and colors by W. and G. Audsley. The other two frames, that complete this collection, also contain the work of W. and G. Audsley. They are two pages from probably the last illuminated book that has been gotten out. This is called "The Sermon on the Mount," and came out in about 1861. The subject of one is the Lord's Prayer marvelously done in letters of gold and surrounded with a rich colored border. The other contains the opening verse of the seventh chapter of St. Matthew in gold and richly colored letters. The cover for this book, which was designed by the authors, is exhibited at another place. It is a large red morocco cover with a fancy design in gold stamped upon it, and is the largest machine-struck morocco binding ever produced. This same cover was the finest example shown in the London Exhibition of 1862.

One of the most remarkable exhibits that adorn the walls of the main room, is a small piece of Florentine mosaic work, representing a hen and rooster. The different colored marbles are united together into a wonderful combination and the likeness is exact. This exhibit was brought in too late to be added to the catalogue.

Three Indictments Against Culver.

Nathan V. Culver, the man who has been staying in this city for the past year, has had three indictments presented against him by the Middlesex county Grand Jury. He is charged with indecent exposure at Piscataway on March 10th, and also on the same date of assaulting and carnally abusing Julia Grisley and Gertrude Codington, two young girls under sixteen years of age. He pleaded not guilty to all three indictments and trial was set down for May 10th.

Another Big Bargain at White's.

Having closed out a big line of porch chairs and rockers from one of the largest factories at a big discount from the regular price that will be placed on sale the end of the week at prices to make them move more quickly. Those in need of solid comfort will find a big variety to select from. One hundred to go at the small price of 59 cents, and one hundred others at the small price of 98 cents and up.

All Smoke.

A still alarm of fire was sent into fire headquarters yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock by Druggist Mallinson. Chief Doane and First Assistant James Martin responded and found a small quantity of smoke coming from the chimney of the building occupied by the druggist. No fire was discovered and the cause of the smoke was a small fire in a stove.

An Endeavor Anniversary.

Dr. Brett, first vice president of the State Chiristian Endeavor Society, will deliver an address at the anniversary exercises of the Warren Chapel Society on Thursday, May 14th. His address will be relative to the coming State Convention to be held in this city.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. For sale at 50c per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

INTERMENT OF GEORGE LISSIGNOLO.

A Large Number of the Late Plainfielder's Friends Attend Service at the Grave.

The remains of the late George A. Lissignolo, were were brought to this city yesterday afternoon on the 4:33 train, accompanied by the family, relatives and friends. A service was held at Belmar at 1 o'clock. Interment was in the family plot in Evergreen Cemetery on Plainfield avenue. There was a very large number of friends present, including many from New York, and representatives from Alert Hose Co., No. 1, of this city. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards officiated, reading Scripture selections and offering prayer.

The floral tributes consisted of several beautiful wreathes of roses and lilies, and bunches of cut roses. The casket was opened at the grave and those present were given an opportunity of viewing the remains.

The service at Belmar was conducted by Rev. Mr. Chatlin, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church.

SOME TROLLEY TALK.

The Netherwood Line to Be in Operation by May 6th.

A set of new trucks for the narrow guage track of the street railway arrived in town today and will be placed on Car No. 6. If the wiring can be finished in time it is the intention of Superintendent Adleman to run a car from Watchung and North avenues to the switch on Putnam avenue, Wednesday, May 6th, the day Barnum's circus shows here. A new dynamo will be placed in the electric light station, and the plan is to have a sufficient amount of power to run twelve cars by July 1st. In regard to the extension on Johnston's drive, the question of choosing a route remains to be done, then the work will be pushed. The only correct list of the officers of the Mountain Park Land Company, and the only one published, is as follows: President, Chandler W. Riker; vice president and manager, John H. French; secretary and selling agent, Silas D. Drake; treasurer, Joseph T. Vail.

Prices Marvelously Low.

The large variety of fine seasonable goods of almost every description now being kept at Edsall's Commercial Palace, and sold at as low prices as in the large cities, make it practically unnecessary for Plainfielders to go out of town to trade. Edsall says that in all his business experience he has never been able to offer such extraordinary inducements in such a great range of useful and ornamental articles as just now.

The children of John P. Emmons, of Prospect place, are detained home from school, owing to their illness with the prevalent measles.

F. H. Ball and family, of Elizabeth, have moved in B. A. Hegeman, Sr.'s new house at the corner of Myrtle and Washington avenues.

THE STORY OF A BOY LOST.

CHARLES HAND'S SON HERBERT WANDERS INTO THE COUNTRY.

Failed to Come Home at Nightfall and Aroused the Family to Excitement.—Found in a Terrill Road Farm House.

There was excitement at the home of Charles H. Hand, of East Fifth street, last evening, when his little son, Herbert Charles Hand, who is about five years of age, did not come home. The first warning of the impending trouble was given by a little colored boy, late in the afternoon, who told Miss Sadie and Miss Edith Hand that he had seen their little brother riding in a long wagon with only one seat, going in the direction of Westfield. In company with Mr. Kyte, the two excited sisters rode out the county road in search of their missing brother. They went as far as Westfield and inquired all the way but no trace could be found of the missing land.

Mr. Hand was very much worried over the disappearance of his son, especially when he learned that the gypsies were encamped near North avenue and Terril road. He notified Sergeant Kiely and that officer, accompanied by the anxious father and another policeman, started early in the evening for the gypsies camp. Sergeant Kiely asked them if they had seen anything of the child and on their negative reply, told them that their camp would have to be searched.

The roving Bohemians offered no objection and the camp was thoroughly searched, but without avail. The searching parties next visited the houses in the rear of Netherwood Hotel, but still unsuccessfully.

In the meantime, Mrs. Andrew McClelland, an aunt of the missing lad, and Mrs. William Crook, a friend, went hunting on their own account. They walked as far as Netherwood station, inquiring as they went, and at last heard from a family living near the station that a boy, answering the description of Herbert Hand, had ridden past, late in the afternoon, in Farmer Farley's wagon. The two women set out immediately for the farmer's house which was on Terrill road, some distance from South avenue, and there found the lad safe and well and enjoying himself immensely amid the novel sights of an agricultural variety.

He was taken home and reached there at about 10 o'clock when the family was in a state of distraction over his prolonged absence.

His story was that his school teacher wanted some dandelions and he and a friend, Edna Moore, expected to get them at noon but as there was not time they decided to go after school. The little girl was compelled to remain in school so Herbert went alone. He walked as far as Berckman street and then asked Mr. Farley, who was passing, for a ride. Herbert went home with him, had a glorious farm supper and had about decided to buy a farm of his own when the searchers found him.

There was great rejoicing at his return and the police departed glad that the lad had been found.

Ball Given by the Colonial Club.

There was a grand time at T. A. B. Hall last night when the Colonial Social Club gave their dance. The attendance was very good and it was not until 3 o'clock this morning that merry party broke up Refreshments were served about midnight. Martin Kane was the efficient floor manager, with Michael Higgins as his capable assistant. James Kane assisted in the general management of the dance. Prof. O'Reilly furnished the music.

Odd Fellows at New Brunswick.

A special meeting of the Grand Lodge of the I. O. O. F. was held at New Brunswick last night and a number of Past Grands from Queen City Lodge attended. Those who went were Dr. L. S. Pocock, Thad Smith, Frank Smith, W. E Barber and H. O. Hance. The last three took the grand lodge degree.

—A tea will be given tomorrow afternoon at St. Stephen's church by the ladies of the sewing class.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

SOME CYCLING GOSSIP.

COMMENT THAT WILL BE INTERESTING TO LOCAL RIDERS.

The Companion Wheel a Novel Invention and Attracts Considerable Attention.—A New Club Formed in the Borough

Policeman Chas. Giese now rides a Victor wheel.

Mrs. S. W. Clark, of West Fifth street, rides a White wheel.

The Niantic Wheelmen, of New York, will run to this city May 3d.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has received another Dayton wheel.

Mrs. Andrew Carpenter, of Manning avenue, now rides a Columbia blue rim.

Miss Lucy Westphal, of South Second street, has purchased a Crescent wheel.

E. S. Randolph, night clerk at Randolph's pharmacy, has purchased an Elite wheel.

Nine new Cleveland wheels were received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company yesterday.

A party of young people from this city are planning a moonlight run to New Brunswick Saturday.

A meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. this evening to organize a cycle club. All interested are urged to attend.

Walter Probasco, of East Front street, has purchased a blue-rimmed Columbia wheel of the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company received another shipment of fifteen new Columbia and Hartford wheels yesterday afternoon.

Through the H. J. Martin agency, the following wheels have been sold: J. Newman, Defiance; Andrew Schaefer, Gale; Thomas Johnson, Tourist.

Charles J. Rydell, of this city, expects to ride in the Irvington-Millburn road race on Decoration Day if he can get into good condition before that time.

Women who are in doubt as to what kind of a costume to wear this season in riding their wheels, should visit the Jersey Wheel Company, and the doubt will soon disappear.

The Leap Year Club, composed of young women from this city and the borough, will soon form themselves into a cycle club. They intend wearing costumes alike and will take frequent spins.

It is a noteworthy fact that nearly all the club runs out of New York and Brooklyn are to points on Long Island or in New Jersey. Wheelmen like the flat country when they are to travel any great distance.

All the bicycle dealers complain of their inability to keep up with orders, and yet every bicycle factory in the country is putting machines on the market just as fast as thousands of skilled operators can build them.

Quite a number of the young men of this city are quietly preparing for the Decoration Day meet of the Crescent Wheelmen. The one-mile novice race, for club members only, will attract a number of the younger racing talent.

The first lantern bicycle parade of the season, held under the auspices of the Llewellyn Bicycle Club, of Montclair, took place Wednesday evening, and many clubs from Bloomfield, the Oranges, Franklin, Nutley, Belleville and Newark were represented.

The Committee on Local Organization appointed by President Elliott of the League of American Wheelmen is as follows: I. B. Potter, New York; S. A. Boyle, Pennsylvania: R. Gentle, New Jersey; P. G. Reed. Ohio; R. Hohm, Missouri, W. A. Brown, Wisconsin; L. C. Jaquish, Illinois, and S. Elliott, Massachusetts.

The following sales have been made recently by Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer: Mrs. Conway, of West Front street, a Hunter, Middy and Cycloe; Mr. Herlet, and William Waters, Fowlers; Adam Dealman, Mr. Meister, Whitfield Frazee and H. Ryno, Appolos; H. Hansen, and Thomas Hanna, Hunters; Fred Haynes, Pinafore; Mr. Compton, Rival; Dr. Glen, Elmore.

The Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen has decided to accept the one-third and two-thirds of a mile records made by W. W. Hamilton, the Denver rider. For competing in unsanctioned races a number of members of the Seventh Regiment, of New York, have been suspended for one year. Tom Cooper, the Detroit racer, is the latest acquisition to the professional ranks from among the prominent Class B riders.

The Punnett Companion arrived in Plainfield yesterday noon under the charge of C. Willing Hare, who is in the employ of the Punnett Cycle Manufacturing Company. This novel two-wheeled machine, on which the two riders sit side by side, caused a big sensation wherever it went. Through the kindness of F. L. C Martin, for the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company are sole agents for the Companion in this city, a Press reporter enjoyed a short spin on this up-to-date wheel with a companion. Despite the fact that the two riders were very unequal in weight, there was not the slightest suggestion of unsteadiness as the Companion rode as easily as a single wheel and easier than a tandem. Their claim that "one ride converts the most skepitical" is certainly correct. The wheel will probably remain here until Saturday.

A pneumatic saddle has been thought by many to be the true solution of the saddle question, says the New York Evening Telegram. Prior to the introduction of the pneumatic tire the pneumatic saddle had not been thought of. In fact the pneumatic idea has been a prime factor in revolutionizing the bicyle business. Several saddles based upon this theory have been devised, and now seem to be perfected to a condition that is making them successful. They are mostly of triangular shape and look like a long and slender French roll bent into the proper outline. They are made with an inner rubber tube, that makes the seat comfortable, and is suposed "to take up" the nervous jar that is so dangerous to the internal organs which physicians allege may be affected. They are broad and totally devoid of the front horn that is so uncomfortable to many riders. Now some genius should devote his attention to perfecting a pneumatic handle bar, and then there wouldn't be much left to pneumatics unless something could be done with the pedals.

Little has been said about tandem steering and the correct position for the novice on a double machine. Racing men and old road riders seem to agree that the best control of a tandem machine is obtained from the rear seat. This is disputed by mechanical engineers who claim that as the leverage which is exerted by the rear handle bar only equals that of the front bar, because of loss in transmission and through loose joints and play at the points of attachment, the rear rider has less control of the machine than the man in front. Old riders on a road, not on a track, where it is imperative that the steering should be done by a man who can see every inch of ground, agree in saying that for some unaccountable reason the rear rider has a greater advantage and that a tandem is more easily handled with a novice on the front instead of the rear seat; this with a double-steering tandem, of course. In the case of a rider being unused to the going and the tandem being of the single-steering type, there is no alternative but to take the front seat and put the novice where he can do the least harm.

The young men of Watchung Park and that portion of the borough have formed a new athletic and cycling organization which goes by the name of the "Yellow Jackets." The members of this club all have the front forks of their wheels enameled yellow or have yellow trouser guards. They are also planning to have little pins made like that lively little insect, the yellow jacket, and will wear similar emblems on their sweaters or jerseys. The president of this enterprising club is Harry Green and he is also captain of the cycling department, James Arnold, Jr., is the able secretary and treasurer, while Raymond Carroll is manager of the athletic department. The cycling division enjoyed their first run last week to Westfield with Secretary Arnold as pacemaker. Next Tuesday a paper chase on bicycles is scheduled. William Buell and James Arnold, Jr., will act as hares and distribute the paper, while all riders between the ages of 14 and 18 are invited to join the hares under the command of captain Harry Green. The start will be made from the corner of Watchung and Fairview avenues at 3:30 o'clock.

Vestry Resolutions.

At a meeting of the vestry of Grace church, held on Tuesday evening, April 21st, the following preamble and resolution was adopted:

The vestry of this parish, in entering upon the discharge of their duties for a new convention year, desire to convey to the members of the corporation who have for so many years served the parish, and who have now declined re-election, an expression of their sense of the faithfulness and devotion with which they have labored for the advancement of the interest of the church.

We take this opportunity to testify that it is to their liberality and careful attention to duty that the present prosperity of the parish is largely indebted.

Resolved, That this minute, duly signed, be entered on the record book and a copy forwarded to the retiring members of the vestry, and that it be published in the local papers.

ENTICED TO JAIL BY BEER

A SOMERSET COUNTY CONSTABLE'S RIDE WITH A CRAZY MAN.

Big Hank Lake Gave a Little Constable a Rattling Ride Over Country Roads, But Was Finally Landed in the County Jail.

Constable George Cray, of Montgomery township, had a thrilling fifteen-mile ride with a lunatic Wednesday, over the hills and through the valleys of Somerset county. Hank Lake has been subject to strange hallucinations and was in the Trenton asylum for a time, but was recently discharged as a sound man. He weighs 260 pounds, has styled himself "the king of hell," and on Sunday began to show renewed signs of insanity. He amused himself by setting fire to a lot of wood land near Kingston, and subsequently found pleasure in shooting out his neighbor's window lights with a shotgun.

One of the neighbors more daring than the others handed him a jug of Monmouth county applejack, and he boozed on that for two days. Then he began his antics again, and Constable Cray started out to find him early Wednesday morning. He found Lake on a by-road near Griggstown. The constable is a small man, and no match physically for big Hank. He persuaded the man to enter the wagon by promises of beer, and they started for Somerville.

Soon Lake began urging the horse and imagined the animal had wings. "See how he flies along," he exclaimed gleefully. Then Lake urged him faster. The little constable was in terror lest there would be an accident, but could do nothing.

Over the hills they sped, the crazy man constantly endeavoring to increase the speed.

The fifteen miles to Somerville was made in little more than an hour. Cray pulled his foam-covered horse up in front of a hotel, and induced his charge to alight by promises of a drink. He finally got Lake to the county jail, where he was turned over to the Sheriff. When the iron doors clanged behind the crazy man the little constable nearly fainted from exhaustion. Lake will be sent back to the asylum.

ENDEAVOR OFFICERS ELECTED.

The Congregational Society Hear Encouragingly of Their Work.

The quarterly business meeting and the semi-annual election of officers of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church was held last evening in the church. The reports of the old officers and committees were made, and showed the society to be in a flourishing condition, especially in a financial direction. The reports of the work done during the last quarter were very cheering. The only important business transacted was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Harold Tomlinson; vice-president, Charles Belknap; secretary, Miss Bessie Pound; treasurer, Miss Stella Winkler. The chairmen of the various committees are as follows: Prayer meeting, Miss Eda Beekman; lookout, Robert Suffren; missionary, Joseph A. Robinson; social, Miss Julia Belknap; music, Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteau; good literature, John V. Beekman, Jr.; flower, Miss J. Louise Jenkins.

FAVORS LOCAL OPTION.

Elizabeth Presbytery Substitutes this for Prohibition.

The Elizabeth Presbytery, before adjourning its annual session Wednesday evening, substituted for the resolution passed earlier in the day asking for a prohibition amendment a request that the State Synod petition the Legislature to restore local option as it existed before the recent repeal of local option laws. Revs. Dr. Richards, of this city, and Parry were appointed to advocate this change before the synod.

American Volunteers Rally.

The American Volunteers will hold a big meeting at Carnegie Music Hall next Monday night. Box tickets may be obtained from Captain Mimms, commander of the Volunteer post in this city, or from Mrs. Ballington Booth at the Bible House in New York.

State Foresters to Meet Here.

The State Forestry Association will hold a convention in this city on May 21st.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

INSURGENT SUCCESS

Cracea, an Important Town, Captured and Held.

HOUSES FIRED; STORES LOOTED

The Recent Engagement Near Santa Clara Believed To Have Resulted in Government Defeat—Lopez Was an American Citizen.

Havana, April 24.—Rebels have captured Crucea, an important town near Santa Clara. The Spanish troops remained within the forts about the town, apparently afraid to venture forth to attempt to repulse the insurgents. The latter after entering the place set fire to the houses of several well known supporters of the government. They also looted a number of stores owned by Spaniards, securing supplies of provisions and clothing. When the last advices were received the rebels were still in possession of the town. Narciso Lopez, the rebel leader who was killed in a recent engagement near Santa Clara, was an American citizen. Complete details of the engagement are withheld by the government, and this fact leads to the belief that the Spanish troops were defeated. Dr. Pina and his wife were arrested a few days ago at Santa Fe, province of Pinar del Rio. They were brought to this city and thrown into the dungeons of Morro castle. The charge against them is that they aided and abetted the rebels by attending to sick and wounded insurgents, Dr. Pina as a physician and his wife as a nurse.

BUTCHERED BY SPANIARDS.

Peaceful Residents, Including an American Citizen, Shot Down in Cuba.

Havana, April 24.—Later news in regard to the engagement near Jaruco, Havana province, indicates that the affair was similar to others in which "pacificos" or peaceful citizens have been killed by Spanish troops. Fourteen of the dead are said to have been employes on estates and not insurgents. On the Spanish side none were killed and only three wounded, while the Cuban dead exceeded thirty. Jaruco is only fifteen miles from Havana on the Matanzas railroad. It was only a few miles from Jaruco that Dr. Delgado, the American citizen, was shot down and left for dead, and seven of his farm hands massacred.

Rev. Mr. Diaz To Be Released.

Washington, April 24. — Secretary Olney has received a dispatch from Consul General Williams, at Havana, saying that Rev. Mr. Diaz and his brother would be released from custody immediately upon the condition that they would leave Cuba.

THE FRENCH CRISIS.

Believed That the Bourgeois Ministry Will Be Recalled.

Paris, April 24.—The public is entirely with the ex-ministers in the present crisis, in view of the premier's explanation that they could not yield to the senate in the matter of the senate refusing to sanction the Madagascar credits, thus rendering it impossible to make expenditures that were indispensable to the greatness of the republic. It is believed that President Faure will call upon M. Bourgeois to form a new cabinet, and the latter will name his former colleagues without further material change.

The Only Way Out.

London, April 24.—The Daily News will to-day publish a dispatch from its Paris correspondent, who contends that there is no escape from a deadlock except a dissolution of the chambers or President Faure's resignation as a means to secure a speedy revision of an unworkable constitution. The ministers are mutually pledged not to enter any cabinet unless it is distinctly radical.

EVEN MONEY ON M'KINLEY.

$10,000 Ready in New York That He Will Be Nominated and Elected.

New York, April 24.—Theodore H. Price of the New York Stock Exchange said this morning that he had been authorized to bet $10,000 even money that William McKinley would be nominated as the republican candidate for president and that, barring his death or declination of the nomination, he would be elected.

Populists Deny Alleged Interviews.

Washington, April 24.—At a caucus of populists held here last night a statement was issued to the effect that purported interviews with people's party senators and congressmen to the effect that the people's party might support the nominee of one of the old parties for president are incorrect.

Willis on His Way to Washington.

San Francisco, April 24.—Minister to Hawaii Willis is on his way to Washington, it is said, to explain the position he occupied as to the Hawaiian government, his relations with President Dole not having been pleasant for some time past. He will leave in a few days

An Awful Charge.

Lockport, N. Y., April 24.—Ex-superintendent of the poor Samuel A. Carson has been indicted for malfeasance in office, having, it is alleged while superintendent of the poor sold to the county fifty-five cords of wood from his own farm at $5 per cord.

HOWE IN PHILADELPHIA.

The Lawyer Indicted with Holmes May Not Be Called to Trial.

Philadelphia, April 24.—Jeptha Howe, the St. Louis lawyer, who with H. H. Holmes, was indicted for conspiracy at the time of the discovery of the fraud against the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance association, is in town for the purpose of having the indictment abandoned by the authorities. Howe arrived in Philadelphia almost simultaneously with Mrs. Pitezel, for the murder of whose husband Holmes is to hang on May 7. Howe is the lawyer who is said to represent Mrs. Pitezel at the time the $10,000 policy on Pitezel's life was collected. Since the conviction of Holmes there has been some speculation as to what disposition would be made of the Howe case. The lawyer has been under $2,000 bail. It is known that he came here for the express purpose of having the case against him dropped. It is probable that his counsel will go into court within a day or two and ask to have the case nolle prossed. It is said that District Attorney Graham is willing to compromise the case. H. H. Holmes and Marian Hedgepeth are the two principal witnesses in the case. As one is to be hanged next month and the other is serving a twenty-five years' sentence for train robbery, neither would make a good witness. Mrs. Pitezel came here in response to a letter written by her attorney, Thomas A. Fahy, who desires her presence in this city during his efforts to have proper restitution made to his client.

FEDERAL PATRONAGE.

Resolution in the House Providing for Investigation of Its Alleged Abuse.

Washington, April 25.—Mr. Sanford of North Carolina has introduced a resolution in the house "to investigate the extent to which federal patronage is being used to control legislation and corrupt the public service." The preamble recites that charges have been publicly made that the use of federal patronage has become a national disgrace and a menace to our institutions; that it is charged that it is being used to control conventions, coerce congress and manipulate the supreme court; that the power of 200,000 federal officials, centered in the chief executive, will absorb the independence of the other co-ordinate branches of the government; that circumstances seem to justify the belief that the executive influence through the use of federal patronage was exerted to secure the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act at the extra session of the fifty-third congress, and that it is believed this abuse of executive prerogative has been practiced for many years."

TO PROTECT OUR SHIP BUILDERS

A Bill Aimed at Americans Who Purchase Yachts Abroad.

Washington, April 24.—Mr. Payne of New York has prepared a report on the bill which amends section 4,216 of the revised statutes which permits foreign yachts to enter United States ports without the payment of a tonnage tax so that it shall not extend to any foreign-built yacht owned, chartered or used by a citizen of the United States. The report shows the abuses which have grown up under the present section and states that it has been the American policy to exclude every foreign-built vessel from American registry. It pays a high tribute to American-built ships and asserts that four large steam yachts are now being built abroad for American owners for which from one to two million dollars will go to English workmen. This money, it says, should be given to our own citizens or at least the revenues of the government should be increased by the tariff and tonnage duties upon them.

TWENTY PER CENT. DIVIDEND.

American Tobacco Company Tells Where the Money Is To Come from.

Jersey City, April 24.—The American Tobacco company has filed with Chancellor McGill its answer to the application for an injunction to prevent the company from paying 20 per cent. dividend in scrip. The answer says that Hall, the petitioner, is not a member of the trust, but bought in Philadelphia ten shares of the stock in order to secure a standing in court for the purpose of asking for an injunction. The answer further says that on December 31, 1895, the company had a surplus fund of $8,600,000, and that the 20 per cent. dividend is to be paid from this surplus and not from the profits of the current year as Hall alleges. The case will come up for a hearing next Monday.

Bequests to Charity.

Baltimore, April 24.—The will of the late Miss Annie Barnum, daughter of Zenua Barnum, the widely known hotel proprietor, has just been filed for probate. It makes bequests to institutions to the amount of $10,000. Rev. Frank Barnum, her brother, who is a priest in charge of the missions in Alaska of the Catholic church, is left $25,000, and the rest of the estate goes to other relatives.

New Jersey Republican Convention.

Orange, N. J., April 24.—The eighth congressional district republican convention of New Jersey held here yesterday afternoon elected Frank Bergen of Elizabeth and William Riker, jr., of Orange, delegates to the St. Louis convention. The resolutions were characterless and contained no financial or tariff planks.

Prohibition Delegates Elected.

Baltimore, April 24.—The prohibition state convention yesterday afternoon at Hazazer's hall elected twenty-two delegates to the national convention of the party, which will meet at Pittsburg, May 27, and instructed them for Joshua Levering for president.

QUAY MEN JUBILANT

Their Victory at Harrisburg Yesterday Was Decisive.

THE M'KINLEY BOOMERS SHUT OUT

The Senator the First and Only Choice of the Delegates to St. Louis—Platform for Gold and Protection.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 24.—This city has again assumed its tranquility, the many republican politicians brought here yesterday from all parts of the state by the republican state convention having taken their departure, the Quay men in high spirits over the defeat of the McKinley forces. The impetus Senator Quay's boom received was of a strong character. His adherents controlled the convention by a ratio of 3 to 1, and a desperate effort made to have McKinley endorsed as the second choice failed by a vote of ayes, 65; nays, 178, after a stormy scene. The convention re-elected Senator Quay as state chairman and elected the following as presidential electors-at-large: Joseph Wharton, Philadelphia; Alex. E. Patton, Clearfield; William Witherow, Allegheny, and Peter L. Kimberly, Mercer. The delegates-at-large to the national convention were chosen as follows: Governor D. H. Hastings, James Elverson, Philadelphia; Frank J. Torrence, Allegheny; James S. Beacom, Westmoreland; T. L. Flood, Crawford; Joseph Bosler, Montgomery; W. W. Greist, Lancaster; F. H. Barker, Cambria. The alternates-at-large are: Charles A. Miner, Luzerne; State Senator Boies Penrose, Philadelphia; State Senator Arthur Kennedy, Allegheny; State Senators J. M. McCarrell, Dauphin; Frank E. Holler, Cumberland; Charles W. Miller, Venango; James B. Raymond, Blair; Charles M. Plank, Berks. Samuel A. Davenport, Erie, and Galusha A. Grow, Susquehanna, the present incumbents, were nominated as congressmen-at-large by acclamation.

McKinley Boom Turned Down.

Every mention of Quay's name was the cause of the most vociferous applause. The most interesting incident of the convention, and a most exciting one, occurred late in the afternoon after Senator Quay had been endorsed for the presidency, and when congressman John R. Robinson of Delaware county endeavored to put through a resolution favoring McKinley as the second choice. The endorsement of Quay is contained in the first plank of the platform, and the McKinley resolution read thus: "In the event of the retirement of the Pennsylvania candidate for president endorsed this day, Hon. Matthew Stanley Quay, after all honorable means have been exhausted to promote his nomination, the delegates at large from this state are hereby instructed to vote for and support the candidacy of the Napoleon of protection and advance agent of prosperity, Hon. William McKinley of Ohio." The introduction of the resolution created a furore. Cries of "Quay!" "Quay!" filled the air, and Chairman Mylin tried in vain to restore order. The outcome of the tumultuous affair was the rejection of the McKinley amendment by a vote of 65 ayes to 178 nays.

Main Points in the Platform.

The platform adopted endorses Senator Quay for the nomination for president, declares for a gold standard, protection to American industries and reciprocity. In part, the platform says: "The time has come when the state which has so long and faithfully led the republican column may justly and properly submit its own preference for the republican nomination for the presidency. In the presentation of the Hon. Matthew Stanley Quay the republicans, not alone of Pennsylvania, but of the entire union, will recognize one of their foremost leaders, wise in council and brilliant and able in action, at once the type of the American citizen, scholar, soldier and statesman. First of all national issues stands protection and first among its advocates have been the republicans of Pennsylvania. We believe in protection as a right to all American industries, but as a special favor to none. It should be neither partial, sectional, nor hypocritical, and should be as nearly as possible equal and universal. We are not pledged to any schedules, but we demand a restoration of the policy of protection. We demand the restoration of that wise policy of reciprocity which was framed by James G. Blaine and adopted by the wise and beneficent administration of President Harrison. Faithful to its record, believing that the people are entitled to the use of the best money, and anxious to restore and preserve the industrial and commercial prosperity of the union, the republican party favors international bimetalism, and until that can be established upon a secure basis opposes the coinage of silver, except upon government account, and demands the maintenance of the existing gold standard of value." A series of seven reform bills prepared by Pittsburg leaders and four prepare by a Philadelphia committee were presented. They referred to reforms in civil service and election methods.

GET WELL AND STAY WELL.

Get Rid of What Makes You Sick and Stay Rid of It.

It is so simple to be well that we wonder why there are so many sick people.

Come to think about it, must be because they don't know what made them sick.

If they knew that, they would prevent it, and when they were sick, in some cases, in some cases cure themselves. But, so long as we don't take more care of our health, we shall always be more or less sick.

The simple rules of health are: Keep clean, take exercise, eat good food, scour out your stomach.

This last means: Don't tolerate indigestion. Cure it with Shaker Digestive Cordial. A stomach full of undigested, fermented, putrid food is the unhealthiest thing you can think of.

Half our diseases and troubles come from the poisons of undigested food. More than half of them could be cured with Shaker Digestive Cordial.

More than half, because often when we think we are sick we are only weak, and a course of nourishing food digested without effort by the stomach (with the aid of Shaker Digestive Cordial) would reinvigorate the whole system and make us well.

A ten cent trial bottle will prove it. At druggists.

A GREAT BATTLESHIP

Massachusetts May Prove Herself a Marvel To-morrow.

EXPECTED TO MAKE SIXTEEN KNOTS

From the Vessel's Performance on Her Preliminary Spin the Builders Feel Confident of Winning $100,000 Premium on Her.

Boston, April 24.—Those who were in charge of the battleship Massachusetts on her preliminary run by the builders over the official course yesterday are confident that she will make a full sixteen knots on her official trial to-morrow and earn her builders a bonus of $100,000. This opinion is based on the satisfactory performance of the vessel yesterday. The ship was speeded for a little less than two hours and in that time she averaged 15.59 knots an hour, which is .59 of a knot above her contract speed. It was a perfect spring day when the Massachusetts headed down the bay for the open sea, but there was a heavy swell rolling in from the ocean. This swell soon made itself apparent to those aboard the ship. Several sailors were forward securing the anchors. The Massachusetts poked her nose into a roller and a small sea broke over the bows. This was followed an instant later by a torrent of white-crested foaming water, which swept the men at work along the deck like nine pins. All but one of them escaped with a good drenching, but one sailor was thrown against an anchor fluke and his leg was badly cut.

Plunged into Head Seas.

The vessel plunged continually under water. Two sailors were sent forward to cover the ventilators with tarpaulins, as the lower deck was being flooded out. While they were tying the canvas around the ventilators a particularly big sea came over the bow. As the wall of water came at them both men hung on for their lives. The sea lifted them from their feet and swung them into the air. Both had a good grip, one on a ventilator and the other on a backstay, and they held on until the sea dropped them back on the deck, when one of the men was dashed with such force upon the planks that his ankle was sprained. It was necessary to bring the vessel broadside on to the surge before the ventilators could be secured. After the Massachusetts got out to sea the swell was not so heavy, but, nevertheless, the surge was big enough to materially reduce the speed of the ship. Despite the heavy swell the Massachusetts hardly rolled at sea and proved that she is an excellent gun platform. The engines during the run worked splendidly.

PLEASURE YACHT WRECKED.

Four Passengers and a Crew of Three Men Believed To Be Lost.

Galveston, Tex., April 24.—At a point in the Gulf of Mexico between here and Tampico the wreck of a pleasure yacht is reported floating. On board the yacht, it is said, were four young men and a crew consisting of a captain, mate and cook. The yacht was out on a pleasure cruise and it is supposed that she capsized and that all hands were drowned, as two of her lifeboats were seen later floating bottom up. How the disaster occurred is not known here.

AFFAIRS IN THE SENATE.

Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill and Cuban Resolution To-day.

Washington, April 24.—The senate is to-day considering the sundry civil appropriation bill. There are five other general appropriation bills to be acted on by the senate—the naval, the river and harbor, the District of Columbia, the fortifications, and the deficiency. Senator Call's joint resolution directing the president to send war vessels to Cuba will probably be called up for consideration this afternoon, that senator having given notice to that effect.

May Escape Death Penalty.

Paterson, N. J., April 24.—Daniel Ackerman, who was to have been hanged to-day for the murder of his wife, Mary, on the morning of June 11, 1895, at Smiths Mills in the upper part of Passaic county, is resting comfortably over the prospect of having his sentence changed to life imprisonment. The case has been taken to the supreme court on a writ of error, and the argument for a new trial will take place on the first Monday in June. Ackerman's counsel thinks that his client will escape the death penalty.

To Investigate Consulates in Mexico.

New York, April 24.—Robert S. Chilton, chief of the consular bureau, state department, Washington, will sail today from this port for Tampico, Mexico, via Havana, to investigate consulates in Mexico, and it is said his visit to Havana has nothing to do with the Cuban situation, but is made necessary by the itinerary arranged for the steamer. During the coming summer Mr. Chilton will visit Europe and Canada on similar basiness.

No Raines Law Amendments.

Albany, April 24.—Senator Higgins said to-day that no amendments to the Raines liquor tax law would be introduced this session. A bill embracing several amendments had been prepared for introduction, but the democratic senators will not accept the amendments without discussion, so the republicans will offer no amendments to the law.

Increased Its Capital Stock.

Albany, April 24.—The United Globe Mines of New York city has filed with the secretary of state a certificate increasing its capital stock from $500,000 to $1,300,000.

AMERICA'S TRIBUTE.

Unveiling of the Shakespeare Memorial Window at Stratford-on-Avon.

Stratford-on-Avon, April 24.—The third and last day of the Shakespeare celebration at this beautiful little town, the birthplace of the great poet, was the occasion of great festivity. The inhabitants turned out in holiday attire, the streets, which were brilliantly decorated with American and British flags, were crowded with vistors. The United States ambassador, Mr. Bayard, and his wife and daughter, in company with George F. Parker of New York, the United States consul at Birmingham, were present, as were also a number of members of the Players' club of New York. A vast crowd witnessed the unveiling of the window in the Shakespeare church. The money for the window was contributed by American visitors to the church. Mr. Bayard drove to the church accompanied by Lord Lehigh, the lord lieutenant of Warwickshire, and when the United States ambassador entered the edifice "Hail Columbia" was played upon the organ. The church was densely crowded and the ceremony was most impressive. Mr. Bayard, during the course of a long literary effort referred to the special significance given to the present commemoration by America's tribute, pointing out the timeliness of the gift as containing in the recognition of Shakespeare a common bond of feeling and sympathy. There were no decorations in the church except a magnificent wreath of laurel and lilies which was placed upon the poet's tomb. Vicar Arbuthnot then made a speech describing the window, after which Mr. Bayard was escorted to a raised dais in the south transept. There he pulled the cord of the curtain covering the beautiful window and the American memorial to Shakespeare was unveiled.

Present from American Actors.

The most interesting ceremony of Shakespeare Day took place in the Shakespeare Memorial theatre last evening when United States Consul Parker presented to the theatre and museum a portrait of Edwin Booth as "Hamlet," on behalf of the Players' club of New York, founded and endowed by Mr. Booth.

Shakespeare Day at Holmesburg.

Philadelphia, April 24.—Shakespeare Day, the anniversary of the Bard of Avon, was celebrated in the most interesting manner at the Forest Home, Holmesburg, last evening. An admirable programme for the occasion had been arranged by theatrical manager J. Fred Zimmerman, with the able cooperation of Joseph Jefferson, Creston Clarke, William Gillette and other well-known players. A large number of invited guests were present. After several songs and recitations the third and fourth acts of Hamlet were given, followed by singing, recitations and orchestral music.

CORBETT AND FITZSIMMONS.

Dan Stuart Endeavoring to Bring the Pugilists Together Next Fall.

New York, April 24.—Dan A. Stuart, the Texas projector of fistic sport, who has been in New York for the past month arranging his plans to bring Corbett and Fitzsimmons together in the ring sometime this fall, has invited the two boxers or their representatives to met him at the office of a sporting paper in this city at noon Saturday to consider his proposition and sign articles of agreement. Stuart will offer a purse of $12.000 for a glove contest to be held sometime during November, and will guarantee to furnish a battle-ground where a fight can be held without interference, or forfeit the entire purse to the principals. He will post one-third of the amount of the purse when the articles are signed and the balance on September 15, when a meeting will be held for the purpose of selecting a referee and final stakeholder. Billy Brady, who is looking after Corbett's interests, received a telegram from the latter authorizing him to sign Stuart's articles without question, and deposit any forfeits that may be required. Brady said that he would be on hand prepared to do business.

Money and Hall Will Be Called to the Bar of the House.

HOW THE FIGHT ORIGINATED

All the Result, It is Believed, of a Misunderstanding — Money's Injuries Serious, But in No Way Dangerous.

Washington, April 24.—It is believed that the trouble between Congressmen Money and Hall, during which the former was severely cut but not dangerously injured by an inkstand thrown by Hall, was caused by a misunderstanding. The row, which occurred in the room of the committee on naval affairs, was witnessed by but a few other members of the committee and they are very reticent concerning the affair. Money has been informed by his physician that he will be able to resume his duties in two or three days, but cautioned him to take care not to catch cold in the wound, which is about half an inch long and a quarter of an inch deep, directly over the left eye. It is considered probable that both men will be called upon to explain their conduct before the bar of the house. From what can be learned of the fight, it appears that during a discussion in the committee room of a bill designed to promote the efficiency of the engineer corps of the navy an anonymous letter severely criticizing the measure was read by Mr. Hall, who said that persons who would make the statements contained in it would say what was not true. Mr. Money, who is opposed to the bill, evidently construed this remark as applying to himself, for he arose to his feet and, looking squarely at Mr. Hall, exclaimed: "You're a liar!" Hall said he allowed no man to characterize him in that manner, and, rising to his feet, started around the committee table to meet Money, who advanced in Hall's direction. A moment later Hall picked up a heavy glass inkstand and hurled it with great violence, striking Money on the head above the left eye. Money retaliated by throwing another inkstand at Hall. It passed harmlessly over Hall's head, but barely escaped striking Mr. Wilson, another member of the committee. At this juncture other members of the committee, assisted by the messenger of the committee, separated the combatants, and Money, who was bleeding profusely from his wound, was taken down stairs. A physician was then summoned, the gash was dressed, and the injured congressman was driven to his hotel in a carriage. Besides the gash over his eye, Money's face and hands were scratched in several places by broken glass.

NEW MAP OF ARCTIC REGIONS.

Progress of Discoveries Marked Out by the Hydrographic Office.

Washington, April 24.—The recent revival of interest in Arctic explorations, through the unfounded Nansen rumors, has caused the naval hydrographic office to issue, under the direction of Commander Bigsbee, chief hydrographer, a carefully prepared map of the Arctic regions, with the progress of discovery compiled from the latest information. The tracks of seventy-six expeditions are given, beginning with that of Sir John Franklin in 1845 and ending with Peary's in 1895. Nansen's route in 1893 is also given.

Sealing Steamers Crushed by Ice.

St. Johns, N. F., April 24.—The sealing steamers Panther, Ranger and Diana have arrived, all fairly fished. The Panther was badly crushed in the ice and had an almost providential escape. The Ranger is little better than a sieve. Her crew were kept pumping day and night. She was nipped so severely that her deck beams are badly smashed. The Diana is also badly damaged.

Worcester's New City Hall.

Worcester, Mass., April 24.—The city hall commission has awarded the contract for building the new city hall to Norcross Bros. of this city. Their bid was the lowest, $470,761. The building must be ready for occupancy January 1, 1898.

Lee's Nomination Confirmed.

After all, Louisiana shows up well with 23,000 plurality for the Democratic candidate for Governor.

Ex-Judge William B. Rankin, of Jersey City, died yesterday. He was an ardent Democrat and was well known throughout the country.

If Pennsylvania ruled the roost Senator Quay would be the next President, for the Keystone Republican State convention yesterday declared their sentiment to be such.

Advertising will not make a fortune for you in a day, but if done judiciously, it will pay handsomely in the long run. If the business is of a kind that can be profitably increased, it will pay to advertise it.—Charles Austin Bates.

Two Congressmen fought yesterday in the National capitol. Ink bottles, pen-holders, and various other such articles were the weapons. The oddest part of the affair is that both are Southern gentlemen, where honor and pistols go hand in hand, figuratively speaking.

If it is true that the bicycle manufacturers are forming a trust, they must indeed want the earth. Comparing the cost of labor and material in a bicycle with the price that has to be paid for it, it would seem as if the manufacturers must be already riding on the top wave of opulence.—Newark News.

The rank and file of the New Jersey Republicans may favor McKinley for the Presidential candidate, but it is evident that the leaders are for some other man, judging from the action of the State and the Eighth District Congressional conventions. There is a growing idea that Harrison is regarded favorably by the New Jersey bosses.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company has at last struck a spurt. The road is to be extended to New Market. The distance is only about three miles, but it is something. If Plainfield does not stir itself the Brunswick Traction Company will get into that town some fine morning, and folks will be coming over here to shop before summer is half over. Keep your eye on New Brunswick.—New Brunswick Home News.

All of the above sounds very nicely to the ears of those who live in the rickety old Dutch town. Plainfield is not worrying, however, over an rash enterprise from her sleepy neighbor in Middlesex.

After all the efforts of those who have an eye for rugged and natural beauty to preserve the Palisades from destruction, by having the Government establish a military and National park thereon, it seems probable that the proposition will be defeated in Congress. Senator Sewell says that New Jersey should take steps to acquire the Palisades, and thus show to the country that it is desirous of preserving the magnificent region from the quarry vandals who are engaged in despoiling it.

It was a compliment which Somerset Republicans can appreciate for the State Convention, last week, to name Charles A. Reed for an alternate atlarget o the St. Louis convention. It shows that they realized the snub given to the Somerset delegation at the New Brunswick convention the previous week. The nomination came from away down in Atlantic county, and all the other counties followed suit. Even Monmouth and Middlesex fell in line, evidently ashamed of their action the previous week. Assembly man Reed's popularity in the House last winter is attested by this unanimous support given him by the convention. He made a good legislator and had influence among the members.—Unionist-Gazette.

"Pure and Sure."

Cleveland's BAKING POWDER

"Finding Cleveland's baking powder to be really the best, I recommended it in Common Sense in the Household and now use it exclusively." May 5, 1894.

MARION HARLAND, Author of "Common Sense in the Household."

THEATRICAL.

Mr. Russ Whytal whose successful romance of the south "For Fair Virginia," which will invite pleasure at Music Hall tonight, while not extremely well-known as an author, is nevertheless familiar to patrons of the playhouse the country over. He has frequently appeared in this city in the most exacting roles, as a conspicuous member of numerous high class attractions and his work has invariably made a more than favorable impression. For a period of five years Mr. Whytal was prominently identified with the famous Boston Museum Stock Company, where he had ample opportunities to master the art of stagecraft, which in his present venture has enabled him to provide a thoroughly interesting play, without resorting to sensational methods for dramatic effect. In "For Fair Virginia" the author, contrary to precedent, assumes the character of the villain and entrusts all the more congenial parts to actors whose reputations have been firmly established in certain lines of work. This is highly commendable and proves that Mr. Whytal is quite willing to make any sacrifice in order to further the best interests of his excellent play.

The last performances of the first season of David Belasco's "The Heart of Maryland," confessedly the most potent drama, the native stage has offered within fifteen years, are announced at the Herald Square theatre. This is a timely word of admonition to the busy, indifferent and careless playgoer. No one who finds a spark of diversion in stage recreation can afford to neglect this play. For more than seven months now it has continuously thronged the auditorium of one of the biggest and most fashionable of metropolitan playhouses. Aside from the pulsing passion of its story of man's devotion and woman's sacrifice; irrespective of its brilliant ensemble of masterly characterizations, and without consideration of the charm and power of Mrs. Leslie Carter's engaging portraiture of Maryland Calvert, this drama commands enthuiasm by the perfection and fascination of its stage pictures. In what other play of recent years has the poetry which is a part of all of us been appealed to as in the scene of "The Lilacs," with its shadows trellised with wisteria, its rear pinked with blooming orchards and its either side flanked with greening melon patches. Then, again, the instruction of the scene that follows, showing the interior of this Maryland homestead under the awful discipline of one of the mightiest conflicts that ever proved a nation's valor.

PARK AVENUE TO BE MACADAMIZED.

The Ante-Election Poster Promises Soon to Be Made Good.

A long-suffering public will be glad to learn that Park avenue between Front street and the railroad bridge is to be repaired. Those who ride on wheels have become almost exasperated, as they have not only had their wheels racked, but their bones also. Their minds have wandered back to the recent local election, when flaming posters urged all to vote for good roads, and they have wondered as to whether it was not all a dream. But e change is in sight and everybody will be delighted to know that Park avenue, between the above points. is to be torn up and a fine macadam road will take the place of the present condition of the avenue. Other streets in the city will receive attention as soon as possible.

Unwelcome Picnickers.

Companies of Polish Jews have visited Westfield on picnic excursions for the past three Sundays, and have occupied the barn on the Renney farm as their headquarters. The excursionists numbered about forty last Sunday, and the people in that part of the town have asked the authorities to forbid the practice. Constable Marsh will be on hand Sunday and see that they transfer the scene of their festivities.

Danced the Night Away.

A very pleasant social was given last evening in honor of Miss Mollie Noel, of 446 West Second street. It was arranged by George Schaefer and there were about fifty couples present, who danced the hours away to to the excellent music furnished by Frazee. The affair broke up about 3 o'clock.

COULD NOT INDORSE M'KINLEY.

Rules Kept Out a Resolution in the Orange Convention.

In the Eighth Congressional District Republican Convention in Orange yesterday afternoon there was a fight over the question of passing the rules offered by the committee, which required all resolutions to be sent to the committee on resolutions without debate. There were some Republicans present who wanted to get in a resolution indorsing McKinley. The matter was fought vigorously by Charles C. Corwin, of this city, and George P. Edgar, of Rahway, and the ruling of the chair was appealed from. This was that the resolution could not come up while the report of the committee on rules was being considered.

Then an effort was made to get McKinley's name before the convention by offering the resolution as an amendment to the report of the committee on resolutions. At the mention of the name the house went wild, but under the rules the amendment was declared out of order.

The main fight for delegates was between Thomas Oakes, of Bloomfield, and Wm. Riker, Jr., of Orange. Riker won on the first formal ballot, the other delegate being Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth. The alternates are Charles W. Fuller, of Bayonne City, and Chas. J. Fisk, of this city. The resolutions had no financial or tariff clause.

—Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., holds a meeting tonight at which a committee will be appointed to take charge of the district meeting to be held here next week.

Master Frank Whitely, son of Frank Whitely, of Steiner place, is seriously ill with the measles.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

An enjoyable musicale and reception was held last evening in Excelsior hall, Scotch Plains, by Excelsior Hook and Ladder company, No. 1, of that place. The hall was filled to its utmost, every seat being occupied and even standing room was utilized, but the fact that many had to stand throughout did not seem to concern them, for the excellent programme rendered was a pleasing diversion from weariness. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion with flags and bunting and the stage presented a very pleasant and charming scene, as it was, set about by large banquet lamps which cast a mild glow of light over the surroundings. The profuse display of choice flowers also helped to enhance the scene and cast a balmy fragrance on the atmosphere.

The programme, which proved such a delightful and entertaining one, was opened with a selection by an orchestra under the direction of Prof. Guttman, of Plainfield. Next came a selection by the Columbia quartette, of New York, which was composed of Messrs. Clarence E. Cree, first tenor; Spencer P. Smith, second tenor; Arthur T. Pendleton, first bass; Thomas A. Doe, second bass; and their selection was entitled "Jenks Vegetable Compound." They were forced to respond with an encore. Piano solos by Miss Caroline S. Simpson came next and were entitled "March of the Dwarfs," and "Deux Valses." Next came a tenor solo by Spencer Smith, entitled, "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," accompanied on the piano by Miss Smith. The applause which followed shook the building and an encore followed. A recitation which kept the audience in a constant roar of laughter came next and was entitled "Miss O'Mulligan Takes a Bicycle Ride," by Miss M. C. Adams. The piece called for a fluent use of Irish dialect, but the speaker was equal to the occasion and was forced to respond with an encore. Part first concluded with a selection by the quartette, entitled, "When I Was a Little Boy." The rendition was applauded to the echo and an encore followed.

Part second was opened by a delightful baritone solo by Arthur Pendleton, entitled, "Because I Love You, Dear," and was forced to respond with an encore. Next came a recitation by Miss Adams, entitled, "Our Travelled Parson." Encored. The quartette again favored with a selection entitled "Annie Laurie." Encored. A piano solo by Miss Simpson came next and was rendered with that grace and skill that is only commanded by one who is thoroughly familar with the keyboard. Next came one of the most delightful selections of the evening, a tenor solo by Clarence Cree, entitled, "Childrens Home." Mr. Cree responded with an encore. A selection by the quartette entitled, "A Fathers Lullaby," was then rendered and encored, which closed the programme.

At the conclusion of the programme the hall was cleared for dancing which continued until long after midnight to the music of Prof. Guttman's orchestra. Refreshments were served while the dancing was in progress.

The committee in charge who deserve much praise for their efforts in making the affair the success that it was, consisted of C. W. Brown, chairman; Charles French and Mr. Van Valkenburg, general committee; and Charles Faxton, William Hazel and T. M. Collins, floor committee and ushers.

TROPICAL EARTHQUAKE.

Hairbreadth Escape of Two Americans from Death.

Terrible Experience in the Volcanic Virgin Islands—A Whole Island Shattered and Almost Submerged by These Terrible Visitations.

[Special Kingston (Jamaica) Letter.]

There is probably no phenomenal manifestation of nature's supreme power on the earth more awful and terrorizing to man and beast alike than the earthquake. Thunder and lightning are common; of the tornado and even the volcanic eruption one has some warning and the consolation of the excitement of fleeing for safety. The earthquake is rare; it comes upon you suddenly, with an overwhelming roar and rush that paralyzes the faculties, and you can do nothing but stand where you are—or more frequently lie where you are thrown—until it is over or you are swallowed by the yawning earth or drowned by the advancing sea wave.

My life has been one of active movement, mostly in far-away, wild lands, where earth's reserve store houses of mineral wealth do mostly lie; and it has naturally been interspersed with more or less thrilling adventure. But of all my experience "not on the programme" my first earthquake easily makes the best assay for horror and utter dismay. I have felt many since, and tolerably severe ones, too, in Chili and Peru, but none quite came up to the standard of that in the system of the Central American volcanic belt, the story of which I am about to relate.

I had been detailed by our syndicate to go down to look after some mines in Venezuela. En route I was to stop off at St. Thomas and proceed to Virgin Gorda, one of the larger Virgin islands, to examine and report on a copper mine of alleged enormous value that was in the market by order of the British court of chancery. I was to stop at Tortola to present my credentials to the governor, or "president," who centered in himself all the local authority of the little archipelago colony, and obtain permission to explore the property. This was done, in due course, and I further received permission to occupy part of Cooper hall, the residence of the mine managers and officers when the mine which was now abandoned was being worked. It was a kindly concession, as I found on arrival, but it might have cost me my life and that of my ten-year-old son, who accompanied me.

Leaving the long and straggling, and withal desolate but preeminently picturesque "capital," Road Town, behind us, we started on the final stage of our trip early one mid-winter morning, in a climate like unto that of our northern Indian summer; a cloudless gray sky, fast deepening into azure, arching overhead, and a sparkling expanse of wave-flecked sea spreading away before us until at the horizon it merged invisibly into the sky line. But at first the horizon was seen only in sections, for to the eastward lay a long chain of some of the smaller "Virgins," half a dozen of them, that had to be passed ere we gained the open sea and bore away for our destination, which lay 20-odd miles off to the north and east.

Soon we were skimming along the chain, which rose, gaunt and arid, elevated, rugged, rocky, precipitous and deep-caverned, from the blue depths of the ocean. Quite waterless, not a trace of verdure except cacti and some species of marine scrub could be seen on their slopes. Yet fishing hamlets were to be seen at intervals, and innumerable goats bounded along the ragged ridges. The scene was too novel, however, not to be attractive; and its monotony was easily escaped by looking westward at the superb spectacle of the towering, verdant heights, cloud-capped and glittering in the level morning sun rays of the larger islands of Tortola, Jost Van Dyke and St. John, which overlapped one the other in exquisite gradations of green and gray and purple coloring.

WENT DOWN LIKE A CARD HOUSE.

But soon we were plunging amid the choppy waves of the open Caribbean, that made my boy sicker than did the long, sweeping rollers of the Atlantic. It was a tropical meridian sun that now beat on us from the same unclouded sky, and whose rays intensified the discomfort of the stinging saline spray that ever flecked our hands and faces. So that we were glad when the evening brought us under the northern cliffs of Virgin Gorda, and our shallop ran through a turmoil of reef-broken waters into a land-locked bay, crowning whose precipitous bluff stood the palatial pile of buildings called Copper hall.

Within a week my work was done. The mine promised a bonanza, indeed—but the report I was destined to make proved as sensational as it was disappointing. My traps had already gone down to the village on the leeward coast, and we, my son and I, were to sleep there also so as to make an early or "foreday" start for St. Thomas. It was yet early afternoon, about four o'clock, and preparatory to the ride across the island we had been for a last dip in the cool and inviting waters of the bay under Mine hill bluff.

As we gained the edge of the cliff fronting the hall a stallion—a savage brute with which I had already had trouble—came snorting around the hill inclosure, full tilt at us. There was no escape from his furious charge other than by climbing on some huge bowlders that dangerously overhung the precipice. This I succeeded in doing, only to find that the snorting was not from the animal and that he was not now enraged, but overcome with terror. Ere we were seated on the rock the "snorting" had waxed to a terrific roar that filled the air. The horse, unable to go farther, sidled up to the rock as though seeking human companionship; with my outstretched hand I patted his erected head, and he whinnied in the most friendly manner.

The rumbling roar continued till, as it were, its very vibrations shook the earth and made the bowlders oscillate. Then came a crashing shock that seemed to shake the whole island, and instinctively I knew that it was an earthquake. Another, heavier, longer shock, and the sparkling waters of the bay clouded like a mirror that is breathed upon, and the gentle waves on a sudden began to rage as under the impetus of some submarine force. One or two fishing boats that were running in were instantly swamped. As I gazed horror-stricken on this scene, watching the ineffectual struggles of the doomed men, a crashing sound from inland not of the earthquake attracted my attention, and I looked behind just in time to see the entire mass of stone buildings go down like a card house! In a moment it seemed as though literally not one stone was left on the other. Even the lookout tower, a heavy granite affair, split down and broke across, the top part plunging to the ground. Completer ruin I never witnessed.

But the worst was to come. Whilst I gazed at the falling pile a third shock rent the earth. So severe was this that the bowlder actually started in its bed, almost precipitating us off it. Clasping the boy securely to my side, I glanced seaward—and then sat spellbound, fairly paralyzed with terror. For a gigantic wave was advancing up the bay, its curving cavity black and ominous, its foam-fringed crest towering with a luster yet more ominous, fully a hundred feet above the level. With a roar like a thousand elephants it burst along the cliffs and came rushing over the land.

Perched high up on the rock as we were, my son and I were only drenched and almost smothered in the cataract of spume that flew over us; but the powerful horse was swept from his feet and borne along like a log. At this moment a fourth shock shook the island, and a curious thing occurred. As I dashed the spray from my eyes I noticed that the wave was receding—sucked back by a great whirlpool that had formed in the bay. Presently with a mighty roar a vast column of water was projected from the mine shaft, charged with earth, rocks, fishes and other debris.

Now, in very truth, I felt that death was nigh. That last shock had rent the island through its base, and I momentarily expected to find it crumbling into the sea! Clasping my son yet closer to me, I lay back awaiting the end. But it had already come. The earthquake's work was done there, and it had passed on to the south. Even so far as it went, however, it was terribly complete work. The island was shattered in every direction and its springs almost entirely dried up.

It lasted only ten minutes altogether—but another such terror-filled experience I hope never to pass through.

T. P. PORTER.

Formidable Engine of Death.

Eugene Paul Brand has just submitted a fearful weapon to the German minister of war. It puts all inventions in the sphere of death-dealing instruments in the shade. The Brand contrivance is a gun, which is not loaded with powder, but with compressed gas. A single charge will suffice for 2,500 shots, and volleys of 50 shots each can be fired in rapid succession. This Brand-new invention is one of the numerous and improved methods of killing people that advanced civilization is now demanding. His activity in destroying human lives will doubtless win for him a monument.

starving children
There are children without food. They cry for it, and are not answered. The pity of it! But often nature cries out in other ways that her children need nourishment. Is your child thin; actually poor in flesh? Does it get no benefit from its food? Then give something which produces flesh and makes rich blood.
Scott's Emulsion
of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites does more than this. It changes the unhealthy action to one of health, thus removing the cause. It acts on the nervous system, which controls all the processes of the body, toning it up into sound and vigorous activity. It is food for growing bone and brain. It makes the thin plump; the pale, ruddy; the weak, strong; it feeds and cures.
SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.
Put up in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby. All druggists.

The House of the Wolf

BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN

WITH PICTURES BY FRANK VERBECK.

I thanked him with a heartiness, half-earnest, half-assumed. His cloak was ragged, his trunk hose, which had been fine enough, were stained, and almost pointless. He swaggered inimitably, and had led-captain written large upon him. But he had done us a service, for Jean had no further trouble about the horses. And besides one has a natural liking for a brave man, and this man was brave beyond question.

"You are from Orleans," he said, respectfully enough, but as one asserting a fact, not asking a question.

"Yes," I answered, somewhat astonished. "Did you see us come in?"

"No, but I looked at your boots, gentlemen," he replied. "White dust, north; red dust, south. Do you see?"

"Yes, I see," I said, with admiration. "You must have been brought up in a sharp school, M. Bure."

"Sharp masters make sharp scholars," he replied, grinning. And that answer I had occasion to remember afterwards.

"You are from Orleans, also?" I asked, as we prepared to go in.

"Yes, from Orleans, too, gentlemen. But earlier in the day. With letters—letters of importance!" And bestowing something like a wink of confidence on us, he drew himself up, looked sternly at the stable folk, patted himself twice on the chest, and finally twirled his mustaches, and smirked at the girl above, who was chewing straws.

I thought it likely enough that we might find it hard to get rid of him. But this was not so. After listening with gratification to our repeated thanks, he bowed with the same grotesque flourish, and marched off as grave as a Spaniard, humming:

"Ce petit homme tant joli!
Qui toujours cause et toujours rit,
Qui toujours baise sa mignonne,
Dieu gard' de mal ce petit homme!"

On our going in, the landlord met us politely, but with curiosity, and a simmering of excitement also in his manner. "From Paris, my lords?" he asked, rubbing his hands and bowing low. "Or from the south?"

"From the south," I answered. "From Orleans, and hungry and tired, Master Host."

"Ah," he replied, disregarding the latter part of my answer, while his little eyes twinkled with satisfaction. "Then I dare swear, my lords, you have not heard the news?" He halted in the narrow passage, and lifting the candle he carried, scanning our faces closely, as if he wished to learn something about us before he spoke.

"News!" I answered, brusquely, being both tired and, as I had told him, hungry. "We have heard none, and the best you can give us will be that our supper is ready to be served."

But even this snub did not check his eagerness to tell us the news. "Admiral de Coligny," he said, breathlessly, "you have not heard what has happened to him?"

"To the admiral? No, what?" I inquired, rapidly. I was interested at last.

For a moment let me digress. The few of my age will remember, and the many younger will have been told, that at this time the Italian queen-mother was the ruling power in France. It was Catherine de Medici's first object to maintain her influence over Charles IX.—her son; who, rickety, weak and passionate, was already doomed to an early grave. Her second, to support the royal power by balancing the extreme Catholics against the Huguenots. For the latter purpose she would coquette first with one party, then with the other. At the present moment she had committed herself more deeply than was her wont to the Huguenots. Their leaders, Admiral Gaspard de Coligny, the king of Navarre and the prince of Conde, were supposed to be high in favor, while the chiefs of the other party, the duke of Guise and the two cardinals of his house, the cardinal of Lorraine and the cardinal of Guise, were in disgrace; which, as it seemed, even their friend at court, the queen's favorite son, Henry of Anjou, was unable to overcome.

Such was the outward aspect of things in August, 1572, but there were not wanting rumors that already Coligny, taking advantage of the footing given him, had gained an influence over the young king, which threatened Catherine de Medici herself. The admiral, therefore, to whom the Huguenot half of France had long looked as to its leader, was now the object of the closest interest to all; the Guise faction, hating him—as the alleged assassin of the duke of Guise—with an intensity which probably was not to be found in the affection of his friends, popular with the latter as he was.

Still, many who were not Huguenots had a regard for him as a great Frenchman and a gallant soldier. We—though we were of the old faith, and the other side—had heard much of him, and much good. The vicomte had spoken of him always as a great man, a man mistaken, but brave, honest and capable in his error. Therefore it was that when the landlord mentioned him, I forgot even my hunger.

"He was shot, my lords, as he passed through the Rue des Fosses, yesterday," the man declared, with bated breath. "It is not known whether he will live or die. Paris is in an uproar, and there are some who fear the worst."

"But," I said, doubtfully, "who has dared to do this? He had a safe conduct from the king himself."

Our host did not answer; shrugging his houlders instead, he opened the door and ushered us into the eating-room.

Some preparations for our meal had already been made at one end of the long board. At the other was seated a man past middle age, richly but simply dressed. His gray hair, cut short about a massive head, and his grave, resolute face, square-jawed and deeply-lined, marked him as one to whom respect was due apart from his clothes. We bowed to him as we took our seats.

He acknowledged the salute, fixing us a moment with a penetrating glance; and then resumed his meal. I noticed that his sword and belt were propped against a chair at his elbow, and a dag, apparently loaded, lay close to his hand by the candlestick. Two lackeys waited behind his chair, wearing the badge we had remarked in the inn yard.

We began to talk, speaking in low tones that we might not disturb him. The attack on Coligny had, if true, its bearing on our own business. For if a Huguenot so great and famous and enjoying the king's special favor still went in Paris in danger of his life, what must be the risk that such an one as Pavannes ran? We had hoped to find the city quiet. If instead it should be in a state of turmoil Bezer's chances were so much the better; and ours—and Kit's, poor Kit's—so much the worse.

Our companion had by this time finished his supper. But he still sat at table, and seemed to be regarding us with some curiosity. At length he spoke. "Are you going to Paris, young gentlemen?" he asked, his tone harsh and high-pitched.

We answered in the affirmative. "To-morrow?" he questioned.

"Yes," we answered; and expected him to continue the conversation. But instead he became silent, gazing abstractedly at the table; and what with our meal and our own talk, we had almost forgotten him again, when, looking up, I found him at my elbow, holding out in silence a small piece of paper.

I started—his face was so grave. But, seeing that there were half a dozen guests of a meaner sort at another table close by, I guessed that he merely wished to make a private communication to us, and hastened to take the paper and read it. It contained a scrawl of four words only:

"Va chasser l'Idole."

No more. I looked at him, puzzled; able to make nothing out of it. St. Croix wrinkled his brow over it with the same result. It was no good handing it to Marie, therefore.

"You do not understand?" the stranger continued, as he put the scrap of paper back in his pouch.

"No," I answered, shaking my head. We had all risen out of respect to him, and were standing in a little group about him.

"Just so; it is all right, then," he answered, looking at us as it seemed to me with grave good nature. "It is nothing. Go your way. But—I have a son yonder not much younger than you, young gentlemen. And if you had understood I should have said to you: "Do not go! There are enough sheep for the shearer!"

He was turning away with this oracular saying when Croisette touched his sleeve. "I pray can you tell us if it be true," the lad said, eagerly, "that Admiral de Coligny was wounded yesterday?"

"It is true," the other answered, turning his grave eyes on his questioner, while for a moment his stern look failed him. "It is true, my boy," he added, with an air of strange solemnity. "Whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth. And, God forgive me for saying it, whom He would destroy, He first maketh mad."

He had gazed with peculiar favor at Croisette's girlish face, I thought; Marie and I were dark and ugly by the side of the boy. But he turned from him now with a queer, excited gesture, thumping his gold-headed cane on the floor. He called his servants in a loud, rasping voice, and left the room in seeming anger, driving them before him, the one carrying his dag, and the other two candles.

When I came down early next morning, the first person I met was Blaise Bure. He looked rather fiercer and more shabby by daylight than candlelight. But he saluted me respectfully; and this, since it was clear that he did not respect many people, inclined me to regard him with favor. It is always so, the more savage the dog, the more highly we prize its attentions. I asked him who the Huguenot noble was who had supped with us. For a Huguenot we knew he must be.

"Baron de Rosny," he answered; adding with a sneer: "He is a careful man! If they were all like him, with eyes on both sides of his head and a dag by his candle—well, my lord, there would be one more king in France—or one less! But they are a blind lot; as blind as bats." He muttered something farther in which I caught the word "to-night." But I did not hear it all; or understand any of it.

"Your lordships are going to Paris?" he resumed in a different tone. When I said that we were, he looked at me in a shamefaced way, half-timid, half-arrogant. "I have a small favor to ask of you then," he said. "I am going to Paris myself. I am not afraid of odds, as you have seen. But the roads will be in a queer state if there be anything on foot in the city, and—well, I would rather ride with you gentlemen than alone."

"You are welcome to join us," I said. "But we start in half an hour. Do you know Paris well?"

"As well as my sword hilt," he replied briskly, relieved I thought by my acquiescence. "And I have known that from my breeching. If you want a game at paume, or a pretty girl to kiss, I can put you in the way for the one or the other."

The half-rustic shrinking from the great city which I felt, suggested to me that our swash-buckling friend might help us if he would. "Do you know M. de Pavannes?" I asked, impulsively. "Where he lives in Paris, I mean?"

"M. Louis de Pavannes?" quoth he.

"Yes."

"I know," he replied slowly, rubbing his chin and looking at the ground in thought, "where he had his lodgings in town awhile ago, before— Ah! I do know! I remember," he added, slapping his thigh, "when I was in Paris a fortnight ago I was told that his steward had taken lodgings for him in the Rue St. Antoine."

"Good!" I answered, overjoyed. "Then we want to dismount there, if you can guide us straight to the house."

"I can," he replied simply. "And you will not be the worse for my company. Paris is a queer place when there is trouble to the fore, but your lordships have got the right man to pilot you through it."

I did not ask him what trouble he meant, but ran indoors to buckle on my sword, and tell Marie and Croisette of the ally I had secured. They were much pleased, as was natural; so that we took the road in excellent spirits intending to reach the city in the afternoon. But Marie's horse cast a shoe, and it was some time before we could find a smith. Then at Etampes, where we stopped to lunch, we were kept an unconscionable time waiting for it. And so we approached Paris for the first time at sunset. A ruddy glow was at the moment warming the eastern heights, and picking out with flame the twin towers of Notre Dame, and the one tall tower of St. Jacques la Boucherie. A dozen roofs higher than their neighbors shown hotly; and a great bank of cloud, which lay north and south, and looked like a man's hand stretched over the city, changed gradually from blood-red to violet, and from violet to black, as evening fell.

Passing within the gates and across first one bridge and then another, we were astonished and utterly confused by the noise and hubbub through which we rode. Hundreds seemed to be moving this way and that in the narrow streets. Women screamed to one another from window to window. The bells of half-a-dozen churches rang the curfew. Our country ears were deafened. Still our eyes had leisure to take in the tall houses with their high-pitched roofs, and here and there a tower built into the wall; the quaint churches, and the groups of townsfolks—sullen fellows, some of them, with a fierce gleam in their eyes—who, standing in the mouths of reeking alleys, watched us go by.

But presently we had to stop. A crowd had gathered to watch a little cavalcade of six gentlemen pass across our path. They were riding two and two, lounging in their saddles and chattering to one another, disdainfully unconscious of the people about them, or the remarks they excited. Their graceful bearing and the richness of their dress and equipment surpassed anything I had ever seen. A dozen pages and lackeys were attending them on foot, and the sound of their jests and laughter came to us over the heads of the crowd.

While I was gazing at them, some movement of the throng drove back Bure's horse against mine, Bure himself uttered a savage oath; uncalled for so far as I could see. But my attention was arrested the next moment by Croisette, who tapped my arm with his riding whip. "Look!" he cried in some excitement, "is not that he?"

I followed the direction of the lad's finger—as well as I could for the plunging of my horse, which Bure's had frightened—and scrutinized the last pair of the troop. They were crossing the street in which we stood, and I had only a side view of them; or rather of the nearer rider. He was a singularly handsome man, in age about 22 or 23, with long lovelocks falling on his lace collar and cloak of orange silk. His face was sweet and kindly and gracious to a marvel. But he was a stranger to me.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The athletic games of the Senior class of the High School have been postponed until next Friday afternoon on account of threatening weather.

George Coard, Herbert Richardson and George P. Smith, of the High School, went to New York today to take part in the athletic games of the Drisler School at Berkley Oval.

The Founder's Day games of New York University were held Wednesday afternoon at Ohio Field, the new athletic grounds of the university. Ralph Campbell, of Netherwood avenue, won the running high jump and secured third place in the pole vault.

LAWN TENNIS.

The tennis courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club have been put in fine condition and were opened yesterday for play. Quite a number of the members began practice yesterday and pronounced the courts in excellent shape.

Tennis is included in the Carnival of Sports that the New Jersey Athletic Club will hold on Decoration Day. Thomas U. Smith and Albert P. Simmonds expect to play in the double tournament there Decoration Day morning.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

A fit closing score was made on the Crescent Wheelmen's alleys last evening by Wheaton S. Lowry. The week of very warm weather drove most of the bowlers away, but several returned with the approach of cooler weather. The score was 241, but the way it was rolled made it still more remarkable. Mr. Lowry scored nine in his first frame and then followed eight strikes in succession. In the tenth frame he had a split and only rolled six.

GOLF.

The golf links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club are being rapidly put in condition and are expected to be ready for play about May 1st. There is some talk of a formal opening of the course on Decoration Day.

QUARRELED AND MADE UP

TWO COLORED WOMEN SETTLE THEIR TROUBLE BEFORE GOING TO COURT.

Etta Miner Called Her Friend, Mrs. Emma Connett, Names and Threw Stones at Her—Went to Law and Then Repented.

There was a strange scene in the city court room this morning when prisoner and complainant came up side by side in the most loving way and smiled in the most friendly manner at each other. They both were colored women and one, Miss Etta Miner, was arrested on complaint of the other, Mrs. Emma Connett, on the charge of disorderly conduct and throwing stones.

"You were the one that had her arrested?" asked Judge DeMeza of Mrs. Connett, as he inclined his head in the direction of the prisoner.

"Yes," was the reply, "but we've made up," and the two colored women snuggled up together in a most loving manner. Mrs. Connett then went on to tell how they had become good friends again and how she had gone to "that gentleman," pointing at Sergeant Kiely, and "he acted real cross and angry" and would not let them settle the matter themselves.

The Judge censured her for making a complaint and then trying to withdraw it and said that he expected they would quarrel again and another complaint would be wanted. Mrs. Connett protested that they were good friends now and made an eloquent appeal in behalf of the prisoner.

After a severe lecture, Judge DeMeza suspended sentence and the new-made friends departed arm in arm.

Sues the Central for $25,000.

A suit for 25,000 damages was begun in the Supreme Court, Jersey City, yesterday, against the Central Railroad of New Jersey by Herman N. Lay, administrator of the estate of the Herman Lay, who was killed at the Avenue E. station, Bayonne, on April 27th, 1895. The deceased was a photographer in Hoboken and Bayonne, and was crossing the platform when an express train struck and killed him. His income was $3,000 a year.

A PASTOR'S RECEPTION.

Members of First M. E. Church Get Better Acquainted With Dr. Barnes.

The rain that poured down early last evening prevented a large attendance at the reception given in honor of Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D., and family by the Ladies Aid Society and the Epworth League of the First M. E. church at Vincent chapel. But those that were present spent a very enjoyable evening. The early part of the evening was spent in conversation and then an informal programme was given.

It started with the hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," which was sung by all. Then James McGee made a few remarks welcoming Dr. Barnes back to the church and wishing him success. A well-executed piano solo by Richard Menzel followed and then Dr. Barnes replied to the address of welcome with a few well-chosen words. The programme concluded with a pleasing recitation, "Uncle Daniel's Prayer," given by Miss G. Elting Overton which was loudly encored.

While the guests settled down for a period of sociability, the young people passed light refreshments which were greatly enjoyed while all indulged in lively conversation.

The committee from the Ladies Aid Society, which looked after the good things, consisted of Mrs. J. P. Homan, chairman; Mrs. James Hallock, Mrs. J. P. Hnmble, Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. N. Y. Hull. The entertainment was provided by the Epworth League.

Owing to the inclement weather, a number of those who were to take part in the programme were detained at home.

The social committee in charge consisted of Miss Elsie Horne, chairman; the Misses Saidee Douglass, Amelia Day, Bessie Day and Madeline Day, Messrs. Walter B. Rittenhouse, J. V. Rittenhouse, James A. Stafford, Ralph Campbell and Frank W. Cornwell.

INDICTED FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

Benjamin Hall Accused of Killing John Vandeveer at Bound Brook.

The Somerset County Grand Jury yesterday returned an indictment charging manslaughter against Benjamin Hall, who is accused of killing John Vandeer.

Vandeveer attended a colored ball at Bound Brook on Christmas Eve, and in the morning after he had returned home, started out to feed his employer's horses. He was set upon by other negroes and beaten. He died two months later in the Muhlenberg hospital in this city. With the exception of a few hours, he remained unconscious from the time of assault until death.

Anna Manning and Louisa Philhouer, mother and daughter, were indicted for stealing oats and patatoes from the barn of Hezekiah Eick, of Bedminister. The women pleaded not guilty when arrainged in court today.

LOAN EXHIBITION TO CLOSE.

The Last Look at the Art Exhibition Will be Taken Tonight.

After running two weeks, the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club will come to a close this evening. There was some talk of continuing the exhibition, but they have decided that tonight shall be positively the last public appearance of this grand collection of works of art. From an artistic standpoint, the exhibition has been a great success. Never before have Plainfielders had such a display open to them in their own city. The support that should have been hearty, has been small and weak, although it improved greatly during the last week. For those that have not attended yet, there is one chance left to see the exhibition and that is this evening. It is to be hoped that many will take advantage of the opportunity.

Death of Dr. Charles A. Gregory.

The Press has just learned from reliable authority of the death of Dr. Charles A. Gregory, who in 1890 lived in Plainfield and conducted a truss business in New York city. He died in a home for the aged in New York during last summer. Miss Gilbert, his ward, who also lived in Plainfield at the time the doctor did, is also dead. She died of hemorrhages while living at Litchfield, Conn., last summer.

Human Nature.

It is a frailty of human nature that we will go miles and undergo great expense to see or obtain that which, when at our doors, we daily pass by with indifference. The lesson of this should prove beneficial to sufferers from weak eyes. Don't wait until long suffering has made a cure remote and expensive, but seek at once the relief which is at your very door—at Collier's, where such relief at trifling expense is guaranteed you.

A WAR OF WORDS WAGED.

A MIXEDUP AFFAIR AIRED IN CITY COURT THIS MORNING.

Mrs. Schuck Talks Severely to Her Husband, Who Tries to Reform, and Kreitling Thought the Words Applied to Him

Improper language was the principal cause of trouble in the case of Mrs. Kate Schuck which was tried before City Judge DeMeza this morning. Mrs. Schuck was charged by a neighbor named Kreitling with using profane and improper language. The case was an adjourned one from last Saturday.

The trouble that caused the arrest happened sometime ago. George Schuck, the husband of the prisoner, was at the home of Kreitling with a number of companions spending the evening when Mrs. Schuck appeared on the scene and tried to get her husband to go home. Her language was not of the most select and slanderous epithets flew around at a lively rate. Kreitling thought that most of them applied to him and was very indignant. The war of words raged for some time and then the party broke up.

Ex-Judge W. A. Coddington appeared for Mrs. Schuck at the trial this morning and entered a plea of "non vult." He said that the names had been meant for Mr. Schuck, but Mr. Kreitling, who was standing nearby, thought they were meant for him, and he also said that the facts that Mrs. Schuck told Kreitling she gave only as what Mr. Schuck had told her. Her husband, he said was in the habit of going out in the evening and leaving her at home and she tried to break up that habit.

Kreitling appeared in court and said he did not care to press the case but he wanted the calling of such names stopped. Mr. Schuck promised and after administering a severe reprimand, the Judge suspended sentence.

Big Volunteer Rally.

An immense gathering of the American Volunteers will be held in Carnegie Music Hall, Fifth-seventh street and Seventh avenue, New York, Monday evening. Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth will address the meeting, assisted by a number of the National staff. A large number of posts will be represented. Tickets for boxes and box and reserve seats can be obtained of Captain Mimms, of the local post, at her quarters, 128 Central avenue, or at Reform Hall at this evening's service.

A Man Behind the Times.

He was not exactly a Rip Van Winkle, for he was quite young in appearance, but he must have been asleep, as he stated in court that he had been carting in Plainfield for the last ten years and had never heard of an ordinance requiring a truckman to be licensed. His name was James Burke, and he was arraigned before Judge Demeza on the charge of carting without a license. Burke obtained a license as soon as he learned that it was necessary to have one, and, on learning that fact, the Judge suspended sentence on him.

Against Trolleys on County Roads.

The Elizabeth Board of Trade will put itself on record as being opposed to the building of trolley roads on the fine roads of Union county. The board Thursday night discussed the matter, and requested the joint committee on railroads and streets and highways to prepare a resolution on the subject to be acted on at the next meeting.

To Appear Before the Cadi.

Must Pay for His Grand Time.

John Burke, an employe at the sewer beds, was arrested last night by Patrolman Cooney on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. City Judge DeMeza gave him his choice between a fine of $3 or 15 days in jail.

Miss Carrie Frazee, of East Fourth street, spent yesterday visiting in Dunellen.

MYSTERIOUS PACKAGES.

LOTS OF FUN AT THE SALE OF UNCLAIMED U. S. EXPRESS PACKAGES.

A Maiden Lady Gets a Box of Collar Buttons and a Bachelor Buys a Dozen Corsets—Funny and Worthless Purchases.

There is a certain attraction in anything mysterious or uncertain and that idea drew a large crowd to the auction store of T. J. Carey, on West Front street, yesterday afternoon, to the sale of unclaimed property that has been left in the hands of the United States Express Company. All the articles were wrapped up and it was utterly impossible to guess their contents. But that was just where the fun came in.

The sale began at 2 o'clock and the crowd was ready for it. It was an enthusiastic crowd and many of them came out of curiosity to see who would invest some large sum in a package of dirty towels or else purchase some valuable piece of jewelry for almost nothing. There were those who confidently expected to know the good things on sight and buy them at a ridiculously low price.

The bidding was lively, and the size of the package or box had very little to do with the price, as the buyers remembered that the best are sometimes to be found in the smallest parcels. None of the packages were given out until all had been sold, and then from 6 o'clock until nearly 9 Mr. Carey and his assistants were kept busy distributing the trunks, boxes and packages, about 500 in all, that had been sold.

There was lots of excitement when the packages came to be opened and there were surprises, pleasant and unpleasant for all. Mrs. Boice paid $1.50 for a dress pattern, while William Baldwin received two hundred cigars and a gold watch for $3.15. Mr. Carey's daughters were unlucky in their purchases, one finding in her packages some very dirty clothing, while the other unwrapped some collars and cuffs. Mrs. Carey, on the contrary, found a stock of handsome new dresses and underclothing. It was very amusing to see one old bachelor look with dismay on a package of corsets while an aged maiden lady was equally surprised by a quantity of collar buttons.

Many of the purchasers did not reveal the contents of their packages in public, but hurried to their own private apartments and there to tear off with eager hands the paper covering only to find, perhaps, a number of circulars, a genealogy of a family by the name of Smith, or some other equally worthless article.

Y. M. C. A. CYCLERS ORGANIZE.

Road Officers Named and Summer Runs Prepared For.

Cycling in the Y. M. C. A. is likely to prove a very attractive feature of the athletic department this year. The season, as far as the cyclist's division was concerned, opened last evening when the annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers was held. President T. A. Cuming called the meeting to order.

A nominating committee, consisting of John V. Beekman, Jr., Charles Butts and T. H. Stafford, was appointed, and after a consultation, nominated the following officers: President, Robert A. Meeker; vice president, Horace J. Martin; secretary and treasurer, C. W. Nichols. The road officers were nominated as follows: Captain, Thomas A. Cuming; first lieutenant, Edward A. Laing; second lieutenant, T. H. Stafford; first bugler, Raymond A. McGee; second bugler, D. W. Littell, Jr.; color sergeant, Clarence Bronard. It was decided to leave the aranging of runs, and all matters pertaining to them, in the hands of a committee composed of three members and the captain, ex-officio. The following committee was appointed: Charles B. Morse, Curtis M. Thorpe, Clarence Bronard and Captain Thomas A. Cuming.

Peter Seader Seriously Hurt.

Peter Seader, of North Plainfield, while returning home last evening with a cartload of dirt, met with a peculiar and serious accident as he was turning from Front street into Somerset street. The hook which holds the body of the cart to the running gear became unfastened. As a result Mr. Seader was thrown in the air and in falling injured himself severely. He was picked up almost unconscious and he remained so for sometime. Later he was taken home. He suffered so intensely that Dr. Carman was called and gave proper treatment. Early this morning the doctor was called again. He is getting along as well as can be expected and it is thought he will soon recover.

—It is on Saturday and Sunday that the stage is to run from the trolley line to the Mountain Park Inn, instead of Friday and Saturday.

THE INFANT INDUSTRIES.

Mahlon Vail Makes a Comparison With European Industries.

The protectionists boast of their free breakfast tables, and if we could make a meal of tea and coffee it might be true. But what else can we name on our tables at breakfast or any other meal that is not taxed, and that heavily? Even the starch in our table cloths under the McKinley tariff paid 86 per cent.

It is now somewhat less, but why any duty when we have the raw material cheaper than it is in any other part of the world, and are shipping the manufactured article to Europe by hundreds of tons.

The same question may be asked of a good many others who are sending their products to foreign markets.

Nearly a dozen iron and steel goods men have been named as doing so by the "Iron Age" within the past few days.

Amongst others the steel filemakers state they are shipping, with profit to Canada, where their goods pay a duty of 35 per cent.

Several of the concerns alluded to claim that but for the foreign duties they could greatly increase their business in that line.

If our manufacturers can compete with the cheap labor in foreign markets, where their goods have to pay a duty, they ought certainly be able to do so at home without a high protective tariff.

Let us look into this cheap labor matter so often spoken of as so hard to contend against.

We will begin by making some necessary comparisons.

In the United States in 1890 our manufactures amounted in value to $9.372,437, 283. the number of hands employed 4,251.613, the average product for each employe was $2,204,44. The aggregate amount of wages paid was $1,891,228,321, making the average wages paid to each employe $444.83. In the United Kingdom of Great Britain in 1888 the manufactures amounted in value to $4,100,000,000. The number of employes 4,535,000, average product for each employe $903.52. I cannot find that the English statistics include the entire amount of labor paid, but, from the most reliable information obtainable, find it to be about thirty per cent lower than in the northern and eastern States. In the southern States it is just about the same as in England.

We will now compare the annual production of coal in this country and other countries per employe:

United States	418 tons
England	256 "
Austria	200 "
France	197 "
Belgium	166 "

From this it will be noticed the average difference in our favor is about 120 per cent.

Mulhall says "in farming one man produces more in the United States than three men in Europe."

This seems like a great difference, but the larger scale on which it is conducted, and the labor saving machinery now in general use in this country, gives us a very great advantage not only in farming, but also in manufacturing and mining as well.

By comparing the above statements and their results, it is seen that labor costs considerably less here than in Europe, when the amount of production is taken into account.

At the same time it will be observed our "Infant" has increased in stature until he is head and shoulders above anything that can be shown elsewhere, and on that account the consumers are beginning to think it time he should be doing something for his own support.

It is a moderate calculation after we have for years paid forty to fifty per cent protective duties, to estimate twenty per cent on the value of the entire manufactures as tax on the consumers.

A tax amounting annually to more than three times the entire expense of the general government.

This bounty, large as it is, goes to enrich a very small per centage of our population, it would be safe to say two per cent, for which the ninety-eight per cent are taxed by increased prices.

Mahlon Vail.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

RIGHTS OF THE CYCLISTS.

A LONG DISCUSSION IN THE COUNCIL OVER THE BICYCLE ORDINANCE.

Councilman Serrell Argued That Lights Should be Carried by All Vehicles at Night—Confined to Wheelmen Only.

When President See called the special meeting of the City Council to order last evening all the members were present except Messrs. Dumont and Ginna. Clerk MacMurray read the call, after which the business specified was taken up in order.

The bicycle ordinance was the first matter brought up for consideration. On motion of Mr. Fisk it was placed on its second reading. Mr. Fisk objected to the part which referred to the placing of lamps on road vehicles. He thought that in a town like this it would be impossible to enforce it. The proper thing to do would be to place the matter in an ordinance to regulate cabs, coaches, etc. Mr. Serrell thought that as wheelmen were obliged to have a light on their wheels, though coming from out of town, it was a poor rule that wouldn't work both ways.

Mr. Barrows stated that the Police Board had under consideration such an ordinance which would probably be offered soon. The section referring to lights on road vehicles was stricken out by a full vote. The section referring to bells was read and discussed. Mr. Serrell thought if bells were rung at crosswalks, and when approaching vehicles, pedestrians, etc., less accidents would occur. Mr. Westphal thought it left a chance for dispute as probably there would only be two persons present, leaving no one to swear as to who was right.

On Mr. Fisk's motion the portion referring to where pedestrians and occupants of vehicles do not recognize the presence of a cycler, was stricken out.

Section four regulating the speed of a wheel, and granting children the priviledge of riding on the sidewalks was also stricken out on Mr. Fisk's motion. Mr. Fisk said that the children were with us and would continue to be with us. They had always ridden on the sidewalk and would continue whether they were allowed or not. The balance of the ordinance was ordered engrossed and advertised. As the street sprinkling ordinance was referred to the street committee at the last meeting it was improperly placed in the call and was laid over.

Mr. Fisk suggested that the street committeebe given till the next meeting to consider the sidewalk ordinance and the same was granted. The ordinance referring to the appointment of commissioners to make assessments for damages and benefits in connection with the sewers and the ordinance relating to the assessments of taxes for 1896 were both adopted on final passage. The petition of Mr. Phillips regarding sidewalks in the West End was referred to the street committee.

The license applications, as published in these colums, were brought up and granted, except the one of J. L. Hand, as auctioneer. Mr. Fisk opposed it on the ground that he understood the applicant only made short visits to a town and then went away. Mr. Westphal thought the city merchants should be protected and the men who make a business of jumping from town to town should be discouraged as much as possible, unless they are entitled to a license. On a vote the application was rejected, all voting no. The Council then adjourned.

To Down Sham Affairs.

A new ticket in opposition to the regular nomination on the New York Stock Exchange, was placed in the field last week at a meeting of which George P. Mellick, of this city, acted as chairman. All of the nominees stand pledged to work for a system by which bucket-shops, etc., shall be deprived of the Stock Exchange quotations. This action is largely prompted and indeed made necessary by the sharks which have been advertising all over the country for money to invest with the unwary, both publisher and the public being victimized by these operators.

A Worthy Benefit.

A benefit will be given for John Winn on Monday night, at T. A. B. Hall, and tickets for it are selling rapidly. Prof. O'Reilly will furnish the music. Winn has been ill for the last sixteen months.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

TRADE IS IMPROVING

The Feeling More Hopeful at Many Business Centres.

LARGER DEMAND IN RETAIL LINES

Better Weather, Favorable Crop Prospects and Renewed Building Activity Encouraging Features—Prices Continue Downward.

New York, April 25.—Bradstreet sums up the business situation throughout the country for the week closing to-day as follows: The feeling is more hopeful at many trade centres, owing to continued improvement of demand in retail lines, better weather, generally favorable crop prospects and the activity which naturally follows renewed building operations, distribution of implements and farm supplies and attendant activity. More favorable reports from commercial travelers are from those representing Pittsburg, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Milwaukee houses. Moderate improvement is shown at a few other western centres, but at most of the larger distributing points throughout the country the movement of merchandise, on the whole, shows no material change. While seeding is progressing rapidly in the northwest, country trade there is unfavorable. Lack of rain in Florida is the cause of scarcity of early vegetables, and at almost all cities mercantile collections continue slow, remaining relatively the most unfavorable feature of business even where the tendency in other directions is towards improvement.

Outlook in Industrial Lines.

In industrial lines the only marked change for the better is in the manufacture of shoes, orders for which have been placed in excess of preceding weeks. Wholesalers of the more important distributing centres in this line report larger sales, except at Chicago. Transactions in wool have increased moderately, but supplies continue heavy, and prices, while nominally unchanged, are weak. In Rhode Island fairly good orders for woolens have been placed with mills. The movement of dry goods continues unsatisfactory, but is improved in retail lines, due to continued favorable weather. Prices for cotton goods are depressed by over production, not even the higher quotation for raw material having an influence under these circumstances. Demand for iron and steel of staple varieties remains almost at a standstill, consumers having stocked up prior to the recent advance. Railroad and structural material and bar plate are in relatively best request, most other lines remaining flat. Cuts in quotations for Bessemer pig and steel billets are the results of transactions by middlemen. At the south a number of furnaces have contracted their output several months ahead and fractionally advanced the price of certain grades of pig.

Prices Weaker.

The tendency of prices is the reverse of that for several preceding weeks, with a large number of decreases. In addition to those mentioned, wheat flour, wheat, Indian corn, oats, sugar, leather, petroleum and lard are lower, while wool, lumber, coal, pork and print cloths remain nominally unchanged. Cotton and tinplates have advanced, the latter due to a combination by makers. Improvement in business in recent weeks is reflected in the total of bank clearings, $1,012,000 000, an increase of 2.8 per cent. compared with last week, and of 1.7 per cent. compared with the third week of April, 1895. When contrast is made with the corresponding week in 1894, this week's total is 18 per cent. larger, but it is 6 per cent. smaller than in the corresponding week of 1893, and 7 per cent. smaller than in the like week of 1892. There are 240 business failures reported throughout the United States this week, compared with 244 last week, 223 in the corresponding week one year ago, 201 two years ago, and as contrasted with 186 in the like week of 1893.

New Haven, Conn., April 25.—The Yale and Princeton baseball management have agreed to accept the same umpire plan as last year. They have applied to president Nick Young of the National League to select an umpire for every championship game. New Haven, Conn., April 25.—Yale has made elaborate plans for the annual baseball game to-day with Brown. The team has trained carefully all the week and hope to win. They are in good form. Trudeau has rested all the week and will pitch. It is expected that James H. O'Rourke of Bridgeport will be selected as umpire.

NEW YORK LIQUOR MEN GIVE IN Decision Sustaining the Raines Law, They Believe, Ends the Fight.

New York, April 25.—Saloonkeepers generally to-day expressed themselves as satisfied that any further attack on the Raines' law would be useless after the unanimous decision of the appellate division of the supreme court yesterday afternoon that the law is constitutional in every point brought up. Justice Patterson, who wrote the decision, referred to the severe arraignment of the law during the argument as offending against justice and reason, said that it may be as unjust, unwise, oppressive, and odious as the relator claims, but all that does not help in the solution of the constitutionality of the law, and the court has no opinion to express on that subject. The justices say, in short, that the law was enacted in the exercise of the police power of the state. It was purely a matter of state government, and as such the legislative action was proper. In regard to the contention that the law violates the constitutional provision regarding the classification of cities, the justices find that it was a general law in the full sense of the term, and hence did not violate this classification. On the same ground that it was a general law the contention that the bill should have been presented to the mayors of the cities of the state for approval or disapproval is found not to be well founded. As it was not a special city bill it was not necessary to submit it to the mayors. The justices also find that the contention that the law provided unequal taxation was not well founded, because the primary purpose of the law was not to gather revenue, but to regulate the liquor traffic. Lawyer Untermyer, who is conducting the fight of the liquor men, was seen to-day by a reporter and asked for his opinion of the decision. Mr. Untermyer was extremely blue over his defeat, but he declared that the fight was not over yet and that the case would certainly be carried to the court of appeals.

MARTIN A BOUNCER.

He Ejects an Obstreperous Newspaper Man from the New York Senate Chamber.

Albany, April 25.—While the senate was industriously passing bills late yesterday afternoon there was a shout from the ante-room of "get out of here." A few minutes afterwards Senator Martin came into the chamber and rose to a question of privilege. He said that he probably owed the president and the senate an apology. A few moments before he had, he added, ejected from the floor a man who had been bothering him and other senators for some time past. If an apology was due he would give it. The president, Senator Ellsworth in the chair, stated that it was possible the senate owed its thanks to the senator. Those who saw Senator Martin eject the man claimed it was John Jewell of the Excise Herald of New York city. The senator struck at him once and before the second blow Jewell had hustled away.

CHARGED WITH KIDNAPPING.

Mrs. Hiller's Second Arrest Characterized as an Outrage.

Saratoga, N. Y., April 25.—Mrs. H. R. Hiller, living on Hyde street, was arrested last evening on a warrant sworn out before a police justice of New York city, charging her with kidnapping a child, one Alice Weidemeyer, aged about 8 years. The complainant is Louise Weidemeyer of New York city, who claims to be the child's mother. About a year ago Mrs. Hiller, who claims to have legally adopted the child several years ago, was given considerable trouble by the Weidemeyer woman, who caused her arrest. The action at that time was quashed. Chief Blodget considers the arrest an outrage.

PULLMAN RETRACTS

The Minister Apologizes for Slandering Mlle. Jane May.

DAMAGE SUIT IS THEN WITHDRAWN

The French Actress, in Accepting the Retraction, Says That Only God Can Right the Wrong the Minister Has Done Her.

Bridgeport, Conn., April 25.—The slander case against Rev. Dr. Joseph Pullman of the First Methodist church of this city brought by Mlle. Jane May, the French actress and pantomimist, in which she asked for $25,000 damages, alleging that the clergyman, from the pulpit, referred to her as a "low, brilliant, swell Parisian courtesan," is to be withdrawn. Rev. Dr. Pullman has published a retraction over his signature in which he says of the words used in his sermon on December 1, 1895: "At that time I knew absolutely nothing of Mlle. May, beyond her relation to that performance; and it was my deliberate purpose that my remarks should be impersonal. I have from the first regretted exceedingly that my words were connected with the actress. It was a great satisfaction to me that Mlle. May repudiated the aforesaid article as a truthful description of her performance; and if I have done her any injury or injustice by assuming that the article was published with her consent, or used any expressions which in any degree may have reflected upon her private character, I regret it. And this has been my attitude in this case from the first." In her letter expressing her satisfaction of the retraction Mlle. May says, among other things: "Your retraction of the reckless, unchristianlike charges against my morals has been submitted to me and is accepted. But I feel that I can without impropriety suggest that it is my hope that the course I have pursued in this matter may at least be the means of deterring clergymen who think less in the pulpit of the Gospel of Christ than notoriety and self-aggrandizement, from making unprovoked and malicious attacks upon actresses of whom they know absolutely nothing. When we meet on that last day before Him who will judge us all, He will decide between us, and right the wrong which you have done me, but which it is beyond your power to undo." Dr. Pullman said that in the settlement of the case he had not been called upon to pay one cent.

FATHER AND SON DEAD.

They Fought a Duel with Axe, Razor and Revolver.

Erie, Pa., April 25.—Simon Hasselbach, a contractor, living in Union City, Pa., and his son William are dead, in consequence of a sanguinary duel fought yesterday. The old man wanted his son to assist him with a contract and the young man refused. The elder Hasselbach returned about noon with a revolver and hostilities began. The son chased his father around with an axe and a razor. In the quarrel which preceded the fight the men agreed that it was a fight to the death, and then began a most desperate encounter. The son struck at his father with an axe and the latter retreated and began firing when cornered. As soon as the son fell with a fatal wound in the breast his father, already bleeding from a razor wound in the wrist, went into the yard and fired two shots into his own head. During this terrible fight the wife and mother, a helpless invalid, lay in a bed in the same room unable to cry out or interfere.

HEAVY LOSSES BY MATABELES.

A Fight with Duncan's Forces Results in 150 Killed.

Cape Town, April 25.—A dispatch from Buluwayo dated to-day says that Commander Duncan, with 100 whites and 200 natives, with Maxim and Hotchkiss guns, met the Matabeles three miles out from Buluwayo. The Matabeles fired a heavy volley into the British party and drove them into the Umguza river. One of the whites of the British party was killed, three of the officers were wounded and several of the natives were killed. The Matabeles lost 150 men killed and a number wounded.

To Watch the British.

Constantinople, April 25.—The Turkish government will establish a naval station on the gulf of Iskanderoon to prevent the importation of arms by Armenians, and also to watch the foreign squadrons, especially the British.

Sleep

By its power to respond to all these needs Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved itself the greatest friend of women. Thousands write that they have been given health and strength by its use. It is the great blood purifier, and consequently the true nerve tonic.

"I feel that I should be wanting in common gratitude should I fail to tell the benefit my wife has derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla. She became seriously ill from running ulcers, caused by poorness of and was strongly advised by a friend to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. She said it had cured her and would no doubt cure my wife. So we tried it, and to say that its effect is wonderful, is only using a mild expression. It appears to be building up a new constitution for her; and, as we are a family of eleven, there are eleven of us rejoicing at the result.

"If the foregoing induces only one person, suffering in the same manner, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I shall feel more than rewarded." ELIJAH PACKER, 585 Monroe Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

WESTVILLE BOMB MYSTERY.

Police Looking for a Mysterious Woman, Whom They Suspect.

New Haven, Conn., April 25.—Detectives are investigating the mysterious bomb explosion that wrecked the house of Major Albee in Westville Thursday night and nearly caused the death of himself and daughter. They found that a woman carrying a mysterious package under her cloak left an electric car near his house Thursday night and returned again shortly after the explosion. They are searching for the woman. Plans are being made by the city and the Winchester Repeating Arms company to offer a large reward for the detection of the person who threw the bomb. Hundreds of people have visited the scene of the explosion. No motive for the deed has yet been furnished. Major Albee says he can throw no light on the matter.

SOCIALIST DEMONSTRATION.

Disorderly Meeting in Paris Denounces the Senate's Action.

Paris, April 25.—A monster meeting was held last night at Tivoli hall under socialist auspices to denounce the action of the senate, which resulted in the overthrow of the Bourgeois ministry. Thousands of people were unable to gain admission to the hall. Great excitement and much disorder prevailed, which continued after the meeting was closed. The crowd, which was frenzied, attempted to make a rush for the boulevards. In this, however, they were generally prevented by the police, who arrested a number of the more demonstrative. Several persons were injured.

Will Oppose the Bill.

Washington, April 25.—Senator Platt of Connecticut will vigorously oppose the bill already passed by the house providing for the repeal of free alcohol for use in the arts and sciences, if pressed in the senate. He has prepared an amendment to this measure striking out all after the enacting clause and substituting the McKinley act in its entirety and repealing the Wilson law.

Denied Use of the Mails.

Washington, April 25.—The postmaster-general has denied the privileges of the mails to the African-American Gold Mining & Trading company and Austin Gallagher of New York city. The concern pretended to own mines in Africa, but did not.

The Reverend Gentlemen Conducted Himself as He Pleased.

RAN A CUT-RATE CEMETERY IN CUBA

Disobeyed Laws Enacted To Favor the Catholic Church — Barbarous Executions Resumed by Weyler's Orders. Prisoners Slain on the Field.

Havana, April 22, via Tampa, Fla., April 25.—The Rev. Alberto Diaz and his brother, Vincento, who were released by the authorities yesterday under orders to leave the island in six days, will undoubtedly comply, and the American colony here will miss two interesting characters. For several years the Rev. Diaz, a Cuban born, but a naturalized citizen of the United States, has been a thorn in the side of the Bishop of Havana. He has held Baptist meetings at such times and places as suited him, and has not taken the trouble to conform to the laws and regulations which are framed, to some extent, to favor the Catholics. When the bishop wrote a letter of remonstrance to the preacher the latter replied that he would worship in his own fashion, "and would the bishop kindly go to the devil." Diaz has been arrested several times for holding meetings without first obtaining a permit from the authorities. He has been repeatedly charged with disturbing the public peace, but he has continued his work undismayed. One of his pet hobbies was a Protestant cemetery which was conducted on the cut-rate principle. The expense of interment in the Catholic cemetery is very great, and the Rev. Diaz secured patronage for his burial ground by offering reduced rates. He also performed the marriage ceremony for a mere bagatelle, compared with the fees demanded by the priests. Mr. Diaz is an M. D., as well as a D. D., and he has at times conducted a hospital here. For many years he has received financial aid in support of his institutions from Baptists in the United States. Mr. Diaz has not, so far as is known, taken any active part in the rebellion, but he has repeatedly given utterance to sentiments favorable to the success of the cause. He is generally considered a sensational preacher and does not mince words when talking about the woes of Cuba.

J. FRANK CLARK.

PUBLIC EXECUTIONS RESUMED.

Wounded Prisoners Murdered by Spanish Troops on the Fields of Battle.

Havana, April 22, via Tampa, April 25.—Gen. Weyler is satisfied that nothing in the line of intervention or recognition of belligerency may be looked for from Washington, at least for the present, and the public executions of prisoners of war, which were suspended for a time, have been resumed. There is supposed to be a general understanding among commanders of Spanish columns that no prisoners are to be taken in engagements in the field. All Cuban patriots who fall into the hands of the troops through being wounded or from other cause are liable to be shot at once and counted with the number killed in battle. Some of the Spanish commanders act according to this understanding, others decline to slay the unarmed or wounded, and deliver their prisoners to Gen. Weyler in Havana. Many of these so-called prisoners-of-war never carried a gun or engaged in battle, but were taken from plantations or from small towns and hamlets in the interior where the Spaniards assume that all men are rebels, and are not far from being right.

No Defense Permitted.

The prisoners are brought to Havana bound and strongly guarded to prevent rescue before reaching the city, and mob violence afterward. The lower class of Spaniards gather about each batch of prisoners and clamor for their blood as they pass through the streets to the ferry to Cabanas fortress or Morro castle. The court martial before which these prisoners are tried is a perfunctory affair composed of five military men who order the death penalty under Weyler's decree that all insurgents are bandits and incendiaries and deserving of death. The prisoners have no opportunity to make a defense and all Cubans in the rebel armies know that capture means death.

Death Soon Follows Capture.

Most of those brought in, it seems, have been wounded, cut off from their columns, or caught without arms. When condemned to death they are given twenty-four or forty-eight hours to prepare for the end. They are given what they want to eat and are placed in the chapel at Cabanas fortress with priests in constant attendance for the last twelve hours. Most of the Cuban patriots who have paid the extreme penalty since Weyler has been here haved died bravely. I saw three of them meet their fate last Friday morning. They were Jose Barcallao and Estiva Hernandez (white) and Gregerio Borges (colored). During the night before the execution Barcallao made several feigned attempts to escape from the chapel, hoping that the guards would shoot him down, preferring that to death in public. The guards forced him back each time without firing at him.

Gunboat Concord Coming Home.

Washington, April 25.—The navy department has been informed that the gunboat Concord arrived at Honolulu April 16, and would leave for San Francisco April 23. The Concord started from the China station for home a few days after the little gunboat Petrel, but, as was expected, passed the latter on the way. The Petrel is now [illegible] Honolulu.

The counties to elect Senators this year are Essex, Monmouth, Somerset, Union, Gloucester, Camden, Salem and Warren. All of these counties except Warren are now represented by Republicans. The Democrats are certain to elect in Sussex, Monmouth, Somerset and Warren, and probably in Salem and Union in November next.

It is quite probable that the McKinley fight will crop out in the new State Republican Committee when it organizes, says the New York Journal. Franklin Murphy, the present chairman, is for McKinley. While he has made a splendid chairman and helped pull the party through to victory last year and for two years previous, he is not liable to be re-elected. John Kean will doubtless be elected. He is understood to be sure of the support of most of the committee. The new committee, like the old, is said to be anti-McKinley in its make up.

The Common Council displayed a good deal of common sense in defeating that section in the proposed bicycling ordinance which made it compulsory for all vehicles to carry lights on the streets after dark. A vehicle with four iron-tired wheels preceded by the clattering hoofs of a horse, cannot be classed with the silent, swift-running bicycle, in the possible risk of accidents from collision, and to have compelled owners and drivers of vehicles with horse locomotion to carry a headlight, would have been a usurpation of rights which precedence and common sense have already established.

IMPENDING TROUBLE IN AFRICA.

A Dusky Colored Denizen Who Doesn't Want to Be Talked About.

There will be trouble in the "colored row" of houses on East Sixth street in a few days when one of the denizens will receive a visit from a blue-coated arm of the law. An old colored man named Collin Jones, something on the "Uncle Tom" style, appeared before City Judge DeMeza and made a complaint against a colored man named Wilson, living on East Sixth street, who, according to Jones' story, has been making all sorts of slanderous remarks about him and has been telling Jones' employer about Jones' unseemly conduct with the dusky belles of the Sixth street row.

Pleasant Social Affair.

NEW HOTEL AND RESTAURANT.

A Well-Known Caterer to Start a Hostlery on East Front Street.

A new hotel (dry) will be opened at 141 East Front street on May 1st by S. C. Rogers, whose advertisement will be found in another column. Mr. Rogers has for some time occupied a store in the Voehl building as a restaurant, but his rapidly increasing business and a demand for hotel accommodations make it imperative that he shall have larger quarters.

The entire building will be used for the purpose. The main restaurant will be on the first floor. On the second front floor will be a private dining room, which will not only be in daily use but which will make a festive and secluded place for private supper parties. On the same floor will be the ladies' bath, dressing and toilet rooms.

Those for men will be in the basement, and will be supplemented with hot and cold shower baths for weary and dusty wheelmen. An artist in his line will wield the brush and put a polish on the pedal extremities of guests.

A commodious kitchen is being erected in the rear. The remainder of the house, other than that described, will be fetchingly furnished for temporary and permanent patrons.

The main restaurant will be the lightest and airiest room in the city. Mr. Rogers, who comes to Plainfield after eight or ten years' experience at Saratoga and Lakewood, says that his mottoes will be "Cleanliness is akin to Godliness" and "No Flies."

The hotel has been spoken of as a "dry" one, but a handsome and up-to-date soda fountain will supply citizens with their favorite and innocuous tipple.

As Mr. Rogers will cater largely to the cycling contingent of both sexes he will call his place the Hotel Tuileries (Two-wheelerie). He says further that his buns and other edibles will be better than his puns. All bespeak for him the success he evidently deserves.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., April, 24, 1896.

An Ordinance to regulate the use of bicycles, tricycles, and similar vehicles, and other road vehicles in the public streets.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That all bicycles, tricycles and similar vehicles when in use on the public highways, streets, or places of the city are hereby required to have a lamp of such illuminating power as to be plainly seen one hundred yards, attached thereto and kept lighted between one hour after sunset and sunrise.

Sec. 2. That all bicycles, tricycles and similar vehicles shall carry a suitable alarm-bell attached to the handle bar of such machine, which, when rung, may be heard one hundred feet distant. That such bell shall be sounded as an alarm by the rider of such vehicle upon approaching another vehicle from the rear or upon approaching pedestrians crossing the street or upon the approach of another vehicle on the same street or on a street intersecting the street ridden upon.

Sec. 3. That no person shall ride upon any bicycle, tricycle, or similar machine upon any sidewalk within the limits of the City of Plainfield: provided that the term sidewalk as used in this ordinance shall be construed to mean such sidewalks only, concerning which the city has power to pass ordinances under and by virtue of paragraph V. Section 1 of Chapter 8 of the Public Laws of 1896; and provided further that this section shall not apply to the riding of any bicycle, tricycle or similar machine upon any sidewalk when necessary to ride upon such sidewalk in passing from private premises to the roadbed of any street, or vice versa.

Section 4 That every violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall render the offender subject to a fine not exceeding the sum of five dollars ($5) for each offense, and that the Justice, Police Judge, Recorder or other Magistrate who may have jurisdiction over such offenses in violation of this ordinance, may impose such fine in his discretion, as he may think proper, not exceeding the sum of five dollars ($5), for each offense.

THEATRICAL.

"A Romance of Coon Hollow" which will be seen at Music Hall next Thursday has some of the most exquisite scenery on the road. The first act reveals an autumn view of a typical southern plantation, with sunset and moonlight effects, and contains a splendid electrical display. The second act is a fac-simile of "Coon Hollow," a rugged glen in the Tennessee hills, painted from sketches made on the spot, and is made sensational by a bursting dam and flood. The third act shows a wood landing on the Mississippi, and night view of the famous Lee-Natchez steamboat race, the boats being lighted up and under full head of steam. The last act is given to an actual cotton press in operation, and is thrillingly dramatic. The play will be given here with all the effects used in the original run at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York. In the woodlanding scene is introduced a rollicking melange of songs and dances by a troupe of colored boys and girls, including two quartettes.

The entirely new comic opera, entitled "El Capitan," music by John Philip Sousa, the eminent composer and conductor, and book by Charles Klein, was given its first presentation by DeWolf Hopper and his company, at the Broadway Theatre, New York, on Monday evening. The production was a notable one. Mr. Hopper, who has always been in the van in the matter of beautiful productions, noted for their scenic splendors, and for strict attention to costumes, appointments, and other effective details, promises this time a series of stage pictures far surpassing anything hitherto attempted by him. Mr. Hopper has augmented his already splendid company, has increased his chorus and orchestra, and employs also a military band to add to the stage effect. The soprano and tenor of the company, Miss Bertha Waltzinger and Edmund Stanley, have been provided with a number of charming solos and duets, while Edna Wallace Hopper, the clever little wife of the star, essays the leading female role in a taking manner.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. ROSECRANS HONORED.

Presented with the Laetare Medal by the University of Notre Dame.

Upon Gen. William Stark Rosecrans—army leader, ex-minister to Mexico, ex-congressman from California, and President Cleveland's first register of the treasury—has been conferred the Laetare medal, annually presented by the university of Notre Dame to the Catholic laymen judged most worthy.

It is only since 1883 the medal has been presented. The custom is an offshoot and the American counterpart of the presentation of the golden rose by the pope. Every year, on the third Sunday of Lent—Laetare Sunday—the pope blesses a golden rose of great beauty and priceless workmanship and sends it to the Roman Catholic of Europe whom he judges most deserving of such honor.

The history of the Laetare medal, though brief, is marked by many familiar names. Its first year, 1883, saw it presented to John Gilmary Shea, the historian of the American church. During the next three years it went to Patrick Kelley, the architect; Eliza Allen Starr, poet and artist, and Gen. John Newton, the engineer. In 1887 there was a break in the chain. The name of the man chosen by the trustees is not set down in any book. He was a convert to the Catholic faith, but he vowed to refuse any ecclesiastical honor offered him, and he felt that he must decline the offer. In 1888 the medal was given to P. V. Hickey, editor of the Catholic review, and during the following years to Mrs. Anna Hanson Dorsey, William J. Onahan, Daniel Dougherty, Henry F. Brownson, Patrick Donohue, Augustin Daly and Mrs. Anna T. Sadlier.

The medal conferred each year is of necessity very similar to those which have gone before, but a certain uniqueness is imparted by the efforts of the artist to epitomize the career of the one to whom it is awarded. The one presented to Gen. Rosecrans is almost severely plain. It is a massive disk of gold, with raised edges and sunken center, bearing on the obverse the usual legend: Magna Est Veritas et Praevalebit." The letters are of black enamel and precious stones. The reverse of the disk is much the same. Another inscription in black enamel letters encircles Gen. Rosecrans' name, which is engraved in the center. The medal was presented by Bishop Montgomery, of Los Angeles, in whose diocese Gen. Rosecrans resides.

BOOTH'S NEW ARMY.

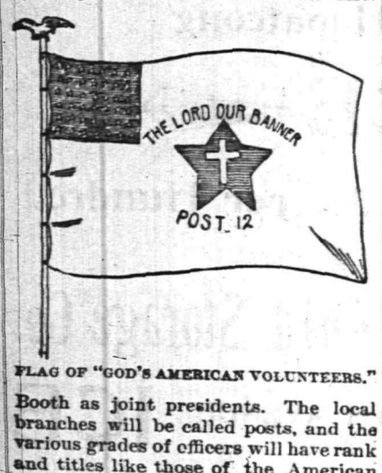
New Religious Organization Is Called "God's American Volunteers."

Ballington Booth has named his new religious organization "God's American Volunteers."

"Eureka!" he exclaimed, "I have found it. The new movement has at last a name, for which we have been seeking for weeks—God's American Volunteers. Three cheers, gentlemen, for the success of the glorious cause."

The old Bible house at New York, usually quiet and gloomy, echoed with the cheers that answered the call. Booth stood in the center of the group and waved his long arms with each cheer.

The volunteers will be governed by a military constitution, with Mr. and Mrs.



FLAG OF "GOD'S AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS."

Booth as joint presidents. The local branches will be called posts, and the various grades of officers will have rank and titles like those of the American army.

The standard of Ballington Booth's organization will consist of a white flag, emblematical of purity. In the center will be a large blue star, typical of hope; in the middle of this star will be a white cross, emblematical of sacrifice for others. In the corner of the flag, nearest the top of the staff, will be 45 white stars in a field of blue, representing the states of the union. Over the central large blue star will read the motto, "The Lord Our Banner," and underneath the words designating the number of the post to which the standard is presented.

It is to be carried by a color sergeant at the head of the parade, along with the national flag.

Bridge Across the Bosphorus.

Trouble with the Turk may delay work on the proposed railroad bridge across the Bosphorus at Constantinople. It will be 8,645 feet long.

A Legal Marriage Engagement.

A Kansas court has ruled that "a man who calls upon a woman regularly and takes her to entertainments occasionally is legally engaged to marry her."

PROFIT AND LOSS.

It Is Not Enough to Merely Hold Your Own.

Hard Times in Health as Well as Business. How to Attain Physical Prosperity.

Every successful merchant keeps two columns, one for "Profit" and another for "Loss." At the close of each year a balance is taken and the true condition of things revealed.

Unwise purchases or too many charges on the books may easily make the balance show on the wrong side. In dull and hard times the merchant often thinks he is fortunate if the books do not show a loss, even if there is no gain. He is almost satisfied if he "holds his own."

A great many young people, especially school girls, seem to be living in "dull and hard times," for they do not improve and develop as they should. They just hold their own, and that is all. They should be growing and making advances all along the line. Every day should show a balance on the Profit side of the health column. They should gain in weight, increase in height, and steadily develop in muscular and mental strength.

If there is a stand-still, just holding your own, then an effort should be made to aid nature. You only have to give her a little start in the right direction. Some good reinforcements will easily help her over the hill, then everything will prosper again. Give her power and vigor by supplying her with a nourishing food, a reconstructive, and strong nerve tonics.

All three of these are found in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites.

The trouble with a great many is that they think one preparation of cod-liver oil is as good as another. Hence, if they try some clear oil and receive no benefit, then they are discouraged and give up in despair. When the body is weak and you wish to give it strength, what wisdom is there in making it do an extra amount of work? When you take raw cod-liver oil, this is what you do. The body has to digest the oil, and this work of digestion takes vital energy. Why not digest the oil before taking it, and thus save the body all this expenditure of force?

Physiology teaches that an oil is digested when it is emulsified, or broken up into most minute globules. An "emulsion" is a preparation of a digested oil. Therefore, in Scott's Emulsion the oil is digested. There is no loss of force in preparing it for absorption. Everything is on the Profit side. The body has the full benefit of the whole dose. The hypophosphites makes you hungry, and they give tone and stability to the nerves and brain.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

"I could have sworn," exclaimed Croisette, "that that was Louis himself—M. de Pavannes!"

"That?" I answered, as we began to move again, the crowd melting before us. "Oh, dear, no!"

"No! no! The farther man!" he explained.

But I had not been able to get a good look at the farther of the two. We turned in our saddles and peered after him. His back in the dusk certainly reminded me of Louis. Bure, however, who said he knew M. de Pavannes by sight, laughed at the idea. "Your friend," he said, "is a wider man than that!" And I thought he was right there—but then it might be the cut of the clothes. "They have been at the Louvre playing paume, I'll be sworn!" he went on. "So the admiral must be better. The one next us was M. de Teligny, the admiral's son-in-law. And the other, whom you mean, was Comte de la Rochefoucault."

We turned as he spoke into a narrow street near the river, and could see not far from us a mass of dark buildings which Bure told us was the Louvre—the king's residence. Out of this street we turned into a short one; and here Bure drew rein and rapped loudly at some heavy gates. It was so dark that when, these being opened, he led the way into a courtyard, we could see little more than a tall, sharp-gabled house, projecting over us against a pale sky; and a group of men and horses in one corner. Bure spoke to one of the men, and begging us to dismount, said the footman would show us to M. de Pavannes.

The thought that we were at the end of our long journey, and in time to warn Louis of his danger, made us forget all our exertions, our fatigue and stiffness. Gladly throwing the bridles to Jean we ran up the steps after the servant. The thing was done. Hurrah! the thing was done!

The house—as we passed through a long passage and up some steps—seemed full of people. We heard voices and the ring of arms more than once. But our guide, without pausing, led us to a small room lighted by a hanging lamp. "I will inform M. de Pavannes of your arrival," he said, respectfully, and passed behind a curtain, which seemed to hide the door of an inner apartment. As he did so, the clink of glasses and the hum of conversation reached us.

"He has company supping with him," I said, nervously. I tried to flip some of the dust from my boots with my whip. I remembered that this was Paris.

"He will be surprised to see us," quoth Croisette, laughing—a little shyly, too, I think. And so we stood waiting.

I began to wonder as minutes passed by—the gay company we had seen putting it in my mind, I suppose—whether M. de Pavannes, of Paris, might not turn out to be a very different person from Louis de Pavannes, of Caylus; whether the king's courtier would be as friendly as Kit's lover. And I was still thinking of this without having settled the point to my satisfaction when the curtain was thrust aside again. A very tall man, wearing a splendid suit of black and silver and a stiff, trencher-like ruff, came quickly in and stood smiling at us, a little dog in his arms. The little dog sat up and snarled; and Croisette gasped. It was not our old friend Louis, certainly! It was not Louis de Pavannes at all. It was no old friend at all. It was Vidame de Bezers!

"Welcome, gentlemen!" he said, smiling at us—and never had the cast been so apparent in his eyes. "Welcome to Paris, M. Anne!"

Bure told us that this was the Rue St. Antoine!"

"Ah!" he replied, as if slowly enlightened—the hypocrite! "Ah! I see!" and he smiled grimly. "So you have made the acquaintance of Blaise Bure, my excellent master of the horse! Worthy Blaise! Indeed, indeed, now I understand. And you thought, you whelps," he continued, and as he spoke his tone changed strangely and he fixed us suddenly with angry eyes, "to play a rubber with me! With me, you imbeciles! You thought the wolf of Bezers could be hunted down like any hare! Then listen, and I will tell you the end of it. You are now in my house and absolutely at my mercy. I have two score men within call who would cut the throats of three babes at the breast if I bade them! Aye," he added, a wicked exultation shining in his eyes, "they would, and like the job!"

He was going on to say more, but I interrupted him. The rage I felt, caused as much by the thought of our folly as by his arrogance, would let me be silent no longer. "First, M. de Bezers, first," I broke out, fiercely, my words leaping over one another in my haste, "a word with you! Let me tell you what I think of you! You are a treacherous hound, vidame! A cur! a beast! And I spit upon you! Traitor and assassin!" I shouted, "is that not enough? Will nothing provoke you? If you call yourself a gentleman, draw!"

He shook his head; he was still smiling, still unmoved. "I do not do my own dirty work," he said, quietly, "por stint my footmen of their sport, boy."

"Very well!" I retorted. And with the words I drew my sword, and sprang as quick as lightning to the curtain by which he had entered. "Very well, we will kill you first!" I cried, wrathfully, my eye on his eye, and every savage passion in my breast aroused, "and take our chance with the lackeys afterwards! Marie! Croisette!" I cried shrilly, "on him, lads!"

But they did not answer. They did not move or draw. For the moment, indeed, the man was in my power. My wrist was raised, and I had my point at his breast, I could have run him through by a single thrust. And I hated him. Oh, how I hated him! But he did not stir. Had he spoken, had he moved so much as an eyelid, or drawn back his foot, or laid his hand on his hilt, I should have killed him there. But he did not stir and I could not do it. My hand dropped. "Cowards!" I cried, glancing bitterly from him to them—they had never failed me before. "Cowards!" I muttered, seeming to shrink into myself as I said the word. And I flung my sword clattering on the floor.

"That is better!" he drawled, quite unmoved, as if nothing more than words had passed, as if he had not been in peril at all. "It was what I was going to ask you to do. If the other young gentlemen will follow your example, I shall be obliged. Thank you. Thank you."

Croisette, and a minute later Marie, obeyed him to the letter! I could not understand it. I folded my arms and gave up the game in despair, and but for very shame I could have put my hands to my face and cried. He stood in the middle under the lamp, a head taller than the tallest of us; our master. And we stood round him trapped, beaten, for all the world like children. Oh, I could have cried! This was the end of our long ride, our aspirations, our knight-errantry!

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

CHAPTER IV.

ENTRAPPED!

There was a long silence. We stood glaring at him, and he smiled upon us—as a cat smiles. Croisette told me afterwards that he could have died of mortification—of shame and anger that we had been so outwitted. For myself I did not at once grasp the position. I did not understand. I could not disentangle myself in a moment from the belief in which I had entered the house—that it was Louis de Pavannes' house. But I seemed vaguely to suspect that Bezers had swept him aside and taken his place. My first impulse, therefore—obeyed on the instant—was to stride to the vidame's side and grasp his arm. "What have you done?" I cried, my voice sounding hoarsely even in my own ears. "What have you done with M. de Pavannes? Answer me!"

He showed just a little more of his sharp white teeth as he looked down at my face—a flushed and troubled face, doubtless. "Nothing—yet," he replied, very mildly. And he shook me off.

"Then," I retorted, "how do you come here?" He glanced at Croisette and shrugged his shoulders, as if I had been a spoiled child. "M. Anne does not seem to understand," he said, with mock courtesy, "that I have the honor to welcome him to my house, the Hotel Bezers, Rue de Platriere."

"The Hotel Bezers! Rue de Platriere!" I cried, confusedly. "But Blaise Fatal ✻ Pneumonia.

Dr. Charles Wilson, Atwell Ave, Providence, says; "My wife suffered a severe attack of pneumonia; after passing the acute stage fearing heart failure, I gave her freely Bovinine and port wine, equal parts. I have never seen such good results. I am a hearty believer in Bovinine for quick nutrition." Over 25000 other physicians endorse it equally strong.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Alexander Filmore, of Park avenue, has purchased a Spaulding wheel.

John Garno, of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, has purchased a Stearn's wheel.

Miss Etta Raybert, of North avenue, received her new Sagamore wheel yesterday through the agency of Frank Vail.

"Manager" William Sweeney, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, is riding a Crescent wheel, built especially for his use.

A shipment of eight Cleveland wheels and one Humber wheel was received yesterday by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

All kinds of repairing of wheels is done at the H. J. Martin Cycle Agency, at the corner of Park avenue and West Second street.

The Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen has transferred E. C. Bald, last year's Class B champion, to the professional ranks.

If riders of wheels and people in carriages would constantly remember that there is a right side of the road, the chances for accidents would be decreased.

Alfred Baker, of West Fifth street, G. W. Giles, of Dunellen, and John Hall, of East Fifth street, are riding new blue-rimmed Columbia wheels, purchased from the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

The Victor Wheelmen, the colored cycling organization, has been disbanded and most of the members have united to form the Union Club, which is to be changed into an Odd Fellows Lodge in a short time. Ex-captain Israel Jones and a few others did not join the new club, but are considering the advisability of forming a new bicycle club.

The following runs come to this city from New York tomorrow: St. George Wheelmen start at 9 o'clock a. m. rom Twenty-sixth street and Madison avenue; the Manhattan Bicycle Club start at 8:30 a. m. from 205 West Fifty-seventh street; the Yorkville Wheelmen start at 8:30 a. m. from Eighty-eighth street and Madison avenue.

The Race Committee of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs have selected the following officials to officiate at the Milburn road race on May 30th: Referee, Will R. Pitman; handicapper, Frank B. Prial; judges, P. A. Brock, Fred Keer, Waldo E. Fuller, C. Von Lengerke, J. J. Woods, W. R. Starrett, C. F. Kireker; timers, W. C. Nellis, M. L. Bridgman, J. Josephi, L. B. Whymper, G. M. Worden; starter, A. H. Chamberlain.

The bicycle division of the Prudential Athletic Club introduced a new feature into their run today. Instead of the usual single body, the riders were divided into two sections, a slow and a fast one. The slow section left the Newark building at 2 o'clock, and were paced by Ross Whitfield. Forty-five minutes later the faster ones took their departure. The pace was set by George Lawerence, and he will see that the scorchers are accommodated. This time the route was to Irvington, via Clinton avenue, to Hilton, Springfield, Scotch Plains and Plainfield. In returning, the riders will go through Westfield, Cranford, Elizabeth and home via Frelinghuysen avenue.

The new racing rules are very strict this year. Through the Racing Board the L. A. W. exercises jurisdiction over all cycle competitions and record trials on tracks within the United States. A rider who enters a race, if he cannot run, will be compelled to notify the promoters of the meet at least one week previous to the meet of his inability to compete. A failure to obey this rule will cause his suspension for a time. Failure to pay the entrance fee will also result in suspension. The National championships are opened to amateurs and professionals, but medals only will be awarded. Boys under fifteen years will not be allowed to enter in regular races. No meet with a race on its programme for boys under twelve years will be sanctioned.

Reports are coming in from all over the county telling of the unprecedented demand for wheels and the cycle companies are running behind in their efforts to fill the orders that are being heaped upon them. The rush has been felt by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, and they have worked early and late to supply their customers. Among the latest to purchase Cleveland Swell Specials are G. J. Coe, Walter Peterson, A. F. H. Streuli, W. E. Lowe and A. B. Beers. R. M. Shepard has bought a Cleveland racer as has also W. E. Lowe, the latter purchasing it for his son. Among those to purchase Crescents during the last few days are Harry S. Pugh, of South Plainfield; Patrolman James E. Totten, Charles W. Park, John Saverd of South Plainfield; David Nuttall, Miss Mary Smalley, of Stelton; Eugene Wheeler, Lena Weber, Melvin Teeple, Edward Ortman, of Stirling; E. P. Williams, Josiah Browne and Mrs. Charles Day. William C. Apgar bought a Cleveland wheel. A lady's Waverly Belle wheel was sold to Miss Relle S. Lewis.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

President George P. Smith of the New Jersey Interscholastic Association has asked the following gentlemen to officiate at the championship meeting that will be held on the New Jersey Athletic Club grounds on Saturday, June 6th, commencing at 2 p. m.: Referee, James E. Sullivan, New Jersey A. C.; field judges, W. J. Swan, New York A. C.; F. W. Rubien, St. George A. C.; H. K. Zust, Twenty-second Regiment A. A.; track judges, Harry Cornish, New Manhattan A. C.; B. S. Weeks, New York A. C.; J. J. Linihan, Riverside A. C.; starter, E. W. Hjertberg New Jersey A. C.; clerk of the course, J. T. Norton; referee of cycling, Frank Prial; umpires of cycling. T. J. Parker, J. L. Robertson, H. M. Cook and E. J. Darvel of the New Jersey A. C.; announcer, Raymond A. McGee, of this city. Many of the athletes of the New Jersey Interscholastic Association are practicing regularly on the grounds of the New Jersey A. C. and are preparing themselves not only for the Interscholastic meeting, but the Interscholastic team race that will be held on the New Jersey A. C. grounds in conjunction with the carnival of sports on Decoration Day, May 30th.

INS AND OUTS.

The baseball team of the Cranford A. C., of Cranford, has arranged the following games: May 16th, at Plainfield; 23d, Somerset B. B. C, at Somerville; 30th, afternoon, Ætnas, of Brooklyn, at Cranford; June 13th. LAWN TENNIS.

The tournament for the championship of New Jersey, which was scheduled to take place on the courts of the Hohokus Valley Tennis club at Ridgewood on June 17 has been changed to June 3. The Hohokus Valley has also decided to institute the ladies' championship of New Jersey, open to all comers, to be played at the same time. The men's championship this year will be open to all comers. Plainfield should be represented there.

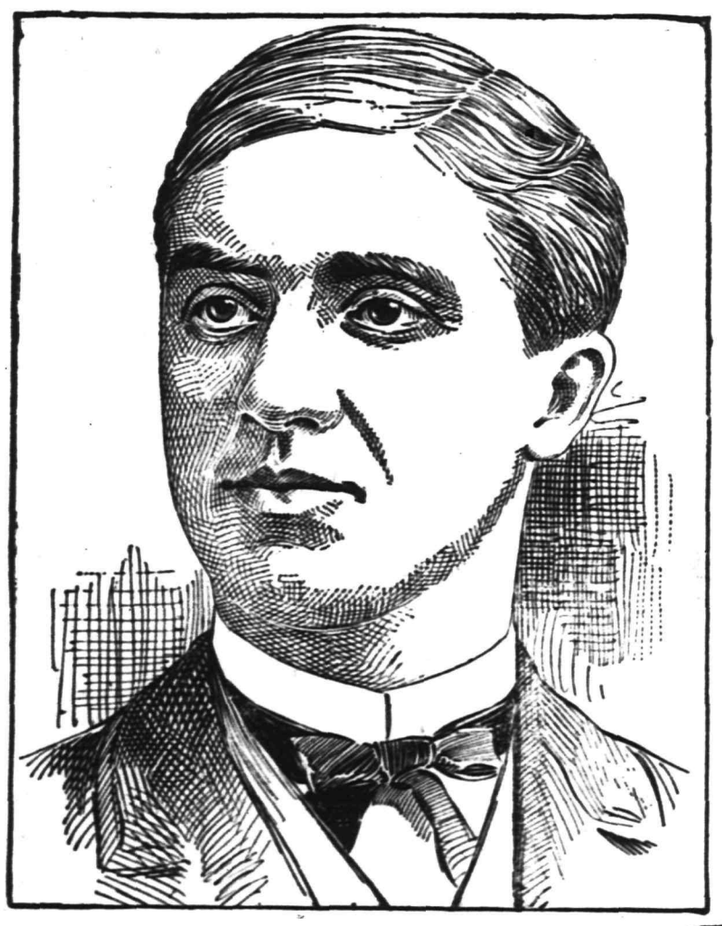
MAYOR OF ST. CHARLES.

One of the Thousands Whom Paine's Celery Compound Has Cured.



The following long and explicit letter from Hon. A. A. Bennett tells its own story.

Mayor's Office,
City of St Charles, Ill., March 4, 1896.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.: Gentlemen—I take much pleasure in being able to add my mite to the mass of testimony in praise of Paine's celery compound.

In November last I found myself much run down by overwork. For several weeks I had been obliged to work 18 hours daily out of the 24, and was in consequence in a state of physical and nervous exhaustion. At the suggestion of a friend I commenced the use of Paine's celery compound, with the result that my strength has steadily improved, and I find myself in far better health than I have known for years.

I believe also that it has enabled me to escape my periodical attack of rheumatism, as every season since that time with the advent of the cold, damp weather, I have suffered severely from that disease in a chronic form. So far this winter I have escaped without a single twinge of my old enemy. I very cheerfully recommend it to anyone in similar need in the full belief that it will be helpful in every case. Very sincerely yours.

A. A. Bennett.

If we all led out of door lives, went to bed at sundown, and had no consuming cares nor hard work to bring down the health, there might not be the urgent necessity that now exists for taking this best of spring remedies—Paine's celery compound.

But as the great majority of lives are ordered—with too much work, too much anxiety, too little sleep, by the time winter is over the drain on the nervous energy has become excessive the nerves are in sad need of being strengthened, and the blood of being purified.

Paine's celery compound absolutely meets this great modern necessity.

Paine's celery compound will bring back nerve strength and replace poor thin, pale blood with a ruddy, health-making stream.

It is the one great practical remedy advocated by all physicians.

It drives away that feeling of utter exhaustion that is so common in the spring, but no less dangerously significant because it is so common. It makes people well. It is a thousand times superior to all the ordinary sarsaparillas, nervines and tonics ever made

Paine's celery compound is the one real spring remedy known today that never fails to benefit. Get Paine's celery compound, and only Paine's celery compound if you wish to be well.

A LIFE OF GOOD DEEDS.

A BIBLICAL PARABLE MAKES A SERMON FOR ODD FELLOWS.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell Preaches to a Large Number and Draws Favorable Comparisons Between the Bible and the Order.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell preached a sermon to a large number of Odd Fellows last night in the Monroe Avenue M. E. chapel. He took his text from Galations 6:10: "As we have therefore opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith."

His remarks were as follows: The text to which I would call your attention is full of Apostalic force and fire. Aside from the intrinsic value of the blessed truth imbedded in the verse, it is a choice specimen of Pauline, logic and rhetoric. It is like a bouquet of exquisite beauty and skillful arrangement. It is like a diamond set in a rim of gold. It is like a Mount Blanc among the Alps. We shall gaze first upon the startling slope of this towering truth. Let us take the diamond from its setting and watch its dancing colors in the light. Let us inhale the fragrance of this central flower. Here it is, Paul's warm exhortation, "Let us do good." This is Bible's standard of life. We learn the same lesson from th character of Enoch who walked with God. From the life of Job whose great patience carried him through his terrible suffering to an old age of prosperity and peace.

It is in the touching story of David and Jonathan with its lessons of fidelity and friendship, and still more clearly in the parable of the good Samaritan. It is the advice of the Psalmist. "Trust in the Lord and do good, thus thou shalt dwell in the land and verily thou shalt be fed," again we have from the pen of Paul.

Odd Fellows, you are to be commended for going to the Bible for your models and for your wisdom. It is your awowed purpose in the world to do good. All men are beholding your good deeds; all heaven is applauding your work.

The only life worth living is the life adorned with good deeds. Without them we are like the fig tree, cursed by the Master, withered from the roots. A life without good deeds is like the grate without the fire. Without good deeds we are like the violin without strings and can never add one note of music to the melody of human happiness.

The other clauses of the verse serve to define and amplify this great central teaching and to illustrate well-known principles of Odd Fellowship.

"As we have therefore opportunity," may be taken in three ways, "According to the measure of opportunity." The only limit to our doing good is the necessary limit of opportunity. "Since we have opportunity." Opportunity is but another word for life. Opportunities crowd thickly about us from all sides. "While we have opportunity." We know not how soon the opportunity will be gone. It is absolutely essential to the welfare of the individual, and to the life of the church and to the preservation of your order that we be at work while it is called day for soon the night cometh when no man can work.

"Unto all men." Odd Fellows are again to be commended for running up the flag of toleration. You are battering down the walls of bigotry and exclusiveness. We are all members of a common brotherhood and we organize not to circumscribe our usefulness but to enlarge it.

We would not, however, forget the "especially" of our text. It was the part of common sense, good morals and good religion for these early Christians to be especially anxious about the household of faith. On the same principle your first duty as Odd Fellows is to your brothers in the order. Your first duty as husband and father is to your family. Your first duty as a Christian is to the church of Christ. Through Christ, the door, may we all enter into the rest that remaineth for the people of God.

Temperance Lecture.

J. W. O'Brien, of New York, editor of the Sunday Union and Catholic Times, will deliver a free temperance lecture in T. A. B. hall, West Fourth street, next Thursday evening, at 8 o'clock. Everyone who has the interest of temperance at heart is invited to be present. Mr. O'Brien is spoken of as a very able speaker.

The Boom Is On.

Silas D. Drake, the hustling real estate man, arrived in town Saturday and sold three plots on Mountain Park before sundown, and this morning sold two plots to parties in Elizabeth, and on his arrival in town this afternoon he interviewed A. L. Force, editor of The Press, and sold him a choice plot 100x200 feet.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE LIBRARY.

St. Stephen's Guild Hold a Profitable Sale and Tea.

The parish house of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, presented an attractive scene Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, when the sewing class of the Guild, composed of young girls, gave their second tea and sale for the benefit of the Sunday-school library. The attendance was excellent, and the articles for sale were readily disposed of. The members of the sewing class have become quite expert in the use of the needle, and their work is really meritorious. Everything on sale was made by the girls,and they take considerable pride in the sales. Mrs. E. P. T. Finch and Mrs. A. J. Beal received the guests and also poured tea.

The domestic table,which was brimful of household necessities, was in charge of Laura Christiansen and Mamie Erickson, while the fancy table was presided over by Louise Peterson and Betty Bartlow. Anna Borrup looked after the cake, and Nellie Clarkson, the fruit. A feature was a table filled with all sorts of bags for household use. This was in charge of Anna Bartlow.

At the last tea and sale nearly $25 was cleared, and an effort is being made to raise $65. Miss Florence R. Beale had a general oversight of the affair and assisted very much in making it a success.

SURPRISED AT DUNELLEN.

Chandler Riker Talks About the Extension of the Street Railway.

Chander Riker, of Newark, president of the Mountain Park Inn, was in town Saturday and together with Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway, drove to Johnston's drive to select a route for the proposed extension of the road to the hotel. The result of their investigation will be made known later. In speaking about the proposed extension into Dunellen, Mr. Riker said he was somewhat surprised at the attitude of some of the Dunellen officials. Heretofore they were inclined to treat the company kindly and wanted no more than what was right.

He also said the New Market and South Plainfield people were urging the company to extend their tracks through their towns and he thought it would result in a big boom in case the road ran in that direction.

WATCHMAN WAS AWAY.

During His Absence Officer Rockafellow Tried the Door—Hot Argument.

John P. Emmons, the mason and builder, who has the work at the First National Bank building, has for sometime employed a man to watch the building nights. Of late there has been several complaints made that the man did not attend strictly to business.Saturday evening the watchman left the building for a time and went down Front street toward Madison avenue. While he was returning Night Watchman Geo. Rockafellow tried the back door to see if it was locked and while doing this the other watchman appeared and wanted to know what business he had in trying the doors. The result was a heated discussion, and the bank watchman did not hesitate to use any word that entered his mind. He was threatened with arrest but the threat was not carried out.

BARRY'S BADGE ASKED FOR.

Mayor Hegeman Found That the Borough Officer Was Guilty.

The case of Special Marshal Wm. Barry, of the borough, has been settled by the police committee,and Mayor Hegeman has asked for his badge. It will be remembered that it was claimed that he assaulted Edward Vanduary at the Arlington Hotel recently. The case was taken to the Somerset county court, and the evidence was strongly in favor of Vandury, hence the authorities have asked for Barry's badge.

—The Young Ladies Missionary society of the First Baptist church, will hold its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock in one of the Bible class rooms.

DRANK THE RED WINE.

A CHURCH BROKEN INTO AND THE SACRAMENT IMBIBED OF.

Pitable Sight of an Intoxicated Boy Who Gained an Entrance to the Plymouth Brethren's Edifice and Drank the Wine

One of the most pitiable sights ever witnessed in this city,and undoubtedly the only one on record, transpired Saturday afternoon. Three boys, young in years, broke into the church on Grove street, formerly occupied by the First Church of Christ congregation, but now used by the Plymouth Brethern. Whether they had any object in view is not apparent, but after effecting an entrance they discovered a quantity of wine which is used for communion services. They were anxious to learn the contents, and after doing so, they indulged in the liquid. It tasted pretty good and one drink was not enough. They tarried until a considerable quantity was taken from the bottle. One of them was immediately affected, while the other two boys, escaped without any apparent harm.

The boys came out of the church into the street when it was noticed that the imbibing lad was unable to walk straight. The sidewalk was not wide enough to hold him and so he took the street. The other boys became frightened and ran to Barker's drug store. They told Mr. Barker about their comrade and then skipped. A woman happened to be passing and she noticed the boy lying in the street. Thinking he was ill she picked him up and took him to the drug store, where Mr. Barker examined him. He at once detected the odor of wine, and found that he was completely under the influence of it except that he was able to talk fairly well. Dr. Long was sent for and adminstered proper treatment, after which the boy was taken home. His father feels badly about the affair, and cannot account for his son's desire to act so.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

Successful Supper Given by the W. C. T. U. Saturday Evening.

A success and profitable supper was given in the W. C. T. U. rooms Saturday afternoon and evening from 5 to 11 o'clock, under the auspices of the Union. Every effort was put forth to make the afiair and enjoyable one and in this the committee did not fail. Promptly at 5 o'clock supper was ready and soon afterward patrons began to arrive. They were received cordially by the committee and made to feel at home.

A most excellent supper was served for twenty cents and no one complained of not having enough. During the hours that supper was served the Misses Cahoone rendered pleasing selections on the violin and piano.

The committee who arranged the supper and were in charge consisted of Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mrs. Isaac Brokaw, Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. R. K. Case, Mrs. Andrew Cox, Mrs. Ramsey Blair, Mrs. Cahoone and Miss May Cahoone.

SALVATION AND SONG.

A Special Service at the First M. E. Church Last Night.

A special musical service was held in the First M. E. church last evening. The regular choir was assisted by a male quartette, composed of Charles H. Angleman, Louis H. Bond, Fred Pope and Raymond A. McGee, who gave several impressive selections. The topic of the pastor, Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D., was "Salvation," which he divided into three parts, the sinner called, the sinner penitent, and the sinner saved. The services were made very impressive by the singing of appropriate hymns interspersed through Dr. Barnes' discourse. Dr. Barnes' remarks were very interesting and helpful, and selections read from the Scriptures added much to the services. There were several selections by the choir alone in which the solo parts were sung by Miss Margarette Barnes and Raymond A. McGee.

—An important meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, will be held in their rooms, Wednesday. Election of officers will take place.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

WANT A SETTLEMENT.

HEIRS OF WILLIMER J. LOWE ANXIOUS TO GET HIS MONEY.

It is Deposited in the First National Bank and Cannot Be Divided Until an Order is Received from the Chancellor

The New York World says this morn-that the widow of the late Willimer J. Lowe is going to issue a citation against Assemblyman W. R. Codington, who has been acting as attorney for the administrators, Mrs. W. J. Lowe and Hezekiah Hand. The story goes on to say that the widow has not received any of the money coming to her and that she is in want.

A Daily Press reporter met both Assemblyman Codington and Assemblyman Charles A. Reed this morning and learned the true facts of the case. Mr. Reed said that about one year ago the Chancellor ordered him to sell the hotel property located at Morristown, and belonging to the late Willimer J. Lowe.

The sale realized about $2,050 and was purchased by Thomas Lowe, a brother of the former owner. As the living brother had an interest in the property, according to law, one half of the whole value reverted back to him. The remaining half was placed in the First National Bank by Mr. Reed and is now there awaiting an order from the Chancellor to divide the money and give Mrs. Lowe her share.

Mr. Codington told the Press reporter that he was only acting as attorney for the administrators and had never held one penny of the money, neither had he received a penny for his services. He also said that nothing could be done until the Chancellor issued the necessary order.

Mr. Lowe was a well known Jersey politician. He died rather suddenly on New Year's eve 1893. He didn't leave a will and there was litigation over his estate between his brother, Thomas E. Lowe, of Morristown, and the widow. The Union County court sustained the widow's claim.

An Old Rounder Fined.

Marshal Hansen, of the borough, picked up one of Plainfield's "old rounders" on Grove street between 2 and 3 o'clock yesterday morning. He was full of whiskey and the officer took him to the lock up. This morning he was fined $5, which he paid, his employer advancing $3 of the amount in order to have the man finish a piece of work he was engaged in.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

—A light frost was very perceptible early this morning.

STRUCK BY A CYCLIST.

John Chandler Seriously Hurt By an Unknown and Reckless Rider.

John Chandler, of East Third street, who had about recovered from a severe illness, sustained serious injuries Saturday night which will keep him closely confined for some time. He had some business down town which he wanted to attend to, and it was his first appearance since his recovery. While crossing Somerset street, near the bridge, he was struck by a cycle rider with such force that he was knocked down and the rider was thrown from his wheel. The latter as quickly as possible regained his wheel and rode off, leaving Mr. Chandler in the road. Mr. Chandler's face was severely cut and bruised and one eye almost closed. The wheel struck him in the right side, making him exceedingly lame and sore.

He was taken home and Dr. Lowrie called. The wounds were dressed and the patient made as comfortable as possible. Today his left side is affected and he suffers great pain. It was impossible for him to tell who the cycler was, as he disappeared so quickly.

FROM CUPID TO JUSTICE.

Attendance at a Wedding Proves Disastrous to an Italian.

An Italian, whose name somewhat resembles Aggie Lagundi, went to a wedding in the Italian shanties near Netherwood yesterday. They had a glorious time in their own way, and music, dancing and beer reigned supreme. Then the Plainfield man, Lagundi, started for home in a badly intoxicated condition. A policeman saw him and took him to the lockup where he was searched and a loaded revolver found in his pocket. When he was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning, he had completely forgotten the existence of the revolver, and pleaded not guilty to the charge of caprying concealed weapons. The tell tale pistol was produced and the Judge pronounced him guilty on that charge as well as that of being drunk and disorderly. He was given his choice between a $15 fine or forty days in jail.

SAVE THE ELMS.

To Do This the Elm Leaf Bug Will Have to be Destroyed.

During the past few years the elm tree beetle, a little yellowish creature, not more than a fourth of an inch long, has done a tremendous amount of injury to the elm trees in this city. In its larval stage it does its most harm. When it preys upon the tender leaves, causing them to turn brown and finally to fall from the tree.

This insect can be exterminated in its larval state by applying a solution of Paris green and slacked lime to the trees themselves, and later, about the first of July, in its pupal state by saturating the ground under the elms by a kerosene emulsion. For further information concerning this treatment, see Bulletin 121 of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station. This report may be obtained from the Park Committee of the Town Improvement Association of which Mrs. E. W. McCarthy is chairman.

MILK-RATE WAR.

To Offset an Exorbitant Advance in the Price of Ice.

It looks as if there would be a milk-rate war in Newark as an offset to the exorbitant advance in ice prices. One hundred milk vendors from every section of Essex and Union counties met in Irvington to canvass the situation. Facts were produced showing that the Alderney Dairy Company had commenced cutting prices. This concern has twenty wagons and thousands of patrons.

Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., of Newark, were accused of advancing the interests of the Alderney Company, but sent in a denial.

Assurances were received from the Grocers' Protective Association promising the milk dealers every assistance in retaliation.

Another meeting will be held at an date, when measures will be taken to fight the price cutters by lowering the present delivery milk rates.

Talked Against War.

Samuel Emlen, of Germantown, preached at the Friends' meeting on Front street, yesterday, from the text, "Ye Are His Witnesses." He said that nations could never bear testimony to their trust in Christ while they prepared for war with each other.

Schedule of Newark Train.

Beginning Wednesday, April 29th, a through train will be run from Somerville to Newark and return. The train will leave this city at 7:50 a. m., and arrive in Newark at 8:32. Returning, it will leave Newark at 5:25 p. m., and reach this city at 6:09.

—A special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. will be held this evening.

LIVES WERE IN PERIL.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A JERSEY CENTRAL EXPRESS TRAIN.

The Driving Rod of the Engine Broke While Crossing the Bay Bridge—The Cars Came Within an Inch of Going Over

Three hundred souls were within an ace of going to eternity Saturday owing to the breaking of the driving rod of an engine as it was crossing the trestle over the Newark Bay at a high rate of speed. The locomotive was lifted from the track, and the forward truck went over the guard which protects the rails, and the wheels were within one inch of the edge of the ties. The cowcatcher projected over the great expanse of water, and if the train had not been stopped there might have been one of the greatest railroad tragedies of the age to report, as there is nothing to prevent trains leaping into the bay should they get off the track. The bay is a mile and a quarter wide, and no help could get to the spot.

The train left Somerville at 9 o'clock a. m., and when it reached Elizabeth at 10:05 it was well filled with passengers among whom were scores of women going to New York on shopping bent. It makes no stop until it reaches Jersey City, and it usually travels at about forty-five miles an hour.

Across the trestle it was rushing, with the Philadelphia flyer close at its heels, when suddenly there was a report like that of the discharge of a pistol. The train rocked from side to side, and passengers were forced into close and informal acquaintance with one another. There was a lurch or two, and finally the train stopped.

"Git out, boys; git out for your lives!" cried the brakemen, as they rushed frantically through the cars. Then there was pandemonium. The women began to scream, and the men had to carry some of them bodily from the train.

"What shall I do? I've got to buy a new bonnet, and I can't die yet," wailed a young Plainfield dame as she stepped from one tie to another, and was in constant fear of falling between them into the water below.

The good looking conductor gave her solace by saying that it was a narrow squeak, but that the danger was all over and that a train would soon come along and obviate the necessity of walking to Jersey City.

One man,a stout German fish dealer named Muller, who hails from Plainfield, also became so frightened at being thrown full length on the floor of the smoking car that he tried to get through a window in his haste to escape.

He became wedged and it required the combined efforts of three train hands to get him back into the car again.

The engineer, "Pat" Lynch, had a narrow escape from having his head crushed. The linch pin, which had broken off, flew back through the cab window and struck him on the head. His thick golf cap broke the blow, but nevertheless he had a bad bruise to show.

The engine was right across the track, and the steam was blowing through the valves with a deafening roar. The draw bar had become disconnected from the forward driving wheel and fallen to the track. It caught one of the ties,and the impetus of the train forced the engine up in the air and off the track. The track was twisted and torn for some distance, and the ties for several hundred yards were forced into the bay.

The reason that the train was unloaded so unceremoniously was a fear on the part of the trainmen that the Philadelphia flyer, which travels from Philadelphia to Jersey City in an hour and forty minutes, could not be flagged in time to prevent her from crashing into the derailed train.

For a minute or two the passengers had their hearts in their mouths, because they knew that if the Philadelphia train should collide with the one lying helpless before it they could not avoid witnessing a gigantic accident. It happened, however, that the flyer was two minutes late.

It was switched to another track and flagged to pick up the passengers who stood clustered on the bridge. They reached Jersey City ten minutes late, but it was ten minutes of terrible anxiety.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th,I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. CYCLONE IN KANSAS

Five Killed, Three Fatally Injured and Seventeen Others Hurt.

DAMAGE TO PROPERTY ENORMOUS

Every Member of Four Families Wounded. Tearing Through a Farming Community, It Left Nothing Standing—Horses and Cattle Perished.

Clay Center, Kan., April 27.—The terrible cyclone which sped through Clay county late Saturday night dealt death and destruction on every hand. As far as known this morning five people were killed, three fatally wounded and seventeen injured. The doctors have not returned from the scene of the disaster. It is known, however, that every member of the families of John Morris, F. Welkin, Peter Anderson and Henry Gardner was hurt, and three of them have wounds said to be fatal.

Damage to Property Enormous.

A large number of horses and cattle were killed and the damage to farm property is enormous. The cyclone started about six miles south of Clifton and went in a northeasterly direction for twelve or fifteen miles and then lost its force by spreading. It passed about half way between Clifton and Morganville. Its track varied from 150 yards to a quarter of a mile in width. It tore through a farming community and nothing is left standing. Houses and barns were wrecked, trees torn up or broken, fences leveled and hay stacks blown in every direction. The cyclone was followed by a terrific rain storm which lasted several hours, flooding the devastated district.

Carried Half a Mile by the Wind.

The storm struck Peter Anderson's home at 9:30 p. m. This was about a mile from the starting point. The house was demolished in an instant. Every member of the Anderson family was injured. When they had extricated themselves from the debris they discovered that Anderson's grandchild was missing. The dead body of the child was found in a ravine half a mile away. It evidently had been carried there by the wind. Anderson alarmed the neighbors who lived out of the path of the storm and search was commenced for victims, but little headway was made in the rain.

Pinned Down by Wreckage.

Couriers were sent to Clifton and Morganville for doctors, but it was daylight before they arrived. Many of the injured lay all night in agony, pinned down by wreckage, while others crawled or hobbled across the country to neighboring houses. In several instances persons were lifted into the air by the cyclone and carried for a distance and then suddenly dropped. Buildings also were lifted up and hurled to the ground with great force. The wife and daughter of John Morris were reading when the shock came. The house was divided. The ladies managed to get out, when the wind picked them up, carried them 200 yards and dropped them on a pile of straw. The people for miles around gathered at the different points where damage had been done and rendered assistance in every way possible. The track of the storm resembled a piece of ground leveled with a roller, It is believed much damage was done in the vicinity of Palmer, Washington county, but the details cannot be learned. It is impossible at this time to estimate the damage to buildings and other property.

SPANISH ELECTIONS.

Large Government Majority Returned to the Senate—No Excitement.

Madrid, April 27.—The elections for members of the senate were held yesterday without any excitement. It is known that a large government majority has been returned. Prime Minister Canovas del Castillo will now hasten the Cuban tariff reforms, the scheme of which will shortly be issued.

Transvaal Treason Cases.

London, April 27.—The Telegraph to-day publishes a dispatch from Pretoria saying it is reported that the arrangement under which certain of the members of the Johannesburg reform committee pleaded guilty of treason towards the state provides for the infliction of a nominal fine on sixty odd members of the committee.

Killed Herself at the Aged of 75.

New York, April 27.—Mrs. Anna Snow, aged 75 years, committed suicide yesterday by jumping from a second story window of the house 58 East Eighty-sixth street. Lately both her eyes were blinded by cataracts, and it is thought that sickness and her age had weaked her mind.

Dervishes Suffering for Want of Food.

Suakim, April 27.—It is reported that the Dervishes under Osman Digna, who are at Horasab, are suffering greatly from want of food. There have been a number of desertions from his force. Arab messengers assert that it is the intention of Osman Digna to retreat to Adarama.

A Diplomatic Masterpiece.

London, April 27.—The Times to-day publishes a dispatch from Pretoria which says that President Kruger's reply declining to visit England to discuss Transvaal matters is a diplomatic masterpiece.

Ex-Prime Minister Parkes Dead.

Sydney, N. S. W., April 27.—Sir Henry Parkes, formerly prime minister of this colony, died here yesterday from bronchitis and inflammation of the lungs.

WORK IN CONGRESS.

Prospects of a Long Tariff Discussion in the Senate.

Washington, April 27.—The senate will probably continue to devote most of its time this week to the consideration of appropriation bills, being far behind the house in the disposition of these bills. Mr. Hale will call up the naval bill to-day. Mr. Frye expects to report the river and harbor bill either to-day or to-morrow at the latest, and it is the expectation that both these bills will be passed before the week is ended. Mr. Sherman may renew his attempt to secure the passage of the bill to repeal the free alcohol for the arts clause of the tariff bill. Should he do so Senators Lodge, Chandler, Platt and Pritchard will vigorously oppose him, and it is openly said that if this matter is pressed it will involve an indefinite prolongation of the session and the opening of a general tariff discussion. Meanwhile, Mr. Peffer's bond resolution, now divested of nearly all its salient features, holds its place as the unfinished business, giving way from day to day for the consideration of appropriation bills. Wednesday Mr. Vilas will present resolutions accepting the statue of Pierre Marquette, and will make a speech on the resolution.

House of Representatives.

It is probable that the general pension bill will be brought to a vote in the house this afternoon. Under the operation of an order to be reported by the committee on rules, Gen. Henderson, chairman of the committee on judiciary, expects that the house will then take up the bankruptcy bill and discuss it for two or three days. Mr. Babcock, chairman of the District of Columbia committee, to which committee Monday's session is assigned under the rules, says that if deprived of that day's session, his committee will insist upon some other day in the week in which to press district bills. Aside from the pension and bankruptcy bills, the programme of the house is uncertain and dependent upon developments from day to day.

THE CONTRACTORS' FAULT.

Cause of the Terrible Mine Disaster at Chihuahua, Mexico.

El Paso, Tex., April 27.—The latest news of the catastrophe at the Santa Eualia mines near Chihuahua, Mex., last Friday, is to the effect that eighty-five men were working in the mines when it caved in, burying sixty-seven of the men, all of whom were Mexicans. Recently contracts were let to a number of Mexican miners and laborers to take ore from the old workings at so much per ton. In their eagerness to secure large quantities of ore with the least labor these contractors began tearing down the ore pillars which supported the roof of the mine. They also cut away masses of ore that had been left between the chambers. Thus weakened, the ground began to give away at 2 o'clock Friday morning and almost instantly sixty-seven of the men at work under ground were cut off from escape. Gov. Ahumada is on the ground with a large force of men working to recover the buried. Thirty-seven men have been recovered, ten dead, seven dying and twenty fatally hurt. At last accounts there were thirty men still in the ruins, with no hope of recovering them alive.

HILLIS BROTHERS LYNCHED.

Masked Mob Overpowers the McMinnville, Tenn., Jailor and Removes Prisoners.

Nashville, Tenn., April 27.—Fifteen masked men entered the residence of the jailor at McMinnville, Tenn., yesterday, overpowered the jailor, took his keys and entered the jail. They were after William and Victor Hillis, who were awaiting trial charged with the murder of Carroll Martin, in Vanburen county in August, 1894. Without giving the Hillis boys time to don any clothing, the masked men then proceeded to their horses and, mounting, rode quickly and silently out of town to a point about five miles southeast of McMinnville, near Shells Ford, where they hanged the two brothers to the same tree.

EMPEROR WILLIAM IRRITATED.

Wants England To Declare Neutrality in Connection with the Transvaal.

London, April 27.—A dispatch from Berlin says it is reported that Emperor William is extremely irritated by the speech made by Colonial Secretary Chamberlain at the Constitutional club on Wednesday night last, in which he said that Great Britain must be paramount in South Africa and not allow any foreign intervention. His majesty, it is said, has instructed Count von Hatzfeldt, the German ambassador, to secure from Lord Salisbury a declaration of neutrality in connection with the Transvaal and Delagoa bay.

Renewal of Massacres Feared.

London, April 27.—The Daily News to-day publishes a dispatch from Constantinople saying that 200 leading Armenians have been arrested at Moosh on the pretext that they were implicated in the murder of a Kurd that occurred in 1894. The dispatch adds that the embassies fear a renewal of the massacres at Sassoun.

Arrested for a Double Murder.

La Plate, Md., April 27.—Jos. Cocking, husband of Mrs. Fannie Cocking, and brother-in-law of Miss Daisy Miller, who were killed in their home at Hill-Top, was placed under arrest yesterday after a jury of inquest rendered a verdict that, in their opinion, he was guilty of the double murder.

A Labor Candidate Elected.

Adelaide, April 27.—In the elections in South Australia for member of the colonial legislature, Mr. Batchelor, a labor candidate, defeated the Hon. C. C. Kingston, the prime minister. The vote stood: Mr. Batchelor, 1,773; Mr. Kingston, 1,707.

THE POLITICAL FIELD

Gen. Grosvenor Figures That McKinley Has 444 Votes.

MR. MANLEY CLAIMS 161 FOR REED

The Ohio Man Within Reach of a Majority, According to His Friends—How the Friends of the Speaker Look Upon the Race.

Washington, April 27.—Gen. Grosvenor, in his regular weekly statement of McKinley votes, declines, as usual, to make any figures upon other people's strength, confining his figures to a comparison of the McKinley vote and the number necessary to a choice, 456. He also declines to discuss the accuracy of the tables of votes of anybody, and says: "I rely with absolute confidence upon ultimate results to vindicate my figures." McKinley's strength, as Gen. Grosvenor gives it, stands to-day at 444. He further states: "I do not place any votes in Connecticut or New Hampshire in the McKinley table at this time, although I see that he is credited with three Connecticut delegates. I prefer to leave those states to make their status when the roll of the convention is called, and I may add in this same connection that there are a considerable number of delegates not classed as McKinley men in other states than Connecticut and New Hamphire who may be relied upon to protect McKinley from any combination looking to his defeat.

A Pleasant Prospect.

"Now, looking forward the prospect is very pleasant. There are about 200 delegates to be elected hereafter, as follows: Alabama 4, Georgia 4, Illinois 12, Vermont 8, Arizona 6, California 18, Michigan 26, Nevada 6, West Virginia 8, Montana 6, Missouri 16, Delaware 6, Colorado 8, Washington 8, Idaho 6, North Carolina 18. Total 166. And the balance, making up about 200, are scattered by districts, over the entire country. It will be observed by a careful analysis of the votes yet to come, that it is a modest and conservative statement to claim that McKinley will have 125 of those votes and probably more. Thus, it will be seen that my statement that the first of May would see McKinley within reach of a majority was not only not an exaggeration but has been verified by results and will be conclusively demonstrated by actual figures when the delegates are elected."

Mr. Manley's Figures.

Mr. Manley of Maine gives out the following figures of Reed's strength: "Out of 250 delegates thus far chosen in the block of states north of the Potomac and east of Ohio—a block of states containing a great proportion of the manufacturing and commercial interests of the country—Gov. McKinley has secured only nine votes. McKinley's percentage of the delegates chosen remains practically as it did one week ago. Whole number elected 711. For Thomas B. Reed, 161; for Gov. McKinley, 250; for all other candidates, 217; doubtful and contested, 83. There are in many instances contested delegates, and it does not seem proper that prior to the action of the national committee, which has to act as a committee on credentials for the temporary call of the convention, and prior to the action of the credentials committee of the convention, that anyone has the right to assume what delegates will be seated in the convention, and, therefore, I have not presumed to claim how any delegates will vote, but have preferred to place them where they belong, in the doubtful column. In no instance have I anticipated the election of any delegates. This statement only relates to the delegates now actually elected."

THE NEW CUBAN LOAN

Its Success Highly Elates the Junta in New York.

BIDS FOR MORE THAN $9,000,000

This Money Expected To Go a Long Way Toward Freeing the Island of Her Oppressors—Spain's Early Defeat Predicted.

New York, April 27.—The members of the Cuban junta in this city are highly elated over the success of the new Cuban loan, and it is said that Senor Palma intends to use this extraordinary increase of the Cuban fund to send at once to Cuba several expeditions which can provide Gomez and Maceo with means enough to end the war soon. The bids asked were for $2,000,000 of bonds of the republic of Cuba, and when the letters, numbering several hundred, were opened, it was found that proposals had been made for more that $9,000,000 of the bonds, the offers varying from 25 per cent. of the face value to par. An estimate made by Senor Guerra shows that the average bids were 62½ per cent.

Americans Backing Their Belief.

A prominent member of the junta, speaking this morning of this financial success, said that it was an evidence of the view with which Americans generally regarded the struggle in Cuba. He said that people with money to invest in large amounts were generally very cautious, and that the amount bid showed that the people of the United States believed, with justice, that the Cubans were bound to finally oust the Spaniards from the soil of Cuba. This had been the belief of Cubans and the friends of Cuba from the time the war began, and they were now backing their belief in a very substantial manner. It was very gratifying, he said, to know that the cause of Cuba had not only the sympathy of Americans, but also their financial assistance on its side.

Predicts Early Cuban Success.

When this large sum of money had been paid in and transmitted to Cuba in the shape of arms, ammunition, provisions, clothing and medical supplies, he had no doubt that the Spaniards would be driven from the island by the end of the year. In fact, he felt confident enough to predict that the war would be ended by the defeat of the Spanish before the year was out, in view of the fact that, while Cuba's resources were continually on the inerease, those of Spain were declining rapidly and her absolute and final bankruptcy was only a question of a short time. When that event came to pass Spain, even if not driven from Cuba by force of arms, would be compelled to evacuate the island by sheer financial inability to any longer maintain an army there.

BATTLE OF GUANAJA.

Additional Details of the Severe Defeat of the Spanish Troops.

New York, April 27.—The correspondent of the New York Herald at Santiago de Cuba sends the following news concerning the recent battle near Guanaja: "Col. Gonzalez had received word that Gen. Oliver's troops would pass near Campana. He arranged an ambush of rapid-fire guns which would sweep the road. The Spanish troops were stopped on the road toward Guanaja. Many were killed by the fire of the cannon and the rest took to their heels in awful rout, followed by the insurgent cavalry. It is difficult to describe the panic. The Cubans captured the officers' horses and mules loaded with clothes, food, arms, ammunition and correspondence. The Spaniards ran to the beach, which was near, to take boat for Remedios. They could not retreat by land with their killed and wounded. Gonzalez's few men could not divide so as to keep their ground and pursue at the same time. They knew the Spaniards would stop to burn country houses as they passed, but they had previously prepared shells in the houses, which exploded, killing many troops."

SITUATION IN CUBA.

Views of J. Frank Clark, at Home from the Island.

New York, April 27.—J. Frank Clark, the staff correspondent of the United Press, who has returned to New York after an absence of five months in Cuba, in speaking of the situation in that island, says that Cuba is surely slipping away from Spain. The latter country is responsible for some of the vilest atrocities ever committed. He says that of Spain's regular troops, 25,000 have succumbed to disease and bullets during the year, and 15,000 are in the hospitals or have been relieved from duty. The insurgent forces, according to Mr. Clark, now number about 35,000 to 40,000 men.

Theosophists in Convention.

New York, April 27.—The second annual convention of the Theosophical society in America began yesterday in the concert hall of Madison Square garden. The attendance was very large. Theosophists from all parts of the United States being present. The convention was called to order by acting president, Dr. J. D. Buck, of Cincinnati.

FRIGHTENED THE TURKS

American Charge d'Affaires Secures the Release of Rev. Mr. Knapp.

Washington, April 27.—Advices received from Constantipole give the following account of the manner in which John W. Riddle, American charge d'affaires in that city, secured the release of Rev. George Knapp. On Friday Mr. Riddle received advices from Iskanderoon that the Turkish authorities refused to deliver Rev. George Knapp, the American missionary who was recently expelled from Bitlis on charges of sedition and who was to come to Constantipole for trial, and were determined to send him away from the country on the European steamer that sailed from Iskanderoon Friday evening. Mr. Riddle informed Sir Phillip Currie, the British ambassador, and M. Cambon, the French ambassador, of the situation, and went to the porte where he showed the written promise of Tewfik Pasha, the foreign minister, to deliver Mr. Knapp to the American legation for trial. He advised Tewfik Pasha that it would be better for him to keep this promise, and at the same time telegraphed to the American consular agent at Iskanderoon and Mersine to call for an American cruiser if it should be necessary to secure the delivery of Mr. Knapp. These open telegrams frightened the authorities and Mr. Riddle now sends dispatches stating that Mr. Knapp has been released.

THE PAPAL SUCCESSION.

Division of the Candidates for the Tiara Into Two Groups.

Vienna, April 27.—Recurring to the policy of the dreibund in regard to the succession of the papacy, the object being to secure the election of a pope to succeed Leo XIII. who will be favorable to the interests of the dreibund and less inclined to democracy, as well as less friendly to France, than the present pontiff, it is stated that advices from high Catholic sources divide the probable candidates for the tiara into two groups. The first of these, following the present policy of Leo XIII., includes Cardinals Svampa, Ferrari and Santi, and the second, with a policy supposed to be less politically biased and, therefore, more favorable to the dreibund, is headed by Cardinal Galimberto. This group includes Cardinals Vincenzo, Serafino, Vannutelli and the brothers Capacelatro. The two ablest members of the Sacred college, Cardinals Parocchi and Rampolla, are not considered, for various reasons, as being eligible. The question of papal succession is certainly stirring the secret depths of diplomatic life.

GERMANS JEALOUS.

Awarding of a Contract to an American Sculptress Arouses Adverse Criticism.

Berlin, April 27.—Dr. Von Stephan, minister of the imperial postoffice, has charged the American sculptress, Mrs. Cadwallader Gould, with the modelling of two great allegorical figures representing respectively posts and telegraphs, to be placed upon the postoffice building at Magdeburg. The German sculptors, through the Vossische Zeitung and other newspapers, have protested against this award of the work.

PERISHED IN THE FLAMES.

Husband and Wife Burned to Death in Their Home.

Middletown, N. Y., April 27.—In the fire which destroyed the house of Bernard Cullen, situated near Chester, yesterday, Cullen and his wife perished in the flames. Morris Cullen, a son, and George Thompson, a relative, escaped from the burning structure by jumping from a third story window. It is thought that the fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp.

THE FRENCH ORISIS.

Rumor Again in Circulation That President Faure Meditates Resigning.

Paris, April 27.—Now that M. Sarrien has confessed his inablity to form a ministry, the rumor is again current that President Faure meditates resigning. It is believed that a radical cabinet, with M. Goblet at its head, is inevitable, or that M. Constans or M. Dupuy will be called upon to form a ministry and the chambers dissolved.

Crew of the Sheepscot Landed.

New London, Conn., April 27.—Casey & Sherwood have received news of the loss of the schooner Sheepscot, Capt. Brown, which left Greens Landing, Me., March 13, with a cargo of granite. The Sheepscot encountered a storm and was driven from her course. In a tempest she took fire, burned to the water's edge and sank. Her crew was picked up by a steamer and landed at a Russian port.

Daly-McCoy Fight.

Buffalo, April 27.—Jim Daly, who is matched to meet "Kid" McCoy for twelve rounds before the new Manhattan Athletic club in New York on May 7, is rapidly getting into condition. At the driving park where Daly is training there is a well furnished gymnasium, and the running track also affords facilities for a boxer to improve his wind.

Crushed to a Shapeless Mass.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 27. — Mrs. Christina McLeod, 67 years of age, was run over and instantly killed by a trolley car yesterday afternoon at the corner of Broadway and Rodney street. Her body was crushed to a shapeless mass. The motorman and conductor were arrested.

OF GRAVE CONCERN

German Views of the Present Crisis in France.

HER EXTERNAL RELATIONS IN DANGER

Ultimate Conflict Between the Two Chambers Nearing the Inevitable—Germany Intends To Surpass France in the Matter of Rifles.

Berlin, April 27.—The prospect of a collision between the French senate and the chamber of deputies resulting from changes in the constitution placing no control over the power of a single chamber is regarded in responsible government quarters here as a matter of the gravest concern. The mere resignation of a cabinet upon a party question has long been considered a matter of small moment, but the present situation threatens to shake the stability of the external relations of the French republic. In an article commenting upon this state of affairs the National Zeitung holds to the belief that henceforth the permanency of the policy of France is impossible to rely upon and that sooner or later the internal troubles of the republic will be reflected upon the relations of France with foreign powers. The Vossische Zeitung expresses fear that the constitution of France will not furnish President Faure with adequate means to avert an ultimate conflict between the two chambers, though he may be able to hit upon temporary expedients to delay the struggle, which is nearing the inevitable, and the interested European powers ought to exert their influence to the end of securing a new form of government for France. The feeling of uneasiness inspiring these and similar comments by the press is due to belief that the existence of the senate restrains the dangerous impulses of the democratic chamber. Whatever political stripe of government France has had since 1870 not one of them has ceased to prepare to take the forefront in a conflict for the restoration of her military supremacy in Europe.

Germany Intends To Surpass France.

It has been learned by the German war office that the Bourgeoise ministry some time before its fall had decided to ask the chambers for a credit of 470,000,000 francs for the purpose of supplying the army with quick-firing guns of a pattern superior to any that has yet been produced. This, however, was not a surprise to the war office, which had already provided designs for a new quick-firing gun supposed to be a great deal more effective than the French weapon. The invention has long been in the possession of the war office and has been kept a complete secret, the government being reluctant to order the construction of the guns, as a radical change in the artillery equipment of the army would involve an outlay of 200,000,000 marks. Now that France is likely to obtain a new and formidable gun it is imperative that the reichstag must be asked for the necessary credits to strengthen the artillery equipment of Germany. Confidence is felt in official circles that the reichstag will recognize the fact that the artillery of the military service urgently requires the credit and that upon hearing the ministerial statement upon the subject may also grant a naval credit, and so bring both the military and naval service up to date.

Opinions on South African Affairs.

The officially inspired press, speaking freely on the subject, are giving out an accurate expression of official and public opinion as to the relations of Great Britain in South Africa, which the papers declare are not alone confined to encroachments upon the Transvaal, but upon the whole Afrikander interests, to which Germany, these journals assert, is now inclined to tender moral support and even diplomatic intervention. The Vossische Zeitung blames Mr. Chamberlain, the British colonial secretary, for want of tact in dealing with President Kruger of the Transvaal republic, for insulting the Boer administration by accusing it of wholesale corruption, and for acting throughout as though it were an absolute fact that South Africa is going to pieces. "It is an extremely serious matter," the paper continues, "to find that the words 'race war' are current throughout the Cape. If a conflict takes place between England and the Transvaal the British possessions in South Africa will be at stake." The Altdeutsche Blatter boldly contends that the Germans and the Boers ought to hold together and force back English invasion and forever make South Africa a great field for German immigration, where Germans could preserve their nationality and give solid support to German doctrines, theories and interests everywhere.

Waterbury, Conn., April 27.—Charles H. Parks of Naugatuck, a prominent contractor and builder, was probably fatally injured yesterday by a colt that he was breaking becoming unmanageable and Mr. Parks being pulled over the buckboard and thrown head foremost to the ground. Artificial apoplexy was superinduced, causing complete paralysis of the right side. He will probably die.

Somebody played tag in the Eighth District Republican convention and Riker collared the nomination, remarks the Newark News.

The new woman in New York is to have a club house all to herself. Think of the excuses for tardiness that the old man will have to accept when the thing is in full blast.

An Elizabeth real estate dealer says that the reason there are so few sales of land in that city is that the prices are too high. But a better description is this interrogation: Why go to Elizabeth when you can come to Plainfield?

Up in New York State farmers are burning potatoes for fuel, because they are cheaper than coal. Down here in New Jersey farmers say that they are willing to give them away in order to clear out their cellars. It is a sad condition for the farmers to face.

Franklin Murphy seems to have decided that Mayor Lentz can make him the next Governor of New Jersey, while Foster M. Voorhees appears to have come to the conclusion that Frank Bergen and William H. Corbin will perform a like feat for him.—World.

There is something winning in the personality of ex-Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts. His ideas of Government are the accepted ones of the eastern States, and ought to make him strong with the people. By established precedent his age is against him, but today people are beginning to realize that it is not always the oldest man who knows how to do best. But "favorite sons" seldom show up well in the convention. It is a difficult thing to enthuse people for someone whose reputation is almost local to their native State.

LOST CHILDREN.

Two Little People Stray Away and Are Found By Officers.

Annetta Wilson, the two-year-old daughter of Wm. Wilson, of 238 East Fourth street, was lost on East Fifth street, near Franklin place, yesterday. The child was walking in the middle of the road, and came near being run over by a horse and wagon, when Detective J. H. Blackford picked the child up and returned the little one to her parents.

Frank Laufer, the three-year-old son of John E. Laufer, of 955 South Second street, left his home yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock and that was the last seen of him till 5 o'clock when a woman found him at the corner of LaGrande avenue and Berckman street. He told her he was looking for his father. The woman took him to Patrolman Hartpence's house, where he was found by Roundsman Frederickson, who was looking for him. The latter secured a horse and wagon and took the little lad home, where his parents were anxiously waiting for him.

Couldn't Agree.

Wm. Wilson and James Corrigan indulged in an altercation in the rear of French's mill, Saturday night. Wilson had been drinking and did something that displeased Corrigan. Both were arrested and Corrigan was sentenced this morning to pay $5 or spend twenty days in jail. Wilson was given his choice between a fine of $8 or 30 days.

THEATRICAL.

Probably no new play has been received with such universal commendation as C. E. Callahan's Tennessee comedy "A Romance of Coon Hollow." On its original production in Chicago the critics of that city, while noting many minor defects, were a unit predicting its success. The New York press was equally unanimous in commending the piece during its run at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, and from Boston to New Orleans there has not been a dissenting opinion on the merits of the play. "The soft southern drawl," which permeates the language of the characters had a particular charm for Baltimore and the southern cities. The thorough human nature embodied in the personages of the play, appeal to the very best taste. Joined to this "A Romance of Coon Hollow" reveals magnificent scenery and effects, novel and unique electrical features, and carries a troupe of singing and dancing darkies, male and female. Two quartettes furnish its musical adjuncts, and a well-selected dramatic company interprets its roles. All the scenery used is carried by the show, which is one of the largest on the road. "A Romance of Coon Hollow" is announced for the ushers' benefit at Music Hall, Thursday night.

A PLAINFIELDER'S RISE.

William H. Dunn Now Visiting Superintendent of the New York City Schools.

"The School," a paper published in New York city, has in its last issue an excellent portrait of William Henry Harrison Dunn, a native and former resident of this city, but now visiting superintendent of the New York public schools. The following sketch accompanies the picture and will be read with interest by many residents of Plainfield.

"Among the principals who come into the New York schools with the new district from Westchester, is Wm Henry Harrison Dunn, one of the most conscientious and painstaking. He has devoted himself to the profession of teaching as a life work. Mr. Dunn's genial and kindly nature has made him at all times a favorite with the pupils and the parents. He comes of old American stock of Scotch-Irish ancestry, having been born at Plainfield, Union county, where his family have had their homes since Colonial times, previous to the Revolution. Mr. Dunn was educated at Alfred University, New York. He began his studies for the ministry, but becoming interested in teaching, he determined to devote himself to that profession. He has been one of the most active teachers in the Weschester County Institutes, and with Mr. Delvin, he acted for several years as an assistant to State Commissioner Sandford in the direction of these institutes. Mr. Dunn is a close and careful student with progressive ideas of education. He is a member of the Schoolmaster's Club of of the Pedagogical Society and the Teacher's Association and of the central committee of the last named association. In his suburban home he is a citizen in good standing, a member of Huguenot Lodge, F. and A. M., and of Bronx Council, Royal Arcanum."

Mrs. Albert Drake, of 303 West Second street, is a sister of Mr. Dunn.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. GOOD FOR CHRISTIANS.

An Address on the Work of the Sunday-School Association.

An address was made before the Sunday-school teachers of this city yesterday afternoon in the Sunday-school rooms of the First Baptist church, by Rev. L. D. Stulz, State secretary of the Home Department of the New Jersey State Sunday-School Association.

The address was given under the auspices of the Primary Teacher's Union. Rev. Mr. Stultz gave a very interesting talk on the home department. It was started fifteen years ago, the same year as the Christian Endeavor movement. The latter grew very rapidly, Mr. Stulty said, as it was the development of an idea already started while the home department brought with it an idea that needed time to show its practibility. It has also made a large place for itself and has been introduced throughout this country, in Canada, and into most of the principal countries in Europe. Almost all the leading denominations and many of the smaller ones have given it their unqualified approval.

It is an extension of the work of the Sunday-school for those who are kept away by physical disability, by certain circumstances, or for those who have no will to come. He then told how to go to work to form a home department and showed the literature and blanks necessary to organize and run a home department. It should, he said, be a department of the Sunday-school, the same as the primary, intermediate, or senior departments. It is a great chance to show those who are ill, aged and infirm and gives a great opportunity to gain entrance into homes with a definite object. It will develop family religion, it is an excellent method to reach the unchurched and unschooled and shows them that the church cares for them. It not only adds to the membership of the Sunday-school but adds to the membership of the church. It is an excellent opportunity for Sunday-school teachers to become acquainted with the parents of their scholars and it secures the co-operation of the parents in the learning of the lesson. It is a good way to recover backsliders and even if no one joins the home department, the effort made to organize it satisfies the conscience.

POOR POLICE FORCE.

The National Capital Is But Indifferently Guarded.

A Ghastly Morning Scene on Capitol Hill —The Colored Population of Washington Is a Source of Constant Trial.

[Special Washington Letter.]

Strange sights sometimes greet the eyes of diligent observers in this city; but something unusual occurred this morning which will be as surprising to the reading public as it was startling to the witnesses.

The customary crowd of statesmen, newspaper men, visitors from afar and local habitues of the capitol were crowded into the cable cars which ascended Capitol hill shortly before noon. The car stopped at the top of the hill, and as its occupants entered the capitol grounds they were surprised to see a negro and negress engaged in wrestling over a pint bottle of gin. The negro finally wrested it from the woman and started to run away with it.

Nobody interfered. There was not a policeman in sight. The capitol police force is made up of politicians, who receive $1,000 each per annum, and who do nothing but walk around the capitol building in beautiful blue uniforms. Not one of them was out in the capitol grounds to prevent the disgraceful scene.

There ought to have been one of our city policemen somewhere in the vicinity; but none appeared, and the fight went on. The woman grabbed the negro by the coat collar, struggled with him for the bottle, and finally he threw it away over the bushes which line the capitol grounds. It struck a tree trunk and was destroyed. That did not end the fight.

The woman began pounding the negro with her fists, while she uttered a tirade of ghastly profanity. The statesmen and newspaper men did not feel called upon to enter the arena in behalf of either contestant. Moreover, i is dangerous to interfere with the negroes of Washington, for nearly all of them, of both sexes, carry razors. So the fight went on, the woman doing all of the swearing and pounding. Finally the negro shook her from him, and again tried to run, when she again grabbed him. He then took hold of her hair, and swinging her around like a top, dropped her upon the hard cobble stones on the south side of the street.

All this occurred within 200 feet of the capitol building, and at the edge of the beautiful grounds surrounding that splendid legistitive temple. When the woman dropped, the city policeman appeared a block away. He was called to by the assembled crowd. Everyone beckoned to him, but he walked unconcernedly down the street, as though he were merely out for a promenade. There might have been a murder committed; but it seemed to make no difference to that alleged guardian of the law. He was in no hurry. If any woman of ordinary physique had fallen as that negress fell, it must surely have fractured her skull. But she arose and went after the man again, and, long before the policeman reached the original scene, the woman caught the negro a block away and again began to assault him.

The policeman now saw what was going on, and he leisurely walked towards the fighting couple. Somebody must have told them that a policeman was coming, for they desisted from struggling, and ran away. Still the policeman walked slowly along down New Jersey avenue, and he looked as pretty a picture of the majesty of the law as one would care to see.

The crowd dispersed, the majority going into the capitol building; but, so far as was observed, no arrest was made. The policeman was in no hurry.

The capitol grounds are not properly policed. Numerous outrages have been committed there at night, and the records of the police court show that several murders have occurred. Probably the fault is with congress. It is certain that the superintendent of police for years past has made annual recommendations for appropriations which would enable him to employ additional policemen, but the appropriations have not been made.

At the foot of Capitol hill, on the west side of the grounds, are the botanical gardens, and beyond them for fully a mile are the arsenal, Smithsonian, agricultural and monument grounds, forming a continuous park, containing numerous old trees with widespreading branches. There is an excellent driveway along the entire distance and there are numerous pretty walks within the parks. But no part of this beauty spot is safe at night, because the police force is inadequate. It may be said that, as a general rule, the members of our metropolitan police force are diligent and brave; and the specimen referred to on Capitol hill is an exception.

You must not infer that the negro and negress are types of their race in the national capital. But the quarreling couple, who began their fight over a bottle of gin, represents a majority of their race in this city, and a large majority of it, too. But there are some splendid specimens of the negro race in Washington, and a number of them are of superior intelligence. There is a large Roman Catholic church on Fifteenth street maintained by colored people, and their choir is an aggregation of excellent musical talent. On the same street, near the white house, there is a Presbyterian church maintained by the same race of people, and some of its communicants are quite wealthy, many of them being prominent in the political world.

Then, at the foot of Capitol hill, not far from the Botanical gardens, there is a Methodist church where revivals are held four or five times each year. But this church is contiguous to the lower regions of South Washington, and numerous scenes of disorder have occurred there during recent years.

But the majority of the negroes are ignorant, poor and vicious. There are distinct classes of them, and they are as readily divided and discerned as are the currents of the ocean. Some of them come from the old families of Washington, others from the old homes and plantations of Virginia and Maryland, and a few from the better classes in states more remote. These are quiet, docile, gentlemanly and well-bred people. They have as much pride in their families and family histories as the blue bloods of the cavaliers of the southern states.

When the union armies converged here at the close of the civil war they brought with them the riffraff of the colored population of the south. The negro camp followers did not represent the better element of their enslaved race. The good negroes were loyal to their masters and mistresses. Tens of thousands of them declined to accept freedom, preferring to live upon the old plantations with their white folks. Only the worthless and vagabond classes ran away and followed the armies. Consequently, when they were sloughed off here by the disbanding of the armies, they became our permanent lazzaroni. They have propagated their kind, and fully 20,000 negroes of the lower order are numbered with the total population of the District of Columbia. They drink, carouse, steal, violate all of the ten commandments, and ignore all human law. Their chief cause of continued crime and degradation is the bottle. Like the redmen who originally inhabited this entire continent, they have fallen victims to the demon of the still. It is the prime cause of their woes and crimes.

"You have no idea how the faithful negroes loved their masters and homes before the war," says Senator-elect Hernando D. Money, of Mississippi. "No book ever had such a sale, at that period of our history, as 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and yet it was a dreadful exaggeration of facts and conditions. It was really a political pamphlet; and it produced its effect. The worst scenes depicted by Mrs. Stowe were not exaggerated; but the book conveyed the impression that those worst scenes were of daily occurrence in the land where slavery existed; but in reality they were the exception.

"You must remember that the black people were regarded by their owners as chattels, and they were valuable. No man in the north who possessed a horse worth $1,800 would beat him to death. No man owning a calf worth $20 would flay it alive. You can understand that such a man as old Uncle Tom, faithful, valuable and honest, would have been easily worth $2,000; and his owner would not carelessly drive that piece of property to death, after horrible torture. On the contrary, he would keep him well fed and well clad, and look after his health.

"Well, no matter about that now; for slavery has gone. What I was going to tell you was about the faithfulness of the negroes to their masters and mistresses. An old negro who had belonged to my father, remained on the plantation until after the war, and then said he would like to go north, and see how it was to be free. Of course, no obstacle was placed in his way, for he was free; and off he went to see the world. He was gone nearly a year, and one morning I found him sitting on the front doorstep, looking very woebegone and poor.

"I immediately spoke to him very severely, telling him that we didn't want any free niggers about our plantation, especially the free niggers from the north.

"The old man looked at me pitiably, and said: 'Marse Nando, please let me come back. I been 'way up to Canady, an' in Ohio, an' lots o' places; but there's no place like de old home.'

"Still looking severely at him, I said: 'Get up off of that doorstep.' He slowly arose, and then I gave him a shove and a little kick, not enough to hurt him, but just to appear severe, and told him to go around to the kitchen and get something to eat.

"As the old fellow felt the tip toe of my boot, he fell on his knees, raised his hands, and shouted: 'Glory Hallelujah. I'se wid my friends again.' And he never wanted to go away from the old place again as long as he lived."

To Kill Thistles
It is not necessary to kill all the seeds of the thistles in order to exterminate these undesirable weeds. You can so cultivate the ground that they will not thrive; and at last will disappear altogether. It might be better to kill the seeds, but we cannot do it. It would be the wisest course to destroy all the germs, or seeds, of consumption, could we do so. But this cannot be done. So we must keep the tissues of the lungs, the soil, in such a condition that the germs will not thrive the

The House of the Wolf

BY STANLEY J. WEYMAN

WITH PICTURES BY FRANK VER BECK

"Now perhaps you will listen to me," he went on, smoothly, "and hear what I am going to do. I am going to keep you

"I could have run him through by a single thrust."

here, young gentlemen, until you can serve me by carrying to mademoiselle, your cousin, some news of her betrothed. Oh, I shall not detain you long," he added, with an evil smile. "You have arrived at Paris at a fortunate moment. There is going to be a—well, there is a little scheme on foot appointed for to-night—singularly lucky you are!—for removing some objectionable people, some friends of ours, perhaps among them, M. Anne. That is all. You will hear shots, cries, perhaps screams. Take no notice. You will be in no danger. For M. de Pavannes," he continued, his voice sinking, "I think that by morning I shall be able to give you—a—a more particular account of him to take to Caylus—to mademoiselle, you understand."

For a moment the mask was off. His face took a sombre brightness. He moistened his lips with his tongue as though he saw his vengeance worked out then and there before him, and were gloating over the picture. The idea that this was so took such a hold upon me that I shrank back, shuddering; reading, too, in Croisette's face the same thought—and a late repentance. Nay, the malignity of Bezers' tone, the savage gleam of joy in his eyes, appalled me to such an extent that I fancied for a moment I saw in him the devil incarnate.

He recovered his composure very quickly, however; and turned carelessly towards the door. "If you will follow me," he said, "I will see you disposed of. You may have to complain of your lodging—I have other things to think of to-night than hospitality. But you shall not need to complain of your supper."

He drew aside the curtain as he spoke, and passed into the next room before us, not giving a thought apparently to the possibility that we might strike him from behind. There certainly was an odd quality apparent in him at times which seemed to contradict what we knew of him.

The room we entered was rather long than wide, hung with tapestry, and lighted by silver lamps. Rich plate embossed, I afterwards learned, by Cellini, the Florentine—who died that year, I remember—and richer glass from Venice, with a crowd of meaner vessels filled with meats and drinks covered the table; disordered as by the attacks of a numerous party. But save a servant or two by the distant dresser, and an ecclesiastic at the far end of the table, the room was empty.

The priest rose as we entered, the vidame saluting him as if they had not met that day. "You are welcome, M. le Coadjuteur," he said; saying it coldly, however, I thought. And the two eyed one another with little favor; rather as birds of prey about to quarrel over the spoil, than as host and guest. Perhaps the coadjutor's glittering eyes and great beak-like nose made me think of this.

"Ho! ho!" he said, looking piercingly at us—and no doubt we must have seemed a miserable and dejected crew enough. "Who are these? Not the first fruits of the night, eh?"

The vidame looked darkly at him. "No," he answered, brusquely. They are not. I am not particular out of doors, coadjutor, as you know, but this is my house, and we are going to supper. Perhaps you do not comprehend the distinction. Still it exists—for me," with a sneer.

This was as good as Greek to us. But I so shrank from the priest's malignant eyes, which would not quit us, and felt so much digust mingled with my anger that when Bezers by a gesture invited me to sit down, I drew back. "I will not eat with you," I said sullenly; speaking out of a kind of dull obstinacy, or perhaps a childish petulance.

It did not occur to me that this would pierce the vidame's armor. Yet a dull red showed for an instant in his cheek, and he eyed me with a look, that was not all ferocity, though the veins in his temples swelled. A moment, nevertheless, and he was himself again. "Armand," he said quietly to the servant, "these gentlemen will not sup with me. Lay for them at the other end."

Men are odd. The moment he gave way to me I repented of my words. It was almost with reluctance that I followed the servant to the lower part of the table. More than this, mingled with the hatred I felt for the vidame, there was now a strange sentiment towards him—almost of admiration; that had its birth, I think in the moment when I held his life in my hand, and he had not flinched.

We ate in silence; even after Croisette by grasping my hand under the table had begged me not to judge him hastily. The two at the upper end talked fast, and from the little that reached us, I judged that the priest was pressing some course on his host, which the latter declined to take.

Once Bezers raised his voice. "I have my own ends to serve!" he broke out angrily, adding a fierce oath which the priest did not rebuke, "and I shall serve them. But there I stop. You have your own. Well, serve them, but do not talk to me of the cause! The cause? To hell with the cause! I have my cause, and you have yours, and my lord of Guise has his! And you will not make me believe that there is any other?"

"The king's?" suggested the priest, smiling sourly.

"Say rather the Italian woman's!" the vidame answered recklessly—meaning the queen mother, Catherine de' Medici, I supposed.

"Well then, the cause of the church?" the priest persisted.

"Bah! The church? It is you, my friend!" Bezers rejoined, rudely tapping his companion—at that moment in the act of crossing himself—on the chest. "The church?" he continued; "no, no, my friend. I will tell you what you are doing. You want me to help you to get rid of your branch, and you offer in return to aid me with mine—and then, say you, there will be no stick left to beat either of us. But you may understand once for all"—and the vidame struck his hand heavily down among the glasses—"that I will have no interference with my work, master clerk! None! Do you hear? And as for yours, it is no business of mine. That is plain speaking, is it not?"

The priest's hand shook as he raised a full glass to his lips, but he made no rejoinder, and the vidame, seeing we had finished, rose. "Armand!" he cried, his face still dark, "take these gentlemen to their chamber. You understand?"

We stiffly acknowledged his salute—the priest taking no notice of us—and followed the servant from the room; going along a corridor and up a steep flight of stairs, and seeing enough by the way to be sure that resistance was hopeless. Doors opened silently as we passed, and grim fellows, in corselets and padded coats, peered out. The clank of arms and murmur of voices sounded continuously about us; and as we passed a window the jingle of bits, and the hollow clang of a restless hoof on the flags below, told us that the great house was for a time a fortress. I wondered much. For this was Paris, a city with gates and guards; the night a short August night. Yet the loneliest manor in Quercy could scarcely have bristled with more pikes and musquetoons, on a winter's night and in time of war.

No doubt these signs impressed us all; and Croisette not least. For suddenly I heard him stop, as he followed us up the narrow staircase, and begin without warning to stumble down again as fast as he could. I did not know what he was about, but muttering something to Marie I followed the lad to see. At the foot of the flight of stairs I looked back. Marie and the servant were standing in suspense, where I had left them. I heard the latter bid us angrily to return.

But by this time Croisette was at the end of the corridor; and reassuring the fellow by a gesture, I hurried on, until brought to a standstill by a man opening a door in my face. He had heard our returning footsteps, and eyed me suspiciously; but gave way after a moment with a grunt of doubt. I hastened on, reaching the door of the room in which we had supped in time to see something which filled me with grim astonishment; so much so that I stood rooted where I was, too proud at any rate to interfere.

Bezers was standing, the leering priest at his elbow. And Croisette was stooping forward, his hands stretched out in an attitude of supplication.

"Nay, but M. le Vidame," the lad cried, as I stood, the door in my hand, "it were better to stab her at once than break her heart! Have pity on her! If you kill him, you kill her!"

The vidame was silent, seeming to glower on the boy. The priest sneered. "Hearts are soon mended—especially women's," he said.

"But not Kit's!" Croisette said, passionately—otherwise ignoring him. "Not Kit's! You do not know her, vidame! Indeed you do not!"

The remark was ill-timed. I saw a spasm of anger distort Bezers' face. "Get up, boy!" he snarled, "I wrote to mademoiselle what I would do, and that I shall do! A Bezers keeps his word. By the God above us—if there be a God, and in the devil's name I doubt it to-night!—I shall keep mine! Go!"

His great face was full of rage. He looked over Croisette's head as he spoke, as if appealing to the Great Registrar of his vow, in the very moment in which he had all but denied Him. I turned and stole back the way I had come; and heard Croisette follow.

That little scene completed my misery. After that I seemed to take no heed of anything or anybody until I was aroused by the grating of our jailer's key in the lock, and became aware that he was gone, and that we were alone in a small room under the tiles. He had left the candle on the floor, and we three stood around it. Save for the long shadows we cast on the walls and two pallets hastily thrown down in one corner, the place was empty. I did not look much at it, and I would not look at the others. I flung myself on one of the pallets and turned my face to the wall, despairingly. I thought bitterly of the failure we had made of it, and of the vidame's triumph. I cursed St. Croix especially for that last touch of humiliation he had set to it. Then, forgetting myself as my anger abated, I thought of Kit so far away at Caylus—of Kit's pale, gentle face, and her sorrow. And little by little I forgave Croisette. After all he had not begged for us—he had not stooped for our sakes, but for hers.

I do not know how long I lay at see-saw between these two moods. Or whether during that time the others talked or were silent, moved about the room or lay still. But it was Croisette's hand on my shoulder, touching me with a quivering eagerness that instantly communicated itself to my limbs, which recalled me to the room and its shadows. "Anne!" he cried. "Anne! Are you awake?"

"What is it?" I said, sitting up and looking at him.

"Marie," he began, "has—"

But there was no need for him to finish. I saw that Marie was standing at the far side of the room by the unglazed window; which, being in a sloping part of the roof, inclined slightly also. He had raised the shutter which closed it, and on his tip-toes—for the sill was almost his own height from the floor—was peering out. I looked sharply at Croisette. "Is there a gutter outside?" I whispered, beginning to tingle all over as the thought of escape for the first time occurred to me.

"No," he answered in the same tone. "But Marie says he can see a beam below, which he thinks we can reach."

I sprang up, promptly displaced Marie, and looked out. When my eyes grew accustomed to the gloom I discerned a dark chaos of roofs and gables stretching as far as I could see before me. Nearer, immediately under the window, yawned a chasm—a narrow street. Beyond this was a house rather lower than that in which we were, the top of its roof not quite reaching the level of my eyes. "I see no beam," I said.

"Look below!" quoth Marie, stolidly.

I did so, and then saw that 15 or 16 feet below our window there was a narrow beam which ran from our house to the opposite one—for the support of both, as is common in towns. In the shadow near the far end of this—it was so directly under our window that I could only see the other end of it—I made out a casement, faintly illuminated from within.

I shook my head.

"We cannot get down to it," I said, measuring the distance to the beam and the depth below it, and shivering.

"Marie says we can, with a short rope," Croisette replied. His eyes were glistening with excitement.

"But we have no rope!" I retorted. I was dull—as usual. Marie made no answer. Surely he was the most stolid and silent of brothers. I turned to him. He was taking off his waistcoat and neckerchief.

"Good!" I cried. I begin to see now. Off came our scarfs and kerchiefs also, and fortunately they were of home make, long and strong. And Marie had a hank of four-ply yarn in his pocket as it turned out, and I had some stout new garters, and two or three yards of thin cord, which I had brought to mend the girths, if need should arise. In five minutes we had fastened them cunningly together.

"I am the lightest," said Croisette.

"But Marie has the steadiest head," I objected. We had learned that long ago—that Marie could walk the coping-stones of the battlements with as little concern as we paced a plank set on the ground.

"True," Croisette had to admit. "But he must come last, because whoever does so will have to let himself down."

I had not thought of that, and I nodded. It seemed that the lead was passing out of my hands, and I might resign myself. Still one thing I would have. As Marie was to come last, I would go first. My weight would best test the rope. And, accordingly, it was so decided.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Crescent Oval will be in condition for riding next Monday.

George Tobin, the North avenue plumber, has a new Columbia wheel.

The Newark bicycle agents are anxious to organize a cycling board of trade.

Bicycles are used extensively in the postoffice and telegraph offices in Chicago.

Robert Davis, of Newark rode his wheel to Plainfield yesterday and was the guest of friends.

It is proposed to give four amateur and four professional events each day at the National Meet.

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, of Richmond street, enjoyed a ride to Rahway on their wheels Saturday.

Harry Vail and William VanSickle, have both received their Keating wheels from Lister, of North avenue.

A large order has been recently filled by the War Department for tandems to be use by the U. S. Army.

At least a dozen new tracks will be opened this year and the promoters of each one claims it will be the best in the country.

Miss Alice Quinn, of Park avenue, has a new Credenda wheel, purchased from W. H. Rogers, the West Fifth street bicycle dealer.

Zimmerman says it would be as foolish to run a steam engine without fuel as it would be to take an early morning spin without first eating something.

A new scheme which is being tried throughout the trade by retail dealers, says the American Wheelmen, is to place a bicycle in the window of the store with the list price, which is reduced $1 each day until sold.

A meeting of the Elizabeth Journal trophy race committee has been called for next Thursday evening at the Journal office. The representatives of all wheeling clubs in Union county are invited to be present, and every club in the county is invited to enter a team. The date of the race and course will be selected at the meeting, and other arrangements made for the event. The trophy is at present held by the Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers. It has twice been won by them, and another victory will make the fine silver cup the property of the club.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The writer noticed that the new bicycle ordinance will compel cyclists to attach alarm bells to the handle bars of their wheels. This seems very unnecessary and the city fathers can hardly appreciate the amount of annoyance it will cause many wheelmen. Are all the riders who use the new style of bell which is attached to the frame and rung with the knee to be arrested and fined despite the fact that they carry a much better alarm than the ordinary scorcher bell? Riders who use a ram's horn or a similar shaped bar, use it from head to handle. The new ordinance as it now stands would either compel them to purchase new bars altogether or else deprive them of the use of a portion of the old ones of which they are accustomed to avail themselves. Is it not possible to persuade our lawmakers to remedy this evil by striking out the words "The handle bar of?"

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The wonderful game that Wheaton S. Lowry rolled on the Crescent Wheelmen's alley Thursday evening, was not only a high score in the regular game, but tied the high score in the head pin game of 115, made by Harry VanEmburgh.

INS AND OUTS.

A meeting of the Plainfield Athletic Club, formerly the Arlingtons, will be held this evening at 7:45 at 223 East Third street. All members are earnestly requested to be present.

—The consecration meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed church tonight at 8 o'clock. Visitors are always welcome.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Mr. Hays, of Evona, was up behind Plainfield's old favorite, "Andy," getting him ready for the coming club races.

The daughter of Nelson, 2:09, owned by A. C. Vail, was at the track Saturday and looks fit to go a race at any time.

William Arkell, of Westfield, was at the track Saturday with his fast gelding Morton, 2:22, and drove him a half to a road wagon in 1:24½.

Nate Robins, of Metuchen, was out behind his good pair of Lamberts. They have wintered well and look fit and in shape to go. Mr. Robin's says he can beat any man down the road.

J. W. Johnson's old campaigner, Richard Wilkes, 2:26¼, by George Wilkes, 2:22, is being jogged on the road every day. The old horse is in the pink of condition and has all his speed.

Charles Brower drove Mr. Fairbairn's fast pacing mare, Lillian M., with a record of twenty-five and a fraction, three slow miles, letting her skip the last quarter. This mare looks well and will probably be heard from later on.

The first of a series of races, to take place every Saturday during the summer months at the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue, was trotted last Saturday and although three races were on for the afternoon, only one was trotted, as the weather in the early part of the day was very threatening and several who lived at a distance and had horses entered did not come on account of this. Due to the hard work and pains taken by Messrs. Osborne and Brower the track was in very good shape, considering the season of the year. And the few spectators present, who saw the 2:25 class trotted, saw a horse race from wire to wire. There were only two entries in this class: St. Albans, 2:25½, by King Wilkes, from the Woodbook Farm, and Myrtletwig 2:25½, by Mrytletree, owned by A. J. Brantingham, of South Plainfield. The first heat went to St. Albans in 2:33½. Then the daughter of Myrtletree got a heat in 2:33¼, with St. Albans at her throat-latch at the finish. And the final heat and race was won by Mr. Brantingham's mare in 2:29½, the stallion making a mistake at the three-quarter pole which lost his chances for the heat. This heat was trotted in very fast time considering the day and track. Next Saturday there will be several races on the card. No gate money chrrged and all are invited to come and see the trots.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The third and deciding game of the series of hockey matches between the Yale and St. Nicholas Skating Club teams was played Saturday night on the ice of the St. Nicholas Skating Rink, Sixty-sixth street, near Columbus avenue, New York. The St. Nicholas team won. Henry V. Ryder, of this city, was one of the forwards on the college team as usual.

The best performance at the athletic games of Drisler School, which were held at Berkley Oval, New York, last Friday afternoon, was the pole vaulting of Jesse L. Hurlbut, Jr., of Berkley School, who broke the interscholastic record by eight inches, clearing ten feet, six inches, a phenominal performance. Hurlbut is the son of Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, D. D., who was a citizen of this city for many years. Young Hurlbut attended school in this city and was a member of the famous class of '95, leaving during his second year in the High School. Of his feat the New York Herald says:

The glory in a record breaking way was credited to J. Hurlbut, of the Berkley School, in the pole vault. He cleared ten feet, six inches, a phenomenal performance. The best previous scholastic figures for the event were nine feet, ten inches, made by E. F. Simpson, of Barnard School, in the intercity games a year ago. Hurlbut is a remarkably strong and well-knit young fellow, with a knack of vaulting that should make him a dangerous man in more experienced company. Paulding, the second man, also beat the old scholastic record, vaulting ten feet, four inches. His clever work was responsible for Hurlbut's great effort.

Three athletes from the Plainfield High School, Geo. P. Smith, Herbert Richardson and Geo. Coark, took part in the games but all failed to get a place.

Ab Cook Indicted.

The Somerset County Grand Jury found a bill of indictment against Ab. Cook, charging him with assault and battery, and on an order Constable Stewart escorted Cook to Somerville this morning. It will be remembered that some time ago a German living at Washingtonville was returning home late one night and he was assaulted by a man whom he afterwards said was Cook. The latter was held for the Grand Jury, and they found a bill against him.

A Still Alarm.

A still alarm was sent in from the residence of Mrs. Ann P. Smith, of 911 LaGrande avenue, this afternoon, and was answered by the chemical engine and No. 2's hose carriage. The fire proved to be in the boards of the top of the cesspool which had caught from the hot ashes of a plumber's furnace. The blaze was easily extinguished.

—A preparatory service of the Crescent Avenue church will be held Friday evening at eight o'clock. A meeting of the Session will be held after the service. Those wishing to come into the membership of the church may appear before the Session either on Wednesday or Friday evening.

SENTIMENT OF HOSPITAL GOVERNORS TOWARD THE DOCTORS.

A Few are Opposed to Conceding to the Homeopathists—Rules Will Probably be Changed Soon—Discussed Last Night.

Two hospitals are very unlikely to be located in this city for the present at any rate, for, although the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital have taken no definite action on the amendment to the constitution of the hospital, which admits homeopathic as well as allopathic physicians to practice, a majority of them seem to be in favor of it. The delay in the passing of the amendment was caused by a small but important change in the wording of it.

The Board of Governors met last night at the Public Library and held one of the liveliest meetings that has been seen for a long time. The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock and it was nearly 11 before a motion to adjourn was carried. Fourteen out of the twenty members were present.

Of course the most important business was the consideration of the amendment which allows all legally recognized physicians to practice at the hospital. The question was discussed from all points of view and all the members had a chance to express their opinion. The managing committee has looked thoroughly into the subject and was heartily in favor of it. Some of the members had not investigated the question and were inclined to object, but the sense of the meeting was in favor of it. A clause relating to the pay was finally dropped from the amendment, the matter being left to the discretion of the managing committee. This necessitated the laying over of the amendment until the next meeting. This delay will give the less informed members a chance to look into the matter.

Another amendment regarding gifts to the hospital was discussed and passed. The substance of this amendment was that any gift received through a legacy should be invested or deposited and only the interest used to pay current expenses. It might, however, by a two-third vote of the Board, be appropriated for some permanent improvement, this property to be commemorated by a tablet bearing a suitable inscription. The second amendment passed was one particularly obnoxious to the secretary who was of course, not its principal supporter. If provided that the secretary shall give notice in writing to every member of the board of every amendment introduced.

The board was notified of a legacy of $500 coming to them as soon as the estate of Mrs. Stout, sister of ex-Mayor Job Male, was settled.

The Board also received notice that two of the nurses at the hospital, Miss Anna Wolff and Miss L. Grace Clark have successfully passed their examinations and the medical staff recommended them for graduation. The matter was referred to the managing committee with power. and the commencement, which will probably be by invitation, will be held some time between May 15th and June 1st.

The plans for the enlargement of the hospital were brought before the Board for consideration, but the lateness of the hour prevented a very close examination of them. A special meeting will probably be called during the early part of next month to consider the plans. The next regular meeting at which the amendment will come up will be held on May 25th.

The report of Dr. Probasco, the medical director for April, was as follows: Total number of patients treated, 35; number admitted, 21; number discharged cured, 15; number discharged improved, 4; number died, 4; number in hospital up to Sunday, 10; number of dispensary patients, 32. The death rate is unusually large, but is easily accounted for. One patient, a woman, died after being in the hospital two days. A man, a victim of a railroad accident, died the day after he was brought to the hospital. Both were seriously injured when they were received.

Dr. Boone will be medical director for the month of May, and Dr. Long hospital surgeon.

Elizabeth's New Railroad Depot.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's new station at Elizabeth will be ready for use by May 1. It is a beautiful structure of yellow pressed brick and will cost about $40,000. A tunnel will connect the two tracks and an elevator will convey passengers to the track elevation. The Pennsylvania crosses the Jersey Central at this point, making the tracks very high.

To Rebuild on the Old Site.

The Law Battery Company, of Cranford, held a conference yesterday morning and decided not to accept the offer to build in Garwood, but to rebuild on the old site.

MARRIAGE A FAILURE HERE.

The Marital Troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Perry Taken to Court.

After buffeting about on the matrimonial sea for twelve years, five of which have been stormy and full of breakers, Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Perry drifted apart some time ago. This morning a storm that had been brewing in the latitude of Mrs. Perry landed her husband high and dry before the tribunal of justice. The facts of the case are these:

Twelve years ago the couple were married and lived happily together for seven years. It was in Hartford, Conn., that the first ruffle showed itself in their domestic bliss. Mrs. Perry, so it is said, suddenly became possessed of an incompatible temper, and from that time there was constant trouble in the household. Mr. Perry is naturally pacifying, but he was unable to live happily with his better half.

Two years ago, while living in Somerville, Mr. Perry came to the conclusion that he could not get along with his wife, and he made a proposition that they sign a bill of separation. Lawyer Meehan was consulted and the separation papers were almost ready to be signed when Mrs. Perry declared that she would accept a divorce or nothing. Perry says he had no money to pay for such proceedings, and the matter was finally dropped. A flag of truce, so to speak, was patched up, and the couple got along fairly well until Mr. Perry moved to this city and bought the Hotel Grenada barber shop. His wife was taken ill and he sent her to New Brunswick for treatment. After she had almost recovered he visited her at her sister's home, when, he claims, she poured a torrent of abuse out to him. She failed to come home and he advertised her in The Press.

A short time ago Mrs. Perry made a complaint to Overseer of the Poor Marx that her husband had deserted her. That official had a warrant issued for his arrest on the charge of non-support, and this morning it was served on Perry. He was taken before Judge De Meza and the examination set down for this afternoon.

SWEET VIOLETS.

The Annual Springtime Festival of the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters.

"Sweet violets, sweeter than all the roses," runs the tuneful melody of an old song. The motive of the song writer was simply ideal. But at the Trinity Reformed church next Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings the impression conveyed by the words of that line will be real, for it is then that the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters will conduct their annual festival of violets. Beyond the mere beauty and fragrance of the dainty violets will be the charming faces and affable manners of the Daughters, together with light, airy music in a vocal and instrumental way, enhancing the whole scene into almost a fairyland.

Dainty refreshments will be served, and on Thursday evening a male quartette will sing and on Friday evening the Schubert Ladies' Orchestra will furning instrumental music. The decorations alone will be worth the price of admission, which is ten cents.

A BENEFIT DANCE.

Friends of John Winn Attend a Ball to Help Him Along.

The many friends of John Winn, who gave him a benefit dance last evening, did the same in a very capable manner. The floor at the T. A. B. hall, on West Fourth street, was crowded, fully 300 persons being present. The dancing to the merry strains of O'Reilly's orchestra was kept up until this morning. The ball, which was given for a worthy cause, was well patronized by the dancing public and the many friends of Mr. Winn. John Carney was the efficient floor manager, with Nicholas Kelly as his assistant.

Credit is due the following committee for the manner in which the dance was carried out: Henry Walden, chairman; Peter Flynn, Jr., treasurer; D. White, John Galbraith, M. Field, Wm. Claasen. James Deady and Thos. Waldron. M. Flynn kindly assisted in the box office. Quite a neat sum will be realized.

LATER—Mr. Winn died at 12:15 o'clock today noon.

BLOOD MARKED THE WAY.

INHUMAN CRUELTY OF JOHN BARRY TO A CRIPPLED HORSE.

Drove the Animal Until the Hoof Was Torn From the Leg—Disgraceful Scenes at the Court—A Severe Penalty Imposed.

It is safe to say that the borough court never experienced a more lively time than that which occured this morning. Justice Mattison was on the bench, and it was only his cool head that kept the court within the bounds of judicial dignity. The case was that of the State Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals against John Barry. The complaint was made by George Kirch, of Somerset street, and ex-Marshal William N. Pangborn represented the Society, while Lawyer Arthur Miller, represented Mr. Barry.

The case is unprecedented in the history of the borough. It appears that Barry was somewhat under the influence of liquor yesterday, and while in this condition cruelly drove a horse that was suffering from a sore foot. The shoe was off the hoof, and he persisted in making the animal go, thus causing severe pain. The hoof was finally worn down so that shreds of flesh were left hanging and blood marked every step. This was continued until the horse lost the hoof entirely and yet he was driven with only a stump.

The case called out the sympathy of Mr. Kirch, who made a complaint. On the stand he told a clear, straight forward story. He said that he noticed the horse's foot was bleeding. and he thought it was the most cruel thing he had ever witnessed. At this point Mr. Miller engaged in a war of words with Justice Mattison. The Justice remonstrated, whereupon the lawyer said there was no contempt in a justice's court, and he would not be called down. He was threatened with arrrest and Mr. Pangborn asked that he be fined. But this was not done. The case continued and W. J. Conroy took the stand. He said that he noticed Barry driving the horse around and that the hoof was bleeding and was in a terrible condition. Jacob Hipp, the proprietor of the Manhattan wine rooms, was the next witness, and he said that he saw the horse's condition and that he told Barry to take care of the animal and take him home. He did not know whether Barry went right home or not. Marshal Line said he was called by Mr. Kirch to arrest Barry. At that time one hoof was off and the horse was lying down.

John Barry, the defendant, swore that he did not know the animal's condition until his attention was called to it. He then went right home and had the animal killed. Mr. Conroy was called again, and while Mr. Miller was asking him questions another lively time ensued. Mr. Conroy said that he would make a complaint against Mr. Miller for abusive language. The testimony given by Isaac Ohlman and O. Holmes brought out the fact that the horse was cruelly treated.

Both Mr. Pangborn and Mr. Miller summed up the case, but it was impossible for the latter to respect the Court, and continually interrupted the Justice. While the latter was giving his judgment Mr. Miller told his client not to listen to what was said. This brought out the wrath of the Justice, who told Chief Wilson to arrest him. But as he ceased talking the arrest was not made.

Mr. Miller pleaded with the Court to be lenient, while Mr. Pangborn stated that the penalty was not equal to the crime. In reviewing the case Justice Mattison said he thought it was the most cruel and heartrending affair he had ever listened to. In passing judgment he imposed a fine of $50 and three months in the county jail. Mr. Miller at once gave notice of appeal. He will endeavor to get bail for $300, so as to get his client ont of the lockup.

Jersey Central's Earnings for March.

The New Jersey Central Railroad earned gross for March $934,049 a decrease of $105,799 and net of $272,578, a decrease of $133,725.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

SOLD WITHOUT LICENSE.

THREE MEN ARRESTED FOR VIOLATING THE EXCISE LAWS.

The Police Have Woven a Net of Evidence About Them Which They Feel Sure Will Result in Conviction—Released on Bond.

The famous case of Michael Watson, of this city, who was charged with selling liquor without a license, caused a widespread interest throughout the State, as it was successfully appealed from the police court in this city to the Supreme Court.

Two cases of a similar nature startled the quietness of Plainfield this morning, but whether they will be fought as fiercely as the Watson case it is hard to say.

The two men who are charged with breaking the excise ordinances and selling liquor without a license are William Ross, proprietor of the little restaurant on Park avenue near Front street, known as the Delmonico Oyster and Chop House, and John Scott, of Grant avenue, the driver of a lager beer wagon.

For some time the police have suspected illegal selling, but evidence was very hard to secure. Sergeant Kiely has been working on the case lately and at last has managed to weave a net of evidence of sufficient strength about Ross and Scott to hold them for trial.

Ross has been quite open in his sale of beer of late, serving it to his customers with their meals. He is also said to have sold some beer to customers who wished for a drink only. Sergeant Kiely made four complaints against him in which he is charged with selling lager beer to Bartow D. Collom on April 18th. to Jeremiah Cash on April 18th. to Bartow D. Collom on April 19th and to Jeremiah Cash on April 19th. The warrant was served on him this morning by Roundsman Frederickson and Ross was taken to the law offices of City Judge DeMeza, just as he was in his apron and cap. He earnestly protested against the indignity and declared that his lawyer had told him he might sell beer to his customers with their meals. He openly acknowledged having sold beer with the meals at his restaurant but pleaded not guilty to the charge. Judge DeMeza held him in $200 bail. While waiting for his bondsman, Ross,s temper rose again and he declared that he would sue the county for $20,000 for all this trouble and indignity that he had been subjected to. A prominent butcher went bail for Ross and he was released to appear for trial next Saturday morning at the city court rooms.

Scott is the regular driver of a beer wagon and is supposed to deliver boxes of beer that have been ordered but not to sell to any other people except those that order it. Two complaints were made against Scott by Sergeant Kiely, charging him with peddling the beer to Martin McDermitt and John McDonald on April 18th.

Scott took the arrest very coolly and kept his own counsel. He pleaded not guilty to the charge, claiming that the beer had been ordered by McDermitt and McDonald. He was held in $200 bail to appear for trial on Saturday morning at the city court room. He waited very quietly until his father. Neal Scott, and several of his friends arrived, and his father acted as his bondsman.

The authorities claim to have a complete chain of evidence and that they will be able to convict them.

Dominick Parron was arrested by Roundsman Frederickson this noon on Front street charged with selling liquor illegally at his Italian boarding house near Netherwood. He was taken before Judge DeMeza and pleaded not guilty. He was held for trial as he was unable to furnish bail.

To Meet the Grand Officers.

Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, met last evening, elected one new member and accepted an invitation to go to Cranford next Monday evening to meet the Grand Lodge officers.

Green Dinner to Dr. Rodman.

Mr. and Mrs. Cruikshank give a green dinner tonight to Dr. Rodman and the newly-elected vestrymen of Grace P. E. church.

Sentence was suspended on Collin Jones this morning by City Judge DeMeza on the charge of quarreling and fighting.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. THE APPROPRIATION LEGAL.

Board of Education Decide That the School Meeting Was All Right.

The regular meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education was held last evening in the school house. The pay roll was passed and the report of the committee on rules was received. One rule adopted is of great importance and will affect, in a measure, the final work of the scholars. It provides that after this year a committee consisting of the principal of the school, the teacher of the graduating class, and four members of the Board of Education shall at the close of the year examine the graduating class both in written and oral work. The matter of engaging the teachers for another year was laid over till next month. President McCutchen stated that upon investigation the last meeting of the voters of the borough was legal, and that no other meeting was necessary. The appropriations made at that time will therefore stand.

The resignation of H. B. Wells as a member of the board was received and laid on the table. Mr. Wells offered his resignation on account of ill health. The board appointed ex-Marshal VanHorn as census taker for the borough.

TRAMPS RAID A TOWN.

Fire Revolvers and Become Abusive When Demands Are Refused.

A band of tramps went through Garwood on Saturday night, firing pistols and breaking windows with stones. Several of them stopped in front of the house of J. Willis and began shouting for something to eat. Clifford Gilbert, a nephew of the owner of the house, was standing by a window, when a hatchet came crashing through the glass, narrowly missing his head. Gilbert fired a shot at the man and one of them fell, but was quickly picked up and carried off by his companions. James Smith, a member of the band of rovers, was arrested as he was going from house to house begging. When food was refused him he became abusive and swore. Yesterday morning he was sent to jail for thirty days.

A Mock Trial To Make Fun.

A mock trial will be held in the Mt. Zion church on West Fourth street next Thursday night, in which the characters will be impersonated by members of the congregation. A like event was held there sometime ago and proved to be a very funny affair and this will doubtless prove the same. William Wilson is the one who will act as the accused, and he will be charged with holding up a train and robbing the mail agent of $65,000. Daniel Upshaw will act as his attorney and Lemuel Perry will argue for the commonwealth. The judges will be W. Groves, G. Cannon and A. Smith. J. Perkins will act as sheriff of the court and A. White as clerk. After the trial is finished the ladies of the church will furnish refreshments.

A Remarkable Book.

J. Watson Quick, of East Front street, is representing the Methodist Book Concern of New York as agent for Bishop Taylor's charming "Story of my life." His life has, indeed, been an eventful one and his experience as a street preacher and circuit rider, a mission worker and foreign missionary are thrilling in the extreme. His book is a narrative of these experiences and is full of exciting adventures and touching incidents. It is highly recommended by preachers and laymen in all denominations.

They Won the Wager.

Two students from Rutgers College visited this city Saturday night at 6:45 o'clock. They had made a wager with some of their companions that they could walk from New Brunswick to New Brunswick again, via Bound Brook, Plainfield and Metuchen, in 7½ hours. They reached New Brunswick at 9:25 o'clock, just five minutes before they were due.

A Y. M. C. A. in Elizabeth.

A religious meeting for young men will be held tonight in the chapel of the Third Presbyterian church at Elizabeth for the purpose of forming a Young Men's Christian Association. Two men interested in the movement have offered, it is said, to contribute $1,500 towards the new organization.

County Union Endeavor Conference.

The executive committee of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union will meet this evening in the chapel of the Third Presbyterian church in Elizabeth to make preparations for the annual confrrence, which will probably be held in Elizabeth in May.

SOME JERSEY FAVORITES

GOSSIP ABOUT PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES OF REPUBLICANS.

McKinley Buttons Are Flooding the State, But Harrison is Well Intrenched and Said to Have a Chance.

There is an inundation of McKinley buttons in the State of New Jersey. Since the State Convention refused to make any formal utterance that would indicate that the State was favorable to the Ohio candidate, there has been a steady increase in the number of people who have placed the McKinley button in their buttonhole. Some of the McKinley managers are taking the precaution to spread them all over the State. There are no other buttons being worn.

Politicians now commence to express themselves that the recent State Convention did a wise thing in not making any formal declaration, and while the rank and file of the party are strongly disposed to Major McKinley, the politicians, and particularly those who are given the credit of being responsible soothsayers, are talking strongly for Harrison.

The belief prevails that he will be the dark horse nominee. New Jersey is very kindly disposed to him, for the reason that General Sewell, who will be chairman of the New Jersey delegation, and who is the Republican leader of the State, is among the most ardent of the Harrison boomers.

When Harrison was President, Gen. Sewell was in close touch with him, and the State of New Jersey received considerable recognition because of the friendly relations of the President and the present United States Senator.

It is thought that Harrison and Hobart might be the possible combination. The claim of New Jersey for a second place on the ticket has become serious. Garrett A. Hobart, vice-chairman of the National Committee, has been enthusiastically indorsed, not only in his own State, but in ten other States, including New York and Pennsylvania.

Hobart expresses no preference. He believes that State leans to McKinley. So does Governor Griggs. Mr. Hobart will take an entirely neutral position, and if it is necessary he will assist Senator Sewell all he can to swing the New Jersey delegation around to Harrison.

The coming election in New Jersey will be of great importance apart from the fact that an effort will be made to demonstrate that on national issues as well as State issues New Jersey has gone Republican.

There will be elected eight Congressmen, and in all of the counties Sheriffs will be elected with the exception of Somerset, Cape May and Bergen. Passaic will elect a County Clerk to succeed Alfred D. Winfield, while Burlington and Hudson will elect Surrogates in addition to Sheriffs.

In eight counties Senators are to be elected, which Senators will have a vote for United States Senator to succeed the present Democratic incumbent, James Smith, who is the only Democrat in the New Jersey Congressional delegation at Washington.

There will be sixty members of the House of Assembly to be elected, so that the national fight will be given the advantage of the interest that will be inspired by local contests.

In reference to United Senator to succeed James Smith, there are two men regarded as candidates. Garret A. Hobart will certainly contest for the place should he not succeed in the National Convention; and if he does it is thought that the caucus nomination will be given to John Kean, who was twice a candidate for Governor.

The Fountain is Used.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Will you kindly correct the statement made in a recent issue of The News that the memorial drinking fountain on West Second street is rarely used and is in an out-of-the-way place. During the recent hot weather by actual count the average number of horses watered at the fountain was 100 per day, while the people who availed themselves of the privilege of going there for a drink of ice-cold water numbered about twice as many. The location of the fountain is one block west of Central avenue, and three blocks from the postoffice.

TAX RIOTS IN SICILY

The Disturbance at Paterno More Serious Than First Reported.

PROPERTY BURNED AND DESTROYED

Troops Stoned by the Mobs and Several Soldiers Injured—Effort To Open the Prison and Release the Inmates. Reforms Are Promised.

Palermo, April 28.—Reports from Paterno, the scene of yesterday's tax riots, indicate that the disturbances were far more serious than first reported. The populace, which consists chiefly of the lower classes, became incensed against the imposition of the communal taxes and made a demonstration that at one time threatened to become very serious. The mob attacked the house of the syndic, or mayor, and smashed the windows and destroyed a number of street lamps. They then set fire to the office of the controi, where the tax on provisions, etc., entering the city is collected, and to a number of sentry boxes and they were destroyed. The mob was in a most dangerous humor, and the gendarmes were powerless to quell the disturbances. The military were called out, but the rioters stoned the troops, severely wounding an officer and three soldiers. An attempt was made to open the prison and release the convicts, but this was fortunately prevented by the troops. The situation was becoming extremely critical when the prefect of Catania arrived on the scene, He finally, after several fruitless attempts, got the crowd to listen to him. He promised that some of the more burdensome of the grievances of the people would be redressed and by his conciliatory attitude ultimately calmed the passions of the mob, which then dispersed. The maladministration of Sicily has been a crying evil for many years and has led to several severe riots.

WILD COLLEGE DEMONSTRATION

Brown University Students Parade the Streets in Their Night Robes.

Providence, April 28.—One hundred Brown university students, followed by 500 others, paraded the streets last night in their night shirts. They were celebrating their team's victory at baseball over the Pennsylvanians at Philadelphia yesterday. Red fire was burned all over the town and a band discoursed popular airs. The college drum corps turned out. The leaders of the crowd captured a church belfry and dangled the big bell in defiance of the police. It was the wildest college demonstration ever held in this town.

FAT JOB GIVEN OUT.

C. A. Welting Named as Commissioner of Agriculture for New York State.

Albany, April 28.—Gov. Morton sent to the senate last night the nomination of Charles A. Weiting, republican, to succeed Frederick C. Schraub of Lowville, Lewis county, as state commissioner of agriculture. The agricultural commissioner serves for a term of three years and receives a salary of $4,000 and $500 expenses annually. He has the appointment of ten assistant commissioners and numerous experts in butter, cheese and milk. The nomination was referred to the finance committee.

Grant Banquet in New York.

New York, April 28.—The ninth annual dinner of Grant Banquet association was held last night at the Waldorf hotel. Covers were laid for 108 in the ball room. Among those present were Gen. Granville M. Dodge, Gen. James A. Williamson, Governor Hastings of Pennsylvania, postmaster general William L. Wilson, mayor William L. Strong, Commodore Sicard, U. S. N.; Gen. Wager Swayne, Joseph H. Choate and Mayor Wurster of Brooklyn. Speeches were made by Gen. Dodge, Postmaster Gegeral Wilson and Gen. Horace Porter eulogizing the life and services of General Grant.

Equestrian Statue of Gen. Grant.

Washington, April 28.—A favorable report was made to the senate yesterday afternoon on Senator Squire's bill appropriating $300,000 for an equestrian statue of Gen. Grant in this city. Much interest has been aroused in this matter and members of congress are being urged by G. A. R. men and members of the Loyal Legion to put this bill through at this session of congress, Nine of the Crew Lost.

Charleston, S. C., April 28.—The schooner Norman from Providence, R. I., just arrived here, reports having picked up at sea, April 18, seven men in a dory belonging to the fishing schooner J. W. Campbell of Gloucester, Mass. The Campbell went down in a squall on Friday, April 17, sixty miles off Montauk. Nine of her crew were lost.

Eloped with His Servant.

Olean, N. Y., April 28. — Edgar Briggs, a married man and father of nine children, disappeared from Allegany a few days ago and about the same time Gertie Wheeler, 17 years old, a servant in his family, went away. It has been discovered that the couple have eloped.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Naval Appropriation Bill in the Senate—Pension Bill in the House.

Washington, April 28.—The senate this afternoon will act upon the amendment offered by Mr. Chandler to the naval appropriation bill prohibiting officers of the navy or of the marine corps on the retired list from taking employment in the service of persons or companies supplying material to the government. This amendment was supported by every member of the naval committee taking part in the debate. The bill appropriates about $32,000,000. The appropriation for "reserve guns for auxiliary cruisers" was increased from $250,000 to $400,000.

House of Representatives.

A vote will be taken in the house today upon the general pension bill, debate upon which was concluded yesterday after three days. As amended, the bill provides for a liberal construction of the law by the pension bureau in the interest of claimants. Senate amendments to the sundry civil bill were disagreed to and a conference was ordered.

FRENCH CABINET PROBLEM.

M. Meline Asks for Time To Consider the Matter of Forming a Ministry.

Paris, April 28.—M. Meline, who was asked yesterday by President Faure to form a cabinet, replied that he desired a little time to consider the matter, and that he would give him a definite answer to-day. M. Meline is a republican. He is a strong advocate of protection, his efforts in that direction having caused him to be called "the French McKinley." In the event of his declining it is believed that M. Dupuy or M. Freycinct will be intrusted with the task. The radicals and socialists protest against M. Meline's being at the head of a ministry, and demand a Goblet cabinet.

EXEMPT FROM ARREST.

A Worcester Judge Refuses a Warrant for Representative Mellen.

Worcester, Mass., April 28.—Winthrop of Boston, through his attorney, a Boston lawyer, made application to Judge Utley yesterday in the Central district court for an order to bring representative James Mellen before the court for examination under the poor debtor process. The application was denied by the court, on the ground that such an order was a step toward an arrest, and that, as a member of the general court, Representative Mellen was constitutionally exempt from arrest.

NEW HAVEN'S BOMB MYSTERY.

Police Unsuccessful in Discovering Anything of a Tangible Nature.

New Haven, Conn., April 28.—The local police are still working on the bomb explosion case, but as yet have not succeeded in getting anything of a tangible nature and it is probable that the matter will die out. Major Albee is very indignant at statements that have been made, some of which were to the effect that the major knew more about the bomb matter than he cared to tell. The major declares that he has nothing to conceal in the matter and has told all about the explosion that he knows.

The government has no extradition treaty with Guatemala and the surrender was made as an act of comity.

LETTER FROM MACEO

Everything Goes on Well with the Patriots of Cuba.

THEY NEED RIFLES AND CARTRIDGES

Circumstances Forced the General To Resort to Extreme Measures—Spain's Unfulfilled Promises React Upon Herself—Invasion of Pinar del Rio.

New York, April 28.—Senor Palma, of the Cuban junta, has received the following letter from Gen. Antonio Maceo: "It is some days since I received your last letter, and I am waiting with anxiety for your next in order to know from you direct how things are going. With us everything goes on well, and there is no doubt of our ability to triumph, if by no other means, by exhausting Spain. However, as an early termination of the war is what must be sought for, and as I read in the papers that it is discussed whether the United States should intervene or not, and as I have no doubt that, impelled by your patriotism, you make every effort to obtain whatever may be beneficial to Cuba, I take the liberty of remarking that the surest way of bringing the war to a very early termination would be to place here some 20,000 rifles and 4,000,000 cartridges. If the United States, observing its own laws, would not interfere with the shipment of arms and ammunition to us it would be a great service rendered to Cuba without provoking any complications with Spain, for, as I understand it, these shipments would be perfectly legal.

Spain's Many Unfulfilled Promises.

"I have been compelled by circumstances to resort to extreme measures. Gen. Weyler, in his wild desire of gaining glory and of obstructing the recognition of our belligerency, went in his proclamations so far as to promise the planters that they would be able to grind their sugar cane, while to the government he gave the assurance that the elections could be held peaceably, and to the country at large he declared that Pinar del Rio and some other provinces would soon be pacified. Some of the planters, showing themselves willing to believe that Gen. Weyler would keep his promise, began to get ready for grinding the cane. Under the circumstances, I made up my mind to invade Pinar del Rio a second time in order to show that we are fully able to compel obedience to the orders of our government. I am perfectly satisfied with the success which has attended all my operations during this second invasion, which shall last as long as there is anything to destroy from which Spain may derive any revenue. As you will see, the discredit which the proclamations of Weyler were intended to throw on our revolution has, through what we have accomplished, fallen on Spain, whose incapacity to control our movements has been again plainly shown."

Crushed by a Cave-in.

York, Pa., April 28.—A cave-in occurred at the slate quarry of John W. Jones at Delta yesterday afternoon in which two workmen, Lew Evans and Harry Jones, were crushed almost beyond recognition. Both the victims lived at Delta.

Health

Depends upon keeping the blood in a pure condition, free from disease germs, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla cleanses, vitalizes and enriches the blood, throwing out the impurities that clog and irritate the system and permits no lodgment of the seeds of disease. Read the following:

"I cannot recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla too highly for it has done wonders for me. I was

and all run down and my health was so poor I could not get out of doors. I was not able to do anything, being troubled with asthma and heart disease. I was nervous and could not sleep nights. I had become completely discouraged when I happened to read an advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to give it a trial. After taking the first bottle I felt better and since taking five bottles I am so much improved that I feel like a new man. I am now able to do a fair day's work and sleep at night. My heart does not trouble me and I have realized great relief for asthma. I feel full of courage once more and life seems brighter and worth living. I would recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all afflicted as I have been, for I know it will help them. If this statement of facts will be of benefit, you are welcome to use it as you please." HENRY J. WRIGHT, Box 502, Oxford, New York.

Untimely Decay.

The great engines of the body worn out, refusing to perform their natural function. The cause—disease, dissipation, overwork. The result is inability to nourish, build up, maintain. The end—a suspension of all faculties, a collapse, death, and from that which is very similar to starvation. In such cases follow Dr. B. Bush Field's, of Easton, Pa., advice, administer

Bovinine

He says of it; "While prison physician I used it on not only the weakened by disease, but those whose previous lives of exposure and neglect had completely broken down their constitutions. The results were always most satisfactory." Bovinine will create strength, enrich blood, make flesh and nourish generally in all cases of exhaustion and debility. Physicians the world over endorse it as a food stimulant.

GUILTY OF TREASON

Hammond's Plea to the Charge Against Him at Pretoria.

JUDGMENT TO BE RENDERED TO-DAY

Hammond, Phillips, Farrar and Col. Rhodes Admit That They Asked Dr. Jameson To Go to Johannesburg —His Action Was a Mistake.

Pretoria, April 28.—John Hays Hammond, the American mining engineer, and the other members of the Johannesburg reform committee who were absent from the court on Friday, when pleas of guilty of treason and lese majeste were entered by the others accused, attended court yesterday with the other defendants. Hammond pleaded guilty of treason, while Sauer and Simpson pleaded guilty of lese majeste. J. S. Curtis, an American engineer, who was also among the members of the committee who were arrested, is the only one of the defendants who has not pleaded to the charges. He is at liberty on bail. Counsel for the defense read a statement to the court signed by Hammond, Phillips, Farrar and Col. Rhodes admitting that they asked Dr. Jameson to go to Johannesburg, but deploring his mistake in entering the Transvaal and marching on Jahnnesburg when there was no urgent need for his presence. They maintained that their action throughout was not hostile to the government. Judgment will be rendered to-day. The trial of Curtis was postponed until the next session of the court.

Not Hostile to the Republic.

The statement read by the counsel for the defence also enumerated the grievances of the Uitlanders, and elaborated reasons to prove that the actions of the committee were not hostile to the republic. Regarding Dr. Jameson's raid, the statement declared that when the committee learned certain facts it sent on Dec. 27 two messengers, Major Heany by rail and Capt. Holden across country, to forbid Dr. Jameson to move.

WILL DEMAND TRIAL.

Rev. Mr. Knapp To Be Heard Before American Representatives in Turkey.

Constantinople, April 28.—The Rev. George P. Knapp, the American missionary who was recently expelled from Bitlis on charges of sedition, and who the Turkish authorities endeavored to deport from Iskanderoon, will come to this city to demand a trial before the representative of the American government. The United Press dispatches told of the efforts of the Turkish officials to get rid of Mr. Knapp by sending him out of the country and how these efforts were frustrated by the prompt and energetic action of the American charge d'affaires, who protested to the porte against the contemplated action and instructed the commercial agent at Iskanderoon to call for an American warship if it should be necessary to compel the authorities to deliver Mr. Knapp to him. Mr. Knapp, despite the asservations of the officials to the contrary, was a prisoner during the whole of the journey from Bitlis. While he was in Aleppo the vali of that vilayet tried to induce him to sign a pledge that he would never return to Bitlis, but Mr. Knapp peremptorily refused to do so. No one believes Mr. Knapp is guilty of the charges made against him. His expulsion from Bitlis was, no doubt, part of a prearranged plan to drive all the missionaries out of the country which resulted in such an emphatic protest from Mr. Riddle and the British ambassador that the plan was abandoned.

BARON HIRSCH'S FUNERAL.

Simple in Some Respects, But Magnificent in Others.

Paris, April 28.—The funeral of Baron Hirsch took place Monday, the remains being interred in Montmarte cemetery. The wish of the deceased for a simple funeral was observed so far as having a second-class hearse and no wreaths on the coffin, but otherwise the funeral was a magnificent pageant. The Hirsch residence, No. 2 Rue de l'Elysee, was profusely draped with mourning. The coffin was of ebony inlaid with gold and silver. An enormous line of mourning coaches followed the remains to the grave, and the streets were thronged with sightseers.

Fell Dead on a Street.

Pittsburg, April 28.—A special from Hamilton, Ont., says Allan Aldrich, 55 years of age, a traveling agent for Heintz & Co. of Pittsburg fell dead while walking on the street there last evening. Apoplexy is supposed to be the cause of death. The remains of the deceased are awaiting instructions from relatives.

ASSAULTS ON NEW EMPLOYES.

Three Philadelphia Traction Company Men Held Under Heavy Bail.

Philadelphia, April 28.—Since the big strike here last December there have been many assaults of non-union men who took the strikers' places and were retained in the traction company's employ after the strike was declared off. This culminated yesterday in the finding of true bills of indictment by the grand jury against William McGee, James Dinsmore and William Harp, three union motormen, who were arrested Saturday for having brutally beaten Daniel Keenan, a non-union man. The police authorities had determined, if possible, to break up these frequent assaults, and the three men were arraigned before Magistrate South and were placed under heavy bail to await the action of the grand jury. The latter body acted immediately, and, as stated above, found true bills against the prisoners late in the afternoon. They will be placed on trial to-day. The board of directors of the Union Traction company adopted resolutions declaring that the persistent efforts of a few men in the employ of the company to stir up strife and incite disaffection among its employes interfered greatly with the company's business, and instructed the general manager to promptly discharge any employe found guilty of such hostility to the company, and under no circumstances to reinstate such discharged employe into the company's service.

TRYING TO LOCATE THEM.

Diseased Immigrants Said To Have Settled in Connecticut Towns.

New Haven, Conn., April 28.—The state board of health has been notified that ten passengers who came over on the steamship Victoria from Naples, were bound for New Haven. This is the vessel on which smallpox broke out. The board is also notified that four passengers were bound for Meriden, one for Hartford and one for Bridgeport. Dr. Lindsley, secretary of the board, upon receiving the letter from the New York commissioners, immediately notified the health officer in each of the towns named to keep a lookout for the expected immigrants and to watch for any developments of the disease. An effort will be made in each of the towns named to get track of the immigrants who intend to locate in the places in question.

YOUNG HILDRETH'S CASE.

A Statement by the Father in Which He Pleads the Accused's Youth.

Rome, N. Y., April 28.—One juror is yet to be obtained in the Hildreth case and there are eleven talesmen left from whom to secure him. J. Homer Hildreth has given out the following statement: "My son is but a boy, only 17 years of age, and even now does not realize the situation. Since the recovery from the excitement and strain incident to that fatal day he has positively asserted and maintained his innocence. I accept said assertion as the truth, and am here as a father, determined to do anything possible to free my son from his terrible position. It does not seem necessary and I do not care to say more at present."

AN INJUNCTION GRANTED.

Decision in the Case of the American Pneumatic Tool Company.

New Haven, Conn., April 28.—Judge Townsend, in the United States circuit court, has granted the motion of the American Tool company for an injunction against the use in the boiler works of the Bigelow company in New Haven of the Boyer pneumatic tool. The action of the court is based on the recent decision in the United States circuit court of appeals in the case of the American Pneumatic Tool company vs. Robert C. Fisher & Co.

For a Hall of Patriotism.

Washington, April 28.—James D. Richardson of Tennessee has introduced in the house of representatives a bill for the establishment in the city of Washington of a "Hall of Patriotism" in which are to be placed donations of battle flags, memorials, relics or statues or other articles of historical value relating to the past or present history of the country.

The Sun calls it "a small Harrison boom." But it has considerable time to grow before the convention meets in St. Louis.

Averaged up, New Jersey people are very law-abiding. Here is a Cape May county Grand Jury reporting without a single indictment.

The severe penalty which Justice Mattison imposed on John Barry, of the borough, this morning, will meet with the hearty approval of every citizen who has one speck of humanity left in them.

Plainfield is essentially a city of conventions this year. Already a half dozen big events that will attract a large out-of-town attendance are scheduled to be held here. Welcome to them all and as many more as will come.

This is odd. Dave Martin, notorious as one of the most corrupt politicians of Pennsylvania, says he is for McKinley for President in face of the fact that the Keystone State Republicans have declared for Matt Quay. Martin believes that the Presidential candidacy should not be joked with.

In Westfield the Epworth League, so a newspaper report says, has failed to make the Italian shopkeepers close on Sunday. The League doubtless is in need of that essential thing so much desired in all reformatory movements—backbone. Editor Pearsall certainly ought to have some to spare.

Was there ever a more autocratic man on the judicial bench of New York than Recorder Goff? Yesterday this accident ordered a bail bond forfeited because a beardless lawyer appeared in court to represent the accused. Goff said it was an insult to the court. New Yorkers have twelve years to repent in for putting this man on the bench.

The Press is surprised to hear that Elizabeth is without a Young Men's Christian Association. Plainfield has long realized the great benefits of that institution for the young men of this city, and the best advise we can give to the Union county metropolis is get one as soon as possible. It makes manly men in a manly way.

The sporting department of The Daily Press is a very popular feature, and it is no idle boast to say that it equals that of any other New Jersey paper. Today, a description of a pleasant ride between Plainfield and Morristown is published, and from time to time other routes of cycle runs for local riders will be exploited.

The Newark "Advertiser," or rather a correspondent of that journal, is responsible for the statement that the Democratic leaders of this state are disturbed at the possibility of a control of the State Convention by the silverites. This danger is purely imaginative, and not at all real. The people of New Jersey are too deeply interested in the general prosperity of tht country to be carried away by the theories of those who imagine that a plentiful and debased currency is a sign of prosperity.—True American.

Assemblyman Queen, of Hudson County, had the stamina to demand legislation from the last legislature which was offensive to railroad corporations, and it is now said that Rufus Blodgett, a somewhat influential Democrat, is bound to humiliate Assemblyman Queen by using his power in the State committee to defeat him as chairman of the coming State convention. The Democratic party is not in a condition, at the present time, to allow such proceeding within their own lines, and if Mr. Queen is really anxious to be chairman of the State Convention, the party cannot better recognize his brilliant services in the Legislature than to accord him that honor. This is no time for bickerings of this sort.

Writing in the April Forum, Mrs. Frank H. Winston says: "Within the past forty years woman has demanded of man much that he has graciously granted her. She wanted equality with him, and it has been given her in all things for which she is fitted and which will not lower the high standard of womanhood that he desires for her. This she accepts without relinquishing any of the chivalrous attentions which man always bestows upon her. The new woman tells us that an ounce of justice is of more value to woman than a ton of chivalry.' But when she obtains her 'ounce of justice' she apparently still makes rigorous demands that her 'ton of chivalry' be not omitted. Woman a ked to work by man's side and on his level, and today she has the chance of so doing. The fields of knowledge and opportunity have been opened to her, and she still desires that of which her grandmother did not dream, because, like an over-indulged child, so long as she is denied one privilege, that privilege she desires above all others. She has decided that without the ballot she can do nothing, for, in her vocabulary, ballot is synonymous with power.

MUCH FOR LITTLE.

An Exhibition Worth Ten Times the Price of Admission.

No circus ever exhibits in New York except Barnum & Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth. Nothing else need be said. But even then the Madison Square Garden, in New York, big as it is, is not large enough to contain more than one half this show. It is only under the enormous tents on the road that the entire show can be seen to perfection. It is a bitter pill to all other show managers to realize that their shows are not large enough nor good enough to place before the critical audiences of the Metropolis. Every large city of the country is visited by Barnum & Baily, for their greatest patronage is derived from the intelligent and educated classes of the people, as the wonderful attractions and features appeal to the refined everywhere. In the menageries one can see the giant and dwarf animals of all kinds, witness the wonderful power of man over the brute creation, as shown in the marvelous performances of the troupes of wild beasts doing everything at the word of command of a weaponless trainer. Besides, all the cages of animals are properly classified, so as the smallest child can readily comprehend and understand the different species, while those studiously inclined will find ample material for study in the strange people from India. Herds of elephants, open dens of wild beasts, droves of camels, 400 superb horses, ponies, zebras, quaggas and animals in leash are distributed everywhere. Three rings, three stages, a racing track, besides a veritable cobweb of aerial apparatus are required to show the 100 acts of the varied entertainments. Certainly in no other show can so much be seen for so little, and no matter what the admission price charged it would still be the cheapest show to visit, because no one can see so much, learn so much, and go away all the happier for the visit. Among the many other new and novel performances in the rings are the equestrian May-pole dance, fox-hunters' meet, the high jumping horse contests, the new woman on horseback, two lady clowns, the flight of the human arrow, 50 trained horses performing in one ring, and tumbling and leaping tournaments, not mentioning anything about the novel aerial feats by the champions of all countries. Sixteen champion bareback riders, all in fact of any consequence to be had, are a magnificent addition to the long list of expert performers. While Johanna—the giant gorilla—as long as she lives, will remain the greatest living attraction ever seen at any time in the world's history. The crowned heads of the world, with their military escorts, will be grandly depicted in the new free street parade when the show arrives in Plainfield next Wednesday.

MUNYON'S COLD CURE

Promptly Effectual in Curing the Most Obstinate Forms of Colds and Coughs and a Sure Preventive of Pneumonia and All Lung Diseases.

Colds lead to coughs, coughs to pneumonia and consumption; therefore it is all important to check a cold before it reaches the lungs. Munyon's Cold Cure will positively break a cold inside of twenty-four hours if taken as soon as the cold manifests itself. When the cold reaches the lungs or bronchial tubes the Cough Cure should be used alternately every half hour with the Cold Cure. The Cold Cure is guaranteed to prevent pneumonia if used in the beginning of a cold. Pneumonia, or inflammation of the lungs, can be controlled by the use of these two cures.

The Cough Cure positively cures bronchitis, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, loss of voice, soreness of the chest, difficulty in breathing, hacking cough and all pulmonary diseases where the lungs are not too far consumed or covered with tubercles.

A separate specific for each disease. Sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 1505 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., answered with free medical advice for any disease.

THEATRICAL.

A pastoral natural drama, flavored with the breezy local color of Tennessee life and permeated with the soft southern atmosphere of its valleys, such is a "Romance of Coon Hollow," which was one of the substantial triumphs of last season. This success was in part due to the magnificent scenic effects, among which are a bursting dam and realistic flood; the steamboat race between the R. E. Lee and Natchez, and a cotton press in actual operation. But the play met favor with thoughtful people in worthier grounds. It is splendidly constructed, the characters are flesh and blood beings, the plot is very dramatic and interesting, and the humor genuinely funny without being at all farcical. All this we gleam from the comments of the leading cities of the country. A number of intrinsic features lend interest to the production. The electrical effects, showing the features of a night in a southern country place, are both novel and pretty. A troupe of darkey male and female plantation dancers, and two colored quartettes add volume to the entertainments. "A Romance of Coon Holloow" is a complete production, all of the scenery being carried. It will be seen at Music Hall Thursday night for the ushers' benefit.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

WAS A REAL STATESMAN.

The Late President Hippolyte's Patriotic Work for Hayti.

He Ruled Wisely Over the Little Island Nation of Negroes and Was a Truly Great Man in His Sphere—Sketch of His Career.

Louis Moudestin Florvil Hippolyte, president of Hayti, who died recently, was born at Cape Haytien, in the Island of Hayti, in 1827. His mother was a native woman of almost pure African descent; his father one of Soulouqui's ministers. The boy had all the advantages his native country afforded, and grew into a handsome and promising youth. From the first he was of a proud, aggressive nature, and naturally became prominent in the movements which serve as politics in the half-tropical land. He first attained distinction in the civil war of 1865, where he was the leader of the sanguinary revolt in which Legitime was defeated. So signal a success could not but give Hippolyte a prominence which marked him either for assassination or dominance, and he was strong enough to escape the former by achieving the latter.

For 25 years he was one of the foremost men in the Haytian nation, and did perhaps more than any other in shaping its policy and developing its resources. In October, 1889, he was chosen acting president, and in the following May his election was formally confirmed. The term is seven years, of which he had served less than six at the time of his death.

The status of affairs in the Haytian republic calls for the exercise of real statesmanship. One of the chief problems is the overcoming of a lethargy which prevents any real activity except such as is developed at the time of a revolution. But Hippolyte managed to discourage lawlessness and to cultivate in steady growth a system which gave great promise of making his country as prosperous as it was peaceful.

The population of the little republic was 572,000 by a census taken in 1890. Native statesmen have recently placed their estimate at 900,000; and the hope of 1,000,000 was warm in Hippolyte's bosom in these later years. Nine-tenths of the people are negroes of nearly pure African blood, and the unchangeable policy of the people is the refusal of land titles to whites. The religion is Catholic, though owing to the president's wise counsel Protestant missionaries are tolerated. One of his main troubles was the existence of voodoo worship, but he succeeded in confining it to the very lowest classes, where it still exists.

Hippolyte gave every encouragement to educational matters, and lived to see 400 national schools established. The grade has constantly improved for the last ten years and a smaller number of rich young men than usual now complete their education in the United States or in France.

One of the wisest measures to be credited to Hippolyte is fixing the right of suffrage at visible occupation. No man who does not work is permitted to vote. And a pursuance of the same system cannot but result in bettering the whole field of government.

The national debt in 1892 amounted to about $9,000,000, of which half was held abroad. In 1895 the debt had been reduced, and the proportion held at home was much greater. In 1892 there was $12,000,000 export and $14,000,000 import. But in the course of his administration Hippolyte succeeded in adjusting the balance of trade more advantageously for his country. He gave every possible encouragement to the cultivation of coffee, cocoa and cotton, and did much to establish a financial stability that had previously been unknown. The Haytian dollar was, at the time of his inauguration, worth 75 cents in United States money. To-day it is nearly fixed at 95 cents.

No man in the history of the island had so combined the qualities which made the nation self-supporting, which made assistance of white men unnecessary and which preserved peace with the tempestuous kingdom at the farther end of the island. Hippolyte was easily the foremost man in his country, though the very excellence of his work is proved in the fact that other men may to-day conduct its affairs who ten years ago would have been overwhelmed by revolution within a month after inauguration.

How Sound Waves Move.

The speed with which sound waves are transmitted through the atmosphere depends on several conditions. When the temperature is at 32 degrees Fahrenheit, sounds move with a speed of 1,090 feet per second, the velocity increasing with the temperature at the rate of about one foot of speed per second for each degree above the freezing point. Then, again, in damp air sound moves with a greater velocity than it does in dry air, no odds if the dry air be warm and the damp cold. In water sound moves more than four times as fast as it does in air, or say at about the rate of 4,700 feet per second.

GOLD BRICKS.

Robbery of Life as Well as Money.

One of the Worst of Modern Swindles—Stones for Sufferers Who Want Bread.

If a doctor should prescribe candy and other sweets for each young girl who came under his professional care, he would probably be called, by these patients at least, "an elegant doctor."

If your child was desperately ill, and you knew that only some nauseous mixture would effect a cure, you certainly would not hesitate to give it, simply because of its taste. Suppose the druggist would think only of pleasing your child and should give you some mixture of honey, only labeling it with the name of the disagreeable remedy! What would you think of such a man? You would say he was willing to risk the life of the child simply for the sake of pleasing.

We all know what wonderful power cod-liver oil has over a number of diseases. It is also well known that no human skill can completely remove all its peculiar taste. Yet there are a few unscrupulous manufacturers who are so anxious to have a perfectly "tasteless" mixture, that they will leave out the cod-liver oil. They label their bottles as some "tasteless cod-liver oil," and yet there is not a particle of oil present. That is why it is tasteless. They believe you have confidence in their statements, and so are perfectly willing to deceive you if only they can sell their goods. Is such a course anything but a criminal one?

A perfectly tasteless preparation of cod-liver oil cannot be made. We have been making emulsions for twenty years, and we can speak with authority. The nearest approach to it is found in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites. This preparation contains the very best cod-liver oil with nearly all the fishy taste removed. Only a trace of it remains: enough to be detected, but not enough to make the mixture disagreeable even to the most sensitive stomach. This is why sick people find no trouble in taking Scott's Emulsion, and it also explains why so many persons recover their health under its use.

Nearly twenty-five years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion discovered a process of emulsifying or partially digesting cod-liver oil, so as to remove from it almost entirely its obnoxious fishy taste and smell, and at the same time increasing its food and remedial properties. They found also that by combining the Hypophosphites with it that they added still further to its power.

Since that time thousands of imitations have come into the field, but the original has never been equalled in its great strengthening, healing and flesh producing powers. The medical profession have obtained results from it probably unequalled by any other remedial agent.

There was no time to be lost. At any moment we might be interrupted. So the plan was no sooner conceived than carried out. The rope was made fast to my left wrist. Then I mounted on Marie's shoulders, and climbed—not without quavering—through the window, taking as little time over it as possible, for a bell was already proclaiming midnight.

"I clung, oh, how I clung to that rope."

All this I had done on the spur of the moment. But outside, hanging by my hands in the darkness, the strokes of the great bell in my ears, I had a moment in which to think. The sense of the vibrating depth below me, the airiness, the space and gloom around, frightened me. "Are you ready?" muttered Marie, perhaps with a little impatience. He had not a scrap of imagination, had Marie.

"No! wait a minute!" I blurted out, clinging to the sill, and taking a last look at the bare room, and the two dark figures between me and the light. "No!" I added, hurriedly. "Croisette—boys, I called you cowards just now. I take it back! I did not mean it! That is all!" I gasped. "Let go!"

A warm touch on my hand. Something like a sob.

The next moment I felt myself sliding down the face of the house, down into the depth. The light shot up. My head turned giddily. I clung, oh, how I clung to that rope! Half way down the thought struck me that in case of accident those above might not be strong enough to pull me up again. But it was too late to think of that, and in another second my feet touched the beam. I breathed again. Softly, very gingerly, I made good my footing on the slender bridge, and, disengaging the rope, let it go. Then, not without another qualm, I sat down astride of the beam, and whistled in token of success. Success so far!

It was a strange position, and I have often dreamed of it since. In the darkness about me Paris lay to all seeming asleep. A veil, and not the veil of night only, was stretched between it and me; between me, a mere lad, and the strange secrets of a great city; stranger, grimmer, more deadly that night than ever before or since. How many men were watching under those dimly-seen roofs, with arms in their hands? How many sat with murder at heart? How many were waking, who at dawn would sleep forever, or sleeping who would wake only at the knife's edge? These things I could not know, any more than I could picture how many boon companions were parting at that instant, just risen from the dice, one to go blindly—the other watching him—to his death? I could not imagine, thank Heaven for it, these secrets, or a hundreth part of the treachery and cruelty and greed that lurked at my feet, ready to burst all bounds at a pistol-shot. It had no significance for me that the past day was the 23d of August, or that the morrow was St. Bartholomew's feast!

No. Yet mingled with the jubilation which the possibility of triumph over our enemy raised in my breast, there was certainly a foreboding. The vidame's hints, no less than his open boasts, had pointed to something to happen before morning—something wider than the mere murder of a single man. The warning also which the Baron de Rosny had given us at the inn occurred to me with new meaning. And I could not shake the feeling off. I fancied, as I sat in the darkness astride of my beam, that I could see, closing the narrow vista of the street, the heavy mass of the Louvre, and that the murmur of voices and the tramp of men assembling came from its courts, with now and again the stealthy challenge of a sentry, the restrained voice of an officer. Scarcely a wayfarer passed beneath me; so few, indeed, that I had no fear of being detected from below

And yet, unless I was mistaken, a furtive step, a subdued whisper were borne to me on every breeze, from every quarter. And the night was full of phantoms.

Perhaps all this was mere nervousness, the outcome of my position. At any rate I felt no more of it when Croisette joined me. We had our daggers, and that gave me some comfort. If we could once gain entrance to the house opposite, we had only to beg, or in the last resort force our way downstairs and out, and then to hasten with what speed we might to Pavannes' dwelling. Clearly it was a question of time only now; whether Bezers' band or we should first reach it. And struck by this I whispered Marie to be quick. He seemed to be long in coming.

He scrambled down hand over hand at last, and then I saw that he had not lingered above for nothing. He had contrived after getting out of the window to let down the shutter. And more; he had at some risk lengthened our rope, and made a double line of it, so that it ran round a hinge of the shutter; and when he stood beside us, he took it by one end and disengaged it. Good, clever Marie!

"Bravo!" I said softly, clapping him on the back. "Now they will not know which way the birds have flown!"

So there we all were, one of us, I confess, trembling. We slid easily along the beam to the opposite house. But once there in a row one behind the other with our faces to the wall, and the night air blowing slantwise—well I am nervous on a height and I gasped. The window was a good six feet above the beam. The casement—it was unglazed—was open, veiled by a thin curtain, and alas! protected by three horizontal bars—stout bars they looked.

Yet we were bound to get up and to get in; and I was preparing to rise to my feet on the giddy bridge as gingerly as I could, when Marie crawled quickly over us, and swung himself up to the narrow sill, much as I should mount a horse on the level. He held out his foot to me, and making on effort I reached the same dizzy perch. Croisette for the time remained below.

A narrow window ledge 60 feet above the pavement, and three bars to cling to! I cowered to my holdfasts, envying even Croisette. My legs dangled airily, and the black chasm of the street seemed to yawn for me. For a moment I turned sick. I recovered from that to feel desperate. I remembered that go forward we must, bars or no bars. We could not regain our old prison if we would.

It was equally clear that we could not go forward if the inmates should object. On that narrow perch even Marie was helpless. The bars of the window were close together. A woman, a child, could disengage our hands, and then—I turned sick again. I thought of the cruel stones. I glued my face to the bars, and pushing aside a corner of the curtain, looked in.

There was only one person in the room—a woman, who was moving about, fully dressed, late as it was. The room was a mere attic, the counterpart of that we had left. A box bed with a canopy roughly nailed over it stood in one corner. A couple of chairs were by the hearth, and all seemed to speak of poverty and bareness. Yet the woman whom we saw was richly dressed, though her silks and velvets were disordered. I saw a jewel gleam in her hair, and others on her hands. When she turned her face towards us—a wild, beautiful face, perplexed and tear-stained—I knew her instantly for a gentlewoman, and when she walked hastily to the door, and laid her hand upon it, and seemed to listen—when she shook the latch and dropped her hands in despair and went back to the hearth, I made another discovery. I knew at once, seeing her there, that we were likely but to change one prison for another. Was every house in Paris then a dungeon? And did each roof cover its tragedy?

"Madame!" I said, speaking softly, to attract her attention. "Madame!"

She started violently, not knowing whence the sound came, and looked round, at the door first. Then she moved towards the window, and with an affrighted gesture, drew the curtain rapidly aside.

Our eyes met. What if she screamed and aroused the house? What, ideed? "Madame," I said again, speaking hurriedly, and striving to reassure her by the softness of my voice, "we implore your help! Uuless you assist us we are lost."

"You! Who are you?" she cried, glaring at us wildly, her hand to her head. And then she murmured to herself: "Mon Dieu! what will become of me?"

"We have been imprisoned in the house opposite," I hastened to explain, disjointedly, I am afraid. "And we have escaped. We cannot get back if we would. Unless you let us enter your room and give us shelter—"

"We shall be dashed to pieces on the pavement," supplied Marie, with perfect calmness—nay, with apparent enjoyment.

"Let you in here?" she answered, starting back in a new terror; "it is impossible."

She reminded me of our cousin, being, like her, pale and dark-haired. She wore her hair in a coronet, disordered now. But though she was still beautiful, she was older than Kit, and lacked her pliant grace. I saw all this, and judging her nature, I spoke out of my despair. "Madame," I said, piteously, "we are boys. Croisette! Come up!" Squeezing myself still more tightly into my corner of the ledge, I made room for him between us. "See, madame," I cried, craftily, "will you not have pity on three boys?"

St. Croix's boyish face and fair hair arrested her attention, as I had expected. Her expression grew softer, and she murmured: "Poor boy!"

I caught at the opportunity. "We do but seek a passage through your room," I said, fervently. Good heavens, what had we not at stake! What if she should remain obdurate? "We are in trouble—in despair," I panted. "So, I believe, are you. We will help you if you will first save us. We are boys, but we can fight for you."

"Whom am I to trust?" she exclaimed, with a shudder. "But heaven forbid," she continued, her eyes on Croisette's face, "that, wanting help, I should refuse to give it. Come in, if you will."

I poured out my thanks, and had forced my head between the bars—at imminent risk of its remaining there—before the words were well out of her mouth. But to enter was no easy task after all. Croisette did, indeed, squeeze through at last, and then by force pulled first one and then the other of us after him. But only necessity and that chasm behind could have nerved us, I think, to go through a process so painful. When I stood, at length, on the floor, I seemed to be one great abrasion from head to foot. And before a lady, too!

But what a joy I felt, nevertheless. A fig for Bezers now. He had called us boys; and we were boys. But he should yet find that we could thwart him. It could scarcely be half an hour after midnight; we might still be in time. I stretched myself and trod the level floor jubilantly, and then noticed, while doing so, that our hostess had retreated to the door and was eyeing us timidly—half scared.

I advanced to her with my lowest bow—sadly missing my sword. "Madame," I said, "I am M. Anne de Caylus, and these are my brothers. We are at your service."

"And I," she replied, smiling faintly—I do not know why—"am Mme. de Pavannes. I gratefully accept your offers of service."

"De Pavannes?" I exclaimed, amazed and overjoyed. Mme. de Pavannes! Why, she must be Louis' kinswoman! No doubt she could tell us where he was lodged, and so rid our task of half its difficulty. Could anything have fallen out more happily? "You know then M. Louis de Pavannes?" I continued eagerly.

"Certainly," she answered, smiling with a rare shy sweetness this time. "Very well, indeed. He is my husband."

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Washington Wheelmen, of New York, will have a run to this city June 14th.

Councilman R. I. Tolles has purchased a Keating wheel from Lister, of North avenue.

E. A. Campbell, of Park avenue, received his bicycle sulkey from W. H. Rogers, yesterday.

The idea of consolidating the three wheeling associations of the Metropolitan District has been abandoned.

Only flying start and competitive records made from a standing will be recognized this season by the Racing Board of the L. A. W.

Frank LaForge, of New Brunswick, accompanied by a friend, rode their wheels to Plainfield on Saturday and remained over Sunday with friends.

Edward S. Randolph, of West Eighth street, night clerk at Randolph's pharmacy, visited friends in Newark, New York and Brooklyn on his wheel on Sunday.

John Dunn, foreman at Woodbrook farm, and Edward Lowe, assistant trainer, had a bicycle race yesterday between Metuchen and Plainfield. Lowe won.

A dry and shrunken piston in a tire-pump can be avoided unless the pump is an old one by oiling the packing; the packing should be renewed at least once a year.

A shipment of five Clevelands, six Crescents, one Dayton and three Waverly wheels were received the first of the week by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The officers on duty in Westfield Saturday night stopped every bicyclist that did not carry a lighted lamp, and gave them notice that hereafter a lighted lamp would be necessary.

Wm. Kitchen, of Somerset street, and Harvey Thorn, of Orchard place, took a cycling trip to Hightstown Saturday and Sunday. The roads between Bound Brook and Trenton they found to be in a terrible condition.

The eastern branch of the Western Wheel Works has been sending out Crescent wheels at a record-breaking pace during the last few days. On Thursday Manager Merseles shipped 487 wheels, and shipments on Friday and Saturday placed the total for three days at 1,500.

E. L. Blauvelt will be among the entries to the Irvington-Millburn road race. The committee in charge of the race have decided not to restrict the entries to clubs that are members of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs. The Kings County Wheelmen expect to have not less than fifteen men entered in this race.

A. H. Barnett, the winner of the Irvington-Millburn road race of 1894, will compete in the race this year. Monte Scott and A. B. Richt will also be among the entries, says the New York Post. Only last week Barnett told a Press reporter that he would not compete as he did not expect to race anywhere except on the track. He expects to race on the Crescent Oval at the Crescent Wheelmen's Decoration Day meet.

Despite the sudden relapse into cold weather the trade of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company shows no sign of diminishing. Among the latest to purchase Crescent wheels of this enterprising company are Mrs. James Middledith, B. Brady, Wm. Leitheusser, Miss Gertrude Uhdal, Samuel Townsend, E. A. Overton, and Wm. L. Brown. Cleveland Swell Specials are still in demand, and among the purchasers of that wheel are George S. Clay, Miss May S. Kirkner and Mrs. W. H. Stevens. A Liberty wheel was sold to O. C. Nichols.

Among the host of wheelmen that stopped in this city for lunch Sunday was Count Ritter Von Freidrich, of Budapest, Hungary, who started from New York Sunday morning on his way around the world. He expects to make the circuit in two years. He carried an ordinary tourist's bag on the frame of his wheel, and was armed with a knife and revolver. He left this city for Trenton, and intended to make his way to the Pacific coast. The almost insurmountable obstacles that lay in his path did not seem to worry him in the least, and he expects to appear again in New York in 1898.

The New York Times says: "The bloomer, or 'rational costume,' as a few enthusiasts prefer to call it, seems to be going out of fashion in this city, if indeed, it was ever in fashion. Nineteen in every twenty women riders now appear in skirts, and they not only look better, but create a moral atmosphere that sometimes seems lacking with bloomers in evidence. Of course some of the most beautiful and best women in the land ride in bloomers, and will continue to do so, but generally speaking the growing sentiment seems to be against anything mannish in the wheelwoman's attire."

The Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey have arranged some of the details for their annual century run on June 20th; if it should not be clear on the night of June 19th the run will take place on June 27th. The course will be from Newark to Asbury Park passing through this city enroute. The starting point will be the Continental Hotel, and the run will be begun at 5 a. m., one hour later than in previous years. A time limit of fourteen hours will be placed on all who desire to qualify for the survivors' medals, which are to be given by the association to all who complete the full distance covered by the run, about 106 miles.

The Quaker City Wheelmen, of Philadelphia, are arranging for a big Decoration Day century run from Philadelphia to Newark passing through this city. The run being a decidedly easy one, a number of riders are expected who have never ridden a century before. Although the number of unattached riders will be exceptionally large, special prizes have been offered to the clubs bringing through the largest number of survivors. The first prize will be given to the Philadelphia club bringing through the largest number of survivors; the next will be presented to the Philadelphia club having the second largest number of men to ride the full distance; the third prize will go to the Philadelphia club with a membership not exceeding seventy-five which will bring through the largest number of survivors. A special prize will be presented to the out-of-town club bringing through the largest number of men. A grand prize will be offered the club breaking the record for bringing through the greatest number of men on any century run. So as to make the competition a fair and lively one, the Quaker City Wheelmen themselves, although having a big representation on the run, will not compete for any of the prizes.

There are many enjoyable rides that can be taken from Plainfield, but none more pleasurable than the one to Morristown, going by the way of Springfield and the Morris turnpike, which passes through Chatham and Madison. Morristown is only 12 miles from Plainfield as the crow flies, but following the good roads in the way already mentioned, it is 21 miles distant. The road from this city to Springfield is too well-known to need much description. It is 9½ miles long, well macadamized, with no steep hills but many easy grades. At Springfield the rider turns to the left following the macadam. After riding a short distance, he reaches a fork in the road. The left branch leads to Summit and the right to Chatham. The latter should be followed. A steady up grade, a mile in length, brings the rider to the foot of one of the worst hills in the vicinity. It is nearly a ¼ of a mile long and full of curves. The road is in excellent condition, however, and it is possible to ride up although the majority prefer to walk. From the summit of the hill down into Chatham it is as smooth as a floor and is in perfect condition. Instead of one long hill, there are four short descents with level stretches between. The excellent road continues on almost to Madison, which is about 4 miles from Morristown. The macadam extends all the way and makes very good riding, but the portion near Morristown has not been repaired lately and is rougher. From Chatham to Morristown, there are no steep hills although there are quite a number of easy grades. The scenery is beautiful, especially in the spring, and there are several points from which the traveler can view the surrounding country to the north and east for miles. Morristown is quite a city and contains many handsome residences and buildings. It is a famous society resort and supports several large and fashionable clubs, whose clubhouses, golf links, tennis courts, etc., are passed as the rider in entering the city. In front of almost all the drug stores, ice cream saloons and restaurants there are racks for bicycles, as Morristown contains a great number of wheelmen and wheelwomen. Washington's Headquarters is one of the great attractions of the place, while the large buildings of the New Jersey State Hospital, better known as the Insane Asylum, are located at Morris Plains, only 2 miles away. If the riders does not care to hurry and make the trip in one afternoon, as it can be ridden very comfortably in 2 hours each way. A very pleasant ride is to go to Morristown in the afternoon, see its attractions, take dinner there and return in the evening. If the moon happens to be up, the riding will, of course, be more enjoyable, but the roads are so smooth that night riding is neither dangerous or trying to the nerves.

BILIOUS PILLIOUSNESS.

Why Some Bilious People Take Pills and Others Don't.

Biliousness is much misunderstood. So many people have it, that 'tis worth understanding, the more so as it is easy enough, if you begin right.

Liver secretes a fluid called bile. Bile goes to the intestines where it performs important work in digestion. Sometimes bile passages in liver get clogged. This is biliousness.

"Pilliousness" is the idea that by taking a pill which stimulates the liver, we may cure biliousness. It is only an idea Pill taking relieves but does not cure it. The cure can only come through the stomach.

Why?

Biliousness is caused by the poison of undigested food, irritating the liver. To cure biliousness, these poisons must be got out of the stomach. The only sure way to do this is with Shaker Digestive Cordial.

Shaker Digestive Cordial is a pleasant, tonic aid to digestion, prepared from roots, herbs and wine by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon It helps the stomach to digest its food, and sweeps out of the system all dangerous poisons.

In this way it cures biliousness, headache, nausea, dizziness, bad taste, stomache, fever, flatulence, constipation, loss of appetite, etc., when other remedies only give temporary relief.

All druggists. Ten cents for a trial bottle.

GOLF.

The golf season has opened and promises to be a merry one. The interest in the fascinating game has rapidly increased during the last year and the number of golf links in this country is much larger than ever before.

JOKE NOT APPRECIATED.

John Nelson Thought the Wrong Man Was Calling Him Names.

Jokes are not always the most profitable sources of pleasure as was clearly evidenced yesterday on West Third street. John Nelson, a German, who lives on New street, was stopping near the saloon on West Third street for awhile, apparently doing nothing, when Martin Kane and Fritz Miner began calling the man names. They were near the house occupied by Louis Coombs, who was seated on his porch. This made Nelson angry, and he began calling Mr. Coombs names. The result was that the latter left his porch and a scuffle ensued. Some boys happened to see the affair and called Patrolman Saunders attention to it. When he first saw them they were rolling about in the street. He inquired what the trouble was and learned the above facts which were brought out at the hearing before Judge DeMeza. Nelson insisted that Coombs was calling him names, as he did not see the other two men. He now carries an enlarge facial expression as a result. Jubge DeMeza heard both sides of the case and imposed a fine of $3 or 30 days on Nelson and $5 or 20 days on Coombs. Both fines were paid by Mr. Coombs. Nelson showed signs of appreciation and was profuse in his thanks.

BULL MAY BE INSANE.

A Former Resident of Lyons Farms Arrested for Assulting His Family.

James H. Bull, a former well-to-do resident of Lyons Farms, was arrested yesterday morning at his home on a complaint made by his wife that he had committed assault and battery on her and their children. The prisoner was taken before Justice Tiernan at Roselle, who committed him to the county jail in default of $500 bail.

He will be subjected to an examination to determine his sanity, as his family fear he is deranged. The prisoner belongs to a good family and at one time had a fine farm at Lyons Farms, and operated large clay pits there, but he lost all his property. His brother is a wealthy resident of Elizabeth and does business in New York city.

He called to see the prisoner on learning of his arrest, and there was a touching scene at the jail, where both brothers wept copiously when they met.

The prisoner blames his wife for all his misfortunes, and is very bitter against her.

A Funny Sort of an Animal.

A. C. Vail, of West Eighth street, returned last Saturday night from a trip bringing with him a strange animal called a racoon cat. It resembles a regular pussy very much except that it has an immense tail of very long silky hair. It eats in the same manner as a raccoon, holding its food in its forepaws. When brought home it was put in the harness case and climbed about the smooth varnished sides without the slightest trouble.

EXCISE VIOLATOR FINED.

DOMINICK PARRON CONVICTED OF SELLING LIQUOR ILLEGALLY.

Assemblyman Codington Was His Counselor and Entered a Plea of Non Vult—Fined $50 or Sixty Days in Jail.

The first of the three violators of the excise law to appear for trial was Dominick Parron, the keeper of the Italian shanty on North avenue. He was charged with selling beer without a license. He runs a sort of store, hotel and saloon on North avenue, just west of Netherwood station, but he is very select about his guests, allowing only natives of sunny Italy to enjoy his lodgings and drink his beer.

The police have suspected the existance of such a place for some time, but evidence was very hard to secure as most of the purchasers were too good friends of Parron to testify against him. Sergeant Kiely worked on the case, however, and secured the necessary evidence but it was not necessary to produce it. Roundsman Frederickson captured the wily Italian on Front street yesterday noon as told in yesterday's Press. He loudly declared his innocence and claimed that he had not sold any liquor. He could not get anyone to go his bail and so he was locked up for trial this morning.

He was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning at the latter's office, Assemblyman W. R. Codingington appearing as his attorney. Assemblyman Codington retracted his client's plea of not guilty and pleaded non vult instead. Parron was, he said, a foreigner and did not understand that the laws of this city prevented him from selling beer to his friends.

The Italian was really a noble looking fellow with classic bow, and features somewhat like that of the Roman, but the bravery of the Roman was absent, and Parron sat meekly in his seat and let his counsel do all the talking.

There was a horde of Parron's countrymen at the trial and they watched the proceedings with great interest.

As there was no attempt made to claim that Parron was innocent, Sergeant Kiely did not produce his evidence. The Judge, of course, declared him guilty and ordered him to pay a fine of $50 or go to jail for sixty days. He paid the fine.

Wm. Ross came up before City Judge DeMeza this afternoon and he plead guilty to the charge of selling liquor without a license. He was represented by Adam Beck. The Judge sentenced him to pay a fine of $50 or go to jail for 60 days.

Died Too Soon to Get the Benefit.

After an illness of a little over a year with consumption, John T. Winn, of 455 West Third street, surrendered to that terrible disease, as exclusively reported in The Daily Press of yesterday. A benefit was arranged and given to him in T. A. B. Hall on Monday evening, and death occurred yesterday morning about 11:45. He was a plumber by trade and worked for A. M. Griffen for a long time. His parents are both dead and a sister passed away a short time ago. He had many friends who will mourn his death. The funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 8:30 from the house and 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church.

Fix the Sidewalk.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Why don't the street committee of the borough order the crosswalk extended to the end of the culvert at Sycamore and Mercer avenues? That is their business and not the freeholders. Ex-Freeholder.

During the winter of 1833, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

NOT AN ICE-CREAM NIGHT.

Still People Wantad It and the Committee Furnished It.

Last night was not what might be called an "ice-cream" night, but nevertheless it required two extra supplies to satisfy the purchasers at the ice-cream and cake sale given in the Sunday-school rooms of the First Presbyterian church last evening. The sale was given by the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society for the benefit of Marconnier chapel. The main room was hung with Japanese lanterns, while the tables in the class rooms were decorated with roses and other cut flowers.

During the first part of the evening the visitors were entertained with a very enjoyable programme which was as follows: Selection, the Schubert Orchestra; recitation, Miss Mary A. Luckey; vocal solo, Miss F. May Grant; report of the secretary of the Marconnier chapel, Miss Stover; selection, the orchestra; two songs; the Misses Carroll; recitation, Miss Mary A. Luckey; selection, the orchestra. This was the first appearance of the Ladies' Schubert Orchestra, of Dunellen and New Market, at the First Presbyterian church, and they made a very good impression.

Their selections were well rendered and there was universal praise for Mrs. Buckley and the excellent manner in which she had trained the orchestra. Miss Luckey's recitations were very good and elected great applause, especially her story of the painting of the baby. The vocal selections were also very much enjoyed. At the close of the programme the visitors were invited to sit down at the tables in the small class room and purchase ice cream and cake. The audience responded to the invitation and the committee had to send out twice for another supply of ice cream.

The committee consisted of Miss Bessie Blair, chairman, the Misses Flora Petrie, Jennie Abbott, Mary Kellogg, Lettie Remson, Lizzie Bittenbender and Agnes Blair, and William Coriell and Guernsey Nevius. Miss Joshine Petrie, president of the society, exercised a general supervision over all. The aides who assisted in serving the numerous patrons with ice cream and cake, were the Misses Nellie Van Winkle, Jessie McKillop, Edith L. Pruden, Gertrude Hazeltine, Eleanor T. Van Deventer, Grace E. Overton, Katherine Nevius, Lillian Glen, Eva Dayton, Pansy Herring, Charlotte Messersmith, Nora Williams, Evelyn Searing, Margaret Vermeule, Mary A. Luckey, Fannie Mills and Edith Bond.

The patient's sister Mamie supplied the skin, a large patch of which was taken from her limb and transferred to her sister's burned arm. The next operation will be performed in about ten days, and the patient's other sister will supply the skin.

Her Fourth Birthday.

Mrs. Wm. H. Hillman, of Sherman avenue, gave a pleasant birthday party yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, in honor of her four-year-old daughter, Evelyn McHarg Hillman. The table was very prettily decorated, and in the centre was a a large cake, surmounted by four candles, denoting little Miss Hillman's age. Cake, fruit, ice cream and candy were served during the afternoon. Those present were Elizabeth McClay, Rosa Woltman, Ellena Woodcock, Grace Kinsman, Edith Marsh, Jack and Will Douglass, May Batcheler, Gideon Guion and Marie Fountain.

An Honorable Family Record.

The New York Tribune of Monday contains an interesting sketch and picture of Rev. Samuel Miln Studdiford, who has had a pastorate of thirty years in length at the Third Presbyterian church, Trenton. He was pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Plainfield for two years, his pastorate beginning in 1860. Dr. Studdiford belongs to a family that has preached the Word of God to Jerseymen for 119 years.

A MYSTERIOUS FIRE.

A Borough House Damage to the Amount of $1,000.

A mysterious fire broke out this morning at 1:15 in the house located at the corner of Harrison street and Greenbrook road. The upper part of the house is occupied by Mrs. Laing, a widow, and the lower part is vacant. David C. Allen was returning home from a lodge meeting and saw smoke coming from the roof. He pulled Box 154 at the corner of Rockview avenue and Rockview Terrace. As quickly as possible the department responded. When they arrived they found that the whole upper part was in a blaze and the kitchen range was upset. Mrs. Laing had left the house and gone next door with a neighbor after being aroused. In short order a line of hose was laid and the fire extinguished. The damage will amount to $1,000 and there was no insurance. The top and upper inside was almost completely destroyed, together with a quantity of valuable papers, including a will.

Hydrant No. 53, from which water was taken, was partly out of order and caused some delay. The cause of the fire is unknown and is a puzzle to the firemen.

BICYCLE RIDERS COLLIDE.

They Came Together While Scorching Along Central Avenue.

Everett Sherwin, of Orchard place, and James Conway, of West Front street, both about fifteen years of age are enthusiastic riders of wheels. Last evening the two engaged in a trial heat along Central avenue. While passing under the railroad bridge over that thoroughfare the wheels came together and there was a spill of wheels and riders being strewn about the street. Neither of the riders were able to move after the fall, both having sustained severe bruises all over their body. Sherwin had a bad cut over his eye and the skin was also torn from his arm. The wheels were both badly damaged. Lawrence Benner, of Orchard place, who happened along, carried the prostrate boys to the sidewalk and later assisted them to their homes.

Died Suddenly.

Mrs. Sarah M. Coddington, aged 75 years of age, died very suddenly of heart disease this morning at the residence of her son in-law, William A. Stites, of 200 Grove street. She retired as usual last evening, and this morning was found in a paralyzed condition. She died before medical aid could be summoned.

FOR THE BOYS IN BLUE.

WINFIELD SCOTT POST GIVE A RECEPTION TO G. A. R. OFFCERS.

The Woman's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans Also Present—Reminiscences of the Late Unpleasantness Were Given.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G.A.R., gave Department Commander White, Department Council Member John Lawrence and Past Department Medical Dr. Younglove a reception last evening in their rooms on East Front street. Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, and John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, were also present. Post 73 held a short business meeting at which time a recruit was mustered. After the business, all adjourned to the room below where the Woman's Relief Corps had prepared a most bountiful collation for the guests. While the act of filling the inner man was going on the Plainfield Cornet Band appeared and enlivened the occasion with patriotic airs. In the midst of the festivities Department Commander White was called on and in his usual happy way gave a most excellent talk along Grand Army lines. He brought out many important facts in regard to the veterans, and spoke at some length on the coming department encampment at Asbury Park, which is to be held in June.

Dr. Younglove was next introduced and gave the boys a rousing talk, including a toast to the women. He is a talented speaker and having a thorough knowledge of the "Boys in Blue," he interested those present by recalling many things to their minds. Remarks followed by Department President Mrs. Morse, of the Woman's Relief Corps; President Mrs. Brokaw, of Corps 10; John Lawrence, of New Brunswick; Dr. Livermore, Commander J. T. Dunham and Past-Commander C. H. Randolph, of Post 109; and Past Commander M. C. Dobbins, of Post 73. Interposing the remarks the band favored the gathering with music.

At 11 o'clock the visitors accompanied by the comrades and band, left for the station, where they left by the 11:28 train for home.

Those who had charge of the refreshments consisted of Mrs. Cox, chairman; Mrs. Brokaw, Mrs. McVoy, Mrs. Morse, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Woodruff and Mrs. Walker.

WOOED WHILE AT SCHOOL.

Ruth Letson's Romantic Courtship and Marriage in Plainfield.

Residents of the little village of Stelton, are talking about the romance of Miss Ruth Letson, a pretty daughter of Benjamin Letson, who a few nights ago surprised her family by announcing that she was married.

Miss Letson was graduated from a school in Hightstown last summer. While there she fell in love with William Eldridge, a student. Eldridge came from Camden. His father is a wealthy business man in Philadelphia, and gave his son plenty of money.

Young Eldridge was very devoted to Miss Letson, and the two attracted much attention as they drove about in his fashionable dog cart. When the young woman returned home Eldridge visited her frequently, but Miss Letson's parents never suspected that there was anything serious in the attachment and when at the supper table the girl announced that she was a wife none could believe her.

The father, in his astonishment, let a cup of tea that he had raised to his lips fall, and the other members of the family uttered exclamations of surprise. The girl, in the midst of her blushes, said that she and Mr. Eldridge had driven to Plainfield last August and had been married there.

"He has sent for me to come to Camden, and I am going, she continued. "I would have told you all long ago, but I have been waiting for him to get started in business."

The young woman then burst into tears. She has joined her husband, leaving home with the good wishes of her parents.

Went Into the Brook.

A lad living in the borough was trying to see how close he could ride to Green brook last Saturday, near Brook avenue, when his wheel slipped and both bicycle and rider took an involuntary plunge. Neither were injured by the fall or bath.

An Affidavit.

A LONG RUN FOR FIREMEN.

A House Burned at the Corner of North Avenue and Terrill Road.

A fire broke out last night at 11:40 in the house at the corner of North avenue and Terrill road, owned by Bernard Flynn. The supposition is that it was set on fire. Adolph Carman, a member of Engine Company, No. 2, was out during the evening with the Plainfield Cornet Band, and while returning home on South avenue he saw the blaze. He sent in an alarm from Box 28 opposite Hand's coal office. The department responded quickly, considering the long run, and found the house in flames.

The Fanwood fire department was also present, and both departments did exceedingly good work. The Fanwood department laid 700 feet of hose from the hydrant on South avenue and the Plainfield department used hose for the balance of the distance 1,000 feet. The pressure of water for that distance was very low, but the firemen succeeded in extinguishing the flames, and prevented the nearby houses from burning. The departments returned home by 2 o'clock. A singular fact is that Mr. Flynn, who is an engineer on the Central Railroad, tried to sell the property yesterday but could not.

DEATH OF MRS. JOSIAH MONCTON.

Former Plainfield Woman Dies at the Home of Her Daughter in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Josiah Moncton, a former resident of this city, died Monday at the home of her son-in-law, Matthias Benson, at Bangor, Pa. Her remains were brought to this city today and interred in the M. E. Cemetery.

The deceased was the wife of the late Josiah Moncton, who at one time in the early history of Plainfield had a locksmith and gunshop on Front street, where the First National Bank is now temporarily located. Mr. Moncton for a long time, before the Central Railroad was elevated, was flagman at the Peace street crossing, and died at his home on Church street several years ago. They had eight children, five boys and three girls, William, Josiah, George, Frank, John deceased, Rachael, wife of Matthias Benson, who lives at Bangor, Pa., Susan, wife of Arthur Davis, who resides in Missouri, and Cecelia, deceased, who was the wife of Isaac Squier, deceased, and who was a well-known person in this city a few years ago.

Mrs. Moncton was a sister to the late Theodore Adams, who died about a year ago, and who resided on Duer street and Linden avenue.

NOT YET ORGANIZED.

Some Brief Political Gossip About the New Jersey Republicans.

The Republican State Committee selected at the recent State Convention has not as yet organized. Nor has any call been made, so that it is not known whether it will organize before the National Convention or not. At the present time Franklin Murphy is at the head of the general organization, and Garrett A. Hobart is at the head of the Executive Committee.

There is no doubt that John Y. Foster, who has been secretary of the committee for the last twenty-five years, will succeed himself. Colonel Toffey, who has been treasurer of the committee for eighteen years, is being urged as his own successor.

Paid the Rent After All.

A year ago when Mrs. Marion Knight ceased running a millinery store on West Front street, where the New York candy store is now located, she owed J. O. Campbell, the owner of the property, $120 for rent. She was unable to pay at that time and afterwards showed no disposition to liquidate the debt. Mr. Campbell put the matter in the hands of Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer. He found that she had moved to Milford, Conn., and from there to Arkansas. He commenced proceedings against her and learned that she possessed some property in Connecticut. An attachment was then issued, and after the legal formalities were gone through with, the bill was paid.

Roasted Chickens by the Dozen.

Leigh Back, a wealthy resident of Bound Brook, is a great chicken fancier. He had a patent incubator in the cellar of his residence, and thought it about perfect. One night recently he adjusted his latest appliance to the incubator and retired. Before morning his slumbers were disturbed by a strong odor of burning chicken flesh. The next day he raked the ashes of 150 chicks into a dish pan and patched up a large spot that the fiery furnace had scorched in the ceiling.

PLEA FOR HAMMOND

Members of Congress Sign a Petition to President Kruger.

EFFORTS TO SECURE A PARDON

His Release Would Be Esteemed an Especial Compliment To the United States—His Good Character at Home Pointed Out.

Washington, April 29.—Senator Stewart prepared and circulated in both houses of congress yesterday afternoon a petition addressed to President Kruger of the Transvaal republic asking him to pardon John Hays Hammond. The fact that such petition had been signed and would be forwarded was cabled the Transvaal government. The petition, which was signed generally, is as follows: "The undersigned members of the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, respectfully represent that John Hays Hammond is a citizen of the United States; a man of high character and connected with the best families in this country, and an engineer of ability. We regret exceedingly his unfortunate connection with the troubles in your country, for which all our people entertain feelings of kindness and respect. In view of the irreproachable character of Mr. Hammond in his own country and the high standing of his friends and relatives, we earnestly ask for him your most kindly consideration. If your excellency would extend to him a pardon for his offenses against your government we would esteem it an especial compliment to ourselves, as well as to the people of the United States. Hoping that you will relieve Mr. Hammond from the penalty of his connection, we are your most obedient servants, etc."

OPINIONS AT WASHINGTON.

No Fear That Hammond and the Other Condemned Men Will Be Executed.

Washington, April 29.—The general impression in official circles here is that John Hays Hammond and the five others condemned to death at Pretoria, South Africa, yesterday, will escape death and that their sentences will be commuted. This belief was strengthened by the dispatch received by Secretary Olney from United States Vice Consul Knight at Cape Town announcing the convictions and adding that it was "understood that the sentence would be commuted." The British government is interesting itself in the interest of the men, who are all British subjects except Hammond, and the British representatives in the Transvaal have been instructed by their home office to guard Mr. Hammond's interests equally with the Englishmen. The subject formed a topic for discussion at the cabinet meeting. It is asserted here that the state department has official information to the effect that Hammond and the other leaders in the reform movement pleaded guilty under an agreement that they would not be punished severely. It is likely that the leaders will get off with heavy fines and perhaps small sentences of imprisonment. Hammond is possessed of considerable property in the South African republic and there has been a disposition on the part of the Boers to confiscate it. So far the attempt has been frustrated and sufficiently strong representations from this government may prevent its accomplishment.

HAMMOND'S CAREER.

History of the Offense for Which He Is To Be Executed.

Washington, April 29.—John Hays Hammond, the American who has been condemned to death by the Boer high court at Pretoria, was arrested together with other officers of the Johannesburg Reform club on January 12, on the charge of "inciting to rebellion and to high treason." Their specific offense was alleged to be the signing of an invitation to Dr. Jameson to come to the relief of the Uitlanders of Johannesburg in the event of their "extreme peril," which the Boer authorities construed to mean in the event of an armed rising against the established government. The Reform club, or union, of which John Hays Hammond was one of the leading spirits, had for a long time been agitating legislative redress of the grievances of the Uitlanders or foreign-born citizens of the Transvaal republic, which included taxation without representation, oppressive mining property laws and a dearth of educational facilities for their children. For nearly a month the Boer government refused to admit them to bail, confining them in an unwholesome prison at Pretoria. Joseph Story Curtis, a well-known New Yorker and a grandson of Justice Story of the United States supreme court, who had been arrested on another charge, at once interested himself in Mr. Hammond's behalf, telegraphing to Secretary of State Olney that Mr. Hammond's situation was critical and urging Mr. Olney to use the good offices of our government without delay to protect Mr. Hammond in his rights as an American citizen.

Secretary Olney Intercedes.

The United States having no diplomatic representative in the Transvaal, Secretary Olney requested colonial secretary Joseph Chamberlain to see that Hammond's rights were safeguarded, and Mr. Chamberlain replied in a very friendly spirit, directing the British high commissioner to secure the same treatment for the American as was accorded to the English prisoners. The American vice-consul at Cape Town, Mr. Knight, afterward went to Pretoria to look after Hammond's interests and reported that President Kruger had promised to befriend Hammond so far as lay in his power, but said that Hammond must be tried by the Boer court with the other prisoners, and that if he were found guilty of the offense with which he stood charged he would have to suffer the penalty, whatever it might be. Mr. Hammond's health gave way in the unhealthy Pretoria jail, and on Feb. 5 he was released on bail, which was fixed at £10,000. At the preliminary hearing the trial was set down for April 21.

A Salary of $50,000 a Year.

John Hays Hammond is 39 years old and a native of California. He was graduated from Yale college in 1876, and afterward took a course of study in mining engineering at Freiburg. Returning to this country he soon became known as a mining expert in California and Mexico. In 1893 he went to South Africa to enter the service of the Gold Fields of South Africa company, and the following year he was put in charge of an exploring expedition to Matabeleland, an enterprise of the British South Africa company. His mission was to report upon the mineral wealth of the country. He accomplished his task with such skill and judgment that Cecil Rhodes, then premier of Cape Colony, engaged him at a salary of £1,000 a month as the mining expert of the British South Africa company. Mr. Hammond's headquarters were at Johannesburg, and he had charge of no less than 18,000 miners. It has been urged in his defence that if he had seriously meditated open rebellion against the Transvaal republic he had it in his power to put more men into the field than the Boers could muster themselves, but there is no evidence that Hammond, who was the most popular Uitlander in the Transvaal, ever countenanced an appeal to arms. Mr. Hammond is married and has two sons, who live at Johannesburg with their mother. Mrs. Hammond worked like a heroine to obtain her husband's release.

TAKEN BACK TO NEW YORK.

Maria Barberi Leaves Sing Sing To Be Tried Again for Murder.

Sing Sing, N. Y., April 29.—Detective Robert McNaught of the district attorney's office, New York city, and Emanuel Friend, counsel for Maria Barberi, who was convicted of the murder of her lover but has been granted a new trial, arrived at the prison late yesterday afternoon for the purpose of taking her back to New York. They were at once escorted to the room in which she has been confined and Lawyer Friend notified her of their mission. In a few minutes she entered Warden Sage's private office leaning on the arm of Mrs. Sage and accompanied by Miss Elizabeth and Miss Mary Sage, the warden's daughters, also Miss Vincent, the day watch. In answer to questions she said she had passed her time since she was brought here in learning to read and to write, Mrs. Sage being her tutor, and in making lace. She expressed great sorrow at leaving Mrs. Sage, and said that she would have liked to remain here until the day of the opening of her new trial. She also said that she placed her fate in the hands of God and felt confident that justice would be done to her. After taking leave of Warden Sage and his family, also the different employes of the prison, she was taken in a carriage to the railway station, where the party took the 5:25 o'clock train for New York.

Mysterious Explosion in Havana Attributed to Enemies of the Spaniards.

Madrid, April 29.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that a sharp fight has occurred at Puerto Maravi between a band of insurgents and the gunboats Pizarro and Alvarado. The commander of the Pizarro and another officer were seriously wounded. Twenty others were less dangerously wounded. The losses of the insurgents are not known. The dispatch adds that a serious explosion occurred yesterday in the vicinity of the palace of the captain-general. Hundreds of windows were broken and other damage done. No explanation of the explosion has yet been given, but it is attributed to malice.

Football Eligibility.

Philadelphia, April 29.—It is announced by John C. Bell, chairman of the football committee of the University of Pennsylvania Athletic association, that Harvard and Pennsylvania have mutually agreed to leave the decision as to the eligibility of the candidates for their respective football teams to Casper Whitney. The question at stake is what college or school teams a man may play on before entering Harvard or Pennsylvania without being debarred from playing four years at these latter institutions.

Appointed State Auditor.

Hartford, April 29.—Gov. Coffin has appointed James A. Jones of Deep River state auditor, in place of Oscar Leach of Durham, deceased.

CHAMBERLAIN HASTY

Criticized for His Dispatch to President Kruger.

MAY INJURE CONDEMNED MEN'S CASE

The Belief General in England That the Promoters of the Transvaal Raid Will Be Let Off with Heavy Fines and Short Prison Sentences.

London, April 29.—Though the news of the death sentence passed on the five leaders of the Johannesburg movement was a surprise and shock to those here who have watched the case, politicians inside and outside of parliament admit that the sentence is the natural complement of the plea of gulity. Nobody here believes that the sentence will be executed. It is thought that under the law under which the accused were tried there was no course open to the court but to impose the death penalty. It is believed now that the arrangement between the prisoners and the Transvaal authorities provided for the passing of the death sentence, while at the same time the five men knew that the president would exercise the power with which he is invested and later commute the sentences. What the general feeling among the Boers is towards the prisoners is a matter of doubt.

Heavy Fines Expected.

It has been long understood that very severe sentences would be passed in order that the clemency which President Kruger is certain to exercise might appear greater. It is thought probable that the sentence of death will be commuted to a short term of imprisonment and a large fine, unless Mr. Chamberlain's dispatch to President Kruger, read in the house of commons, irritates the chief magistrate of the Transvaal. This telegram is regarded here as being precipitate and as leaving President Kruger no time to act on his own account, and as having, moreover, the ring of dictation.

Chamberlain Scored.

Ex-prime minister Lord Rosebery, in a speech at Rosedale last night attacked Mr. Chamberlain for his treatment of the Transvaal difficulty. A greater diplomatic comedy of errors, he said, had never been performed. He hoped that the secretary of the state for the colonies would now exercise patience and discretion and curb his tongue. Then the negotiations might be satisfactorily concluded. Lord Rosebery had reference to the following dispatch which Chamberlain sent to President Kruger yesterday: "The government has just learned that the sentence of death has been passed upon the five leaders of the reform committee. They can feel no doubt that your honor will commute the sentence, and have assured the parliament of their conviction that this is your honor's intention."

Jameson Astounded.

London, April 29.—A representative of the United Press tried to obtain an interview with Dr. Jameson on the subject of the sentences imposed at Pretoria upon the members of the Johannesburg reform committee. He declined to discuss the matter beyond saying that he was astounded by the severity of the sentences, which rendered the position very serious.

Other Americans Sentenced.

Pretoria, April 29.—Among the other members of the reform committee who were sentenced yesterday are four Americans, Capt. Main, chief engineer of the Robinson Gold Mining company; Victor B. Clement, assistant consulting engineer of the Consolidated Gold Fields Mining company; J. S. Curtis, a wealthy mining engineer who is well known in New York, and a Mr. Lawley. They were each sentenced to pay a fine of $10,000, to undergo two years' imprisonment and then be banished from the Transvaal for three years.

Gov. Woodbury's Libel Suit.

Burlington, Vt., April 29.—The libel suit of Gov. Woodbury against the Rutland Herald was begun yesterday before Chief Judge Ross and Judges Powell and Tyler of the Vermont supreme court. Several witnesses were examined and depositions read. The testimony showed that liquor had been served by bell boys and by waiters in the dining room of the hotel owned by the governor and that these facts were apparently known to the governor.

PATTISON'S BOOM

Formally Launched by Pennsylvania Democrats To-day.

IN STATE CONVENTION AT ALLENTOWN

The Platform Favors the Gold Standard of Coin and Denounces Every Form of Protection and Favoritism.

Allentown, Pa., April 29.—The democratic state convention, which was called to order at noon to-day in Music hall, started the presidential boom of ex-Gov. Robert E. Pattison, and a strong endorsement will be given the man who has twice been elected as the chief executive of Pennsylvania. The platform will declare unequivocally for a gold standard of the currency, the retirement of all treasury notes and all evidences of government obligation and for the redemption in gold of every form of government notes; for the divorce of the government from the use of silver only in subsidiary coin and for the rigid maintenance of the gold standard. It will declare for government taxation for revenue purposes only by customs and excise tax and against every form of protection and favoritism. The maintenance of friendly relations with all foreign countries and entangling alliances with none, as proclaimed and expounded by Jefferson and Monroe, will be insisted upon. The platform will strongly denounce the last republican state legislature for its failure to economize in expenditures and to equalize taxation; for its erection of superfluous and unnecessary offices in order to pension political favorites; for its refusal and failure to make apportionments, to enforce the constitution and to administer the state treasury. It will also instruct the delegates at large to vote for and use all honorable means to secure the presidential nomination of Hon. Robert E. Pattison.

Illinois Republican Convention.

Springfield, Ill., April 28.—To-day will witness the largest, and what promises to be the stormiest, state convention in the history of the republicans of Illinois, and the situation this morning is decidedly chaotic. From the most conservative estimates, based upon the counties that have instructed for or endorsed ex-Gov. McKinley, the friends of the Ohio candidate up to this morning needed to secure but a few delegates out of a total of 1,335 to insure the adoption of ironclad instructions, and this the opposition is trying to prevent. They are apparently more confident and certainly more defiant than twenty-four hours ago. The bringing of Senator Cullom from Washington is conceded by both sides to have been a master stroke on the part of the state managers. Whether he can hold the entire regiment of uninstructed, without recruits from which the McKinleyites cannot secure the victory, only the ballot to-day can answer

Favors Free Silver.

Towanda, Pa., April 29.—The Bradford county democratic convention yesterday afternoon adopted resolutions favoring the free coinage of silver and sent a delegation to the state convention headed by D. C. DeWitt, a prominent free silver advocate.

BICYCLE SIDE PATH.

The Proposed Route from Asbury Park to Trenton Mapped Out.

Asbury Park, N. J., April 29.—The good roads committee of the New Jersey division of the League of American Wheelmen, together with bicyclists generally and many farmers, at a meeting here, laid out the proposed bicycle side path from Asbury Park to Trenton. Starting from the seashore the path will go through Hamilton, Harmingdale, Turkey, Freehold, Smithburg, Ely, Clarksburg, Allentown and Yardville. The distance to Trenton by this route is forty-five miles. New Jersey is the only state in the union that has a law providing for the construction of bicycle paths by taxation, and the proposed path to the state capital will be the only one of the kind in the country.

Their Elections Valid.

Rome, April 29.—The attempt to unseat Dr. Barbato and Signor de Felice-Guiffrida, who were elected to the chamber of deputies while undergoing imprisonment for complicity in the socialist riots in Sicily, has failed. The chamber last night declared that the mandates of the deputies in question were valid. Both Dr. Barbato and Signor de Felice-Guiffrida were recently released under a decree of amnesty issued by King Humbert.

Dunfee-McCarthy Bout Was Tame.

Rochester, N. Y., April 29.—The bout between Joseph Dunfee of Syracuse and Tom McCarthy of this city at Fitzhugh hall last night was tame, the attitude of the police towards the game being such as to allow no fighting. The men sparred six rounds, Dunfee doing about all the aggressive work and easily outpointing the man from Rochester.

Price of Coal Advanced.

New York, April 29.—Circulars issued to-day by the Reading, the Lackawanna and the Lehigh Valley companies gave the first intimation of an advance in the price of anthracite coal, that will undoubtedly become general. Each coal producing company will make a general advance of twenty-five cents per ton, to take effect May 1.

Boston Water Power Company.

Boston, April 29.—At the annual meeting of the Boston Water Power company officers and directors were re-elected with the exception of A. B. Wilbur, deceased, who is succeeded by Otis Shepard.

LIEUT. LANG'S CASE.

Granted an Extension of His Sick Leave for One Month.

Washington, April 29.—Second Lieutenant Clarence E. Lang, Second artillery, the young army officer whose case has been commented upon, has been granted an extension of his sick leave for a month. Lieutenant Lang's application for retirement is still in abeyance, but on the expiration of the extended leave he will be subjected to another examination to determine his mental and physical condition. His wife has been at the war department recently in company with Representative Burton of Ohio, who appointed Lang to the military academy, and she is apparently as anxious as her husband to have his application for retirement acted on favorably. Lieutenant Lang was married on the day of his graduation to the daughter of a commissary sergeant at West Point. Later Lieutenant Lang and his bride came into public view through mysterious happenings about their residence and allegations that the young couple were snubbed by army society. Lieutenant Lang's application for retirement on account of illness was not granted, but he was given sick leave. The medical report of the examination shows that he is suffering from some nervous complaint.

NEW FRENCH MINISTRY.

Will Probably Be Gazetted To-morrow—Hanotaux Minister Foreign Affairs.

Paris, April 29.—The Meline cabinet, which is nearly completed, will probably be gazetted to-morrow, as M. Meline wishes to be in office on May 1, in order to accept the responsibility of maintaining order on that holiday. M. Hanotaux has accepted the post of minister of foreign affairs. M. Meline, the new premier, was born in 1838, and is a lawyer by profession. He was a member of the commune in 1871 and entered the national assembly in the following year, joining the group of the left of the republican union. He was re-elected in 1875 and took a stand against full amnesty. He has taken a great insterest in tariff matters, and is a pronounced protectionist. He was again re-elected in 1881, and in 1883 was minister of agriculture in the Ferry cabinet. He was elected president of the chamber of deputies in 1889. During that legislature he was general reporter of the customs tariff commission, and was considered the promoter of the French tariff of 1892 and its protectionist measures.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau's Weekly Bulletin for Eastern States.

Washington, April 29.—The weekly telegraphic crop report of the weather bureau states that the week has been generally favorable. The season, which three weeks ago was from two to three weeks late over the northwestern portions of the country, has advanced rapidly. Rain is needed in New England and over the greater portion of the gulf states, the droughty conditions being severe in Florida. New England: farm work just begun in north, though well under way in south portion. New York: many new meadows, especially in the southwest, killed by last season's drought; winter grains doing finely. New Jersey: wheat, rye and grass growing rapidly; much oats sown and potatoes planted. Pennsylvania: wheat generally thin and short; oats seeding well advanced and some corn planted; grass growing rapidly and pastures coming on nicely; fruit prospects excellent.

WEALTHY TRIBE OF INDIANS.

Delegation of Osage Red Men Call on Secretary Hoke Smith.

Washington, April 29.—Secretary Smith yesterday granted an interview to a delegation of Osage Indians, headed by James Bigbear, governor of the nation. These Indians have on deposit in the United States treasury ten millions at five per cent. interest and own 1,000,000 acres of land in Oklahoma territory. They want their annuity roll purged of those illegally registered and desire information as to the amount of interest accumulated on their possessions and instructions as to the education of their children.

FOUR DAYS' DEBATE

Bankruptcy Bill Will Occupy the House Until Saturday.

TWO SUBSTITUTES TO BE OFFERED

Not Known When the Hammond Resolution Will Be Reported—Senator Gorman's Speech on His Amendment to the Naval Appropriation Bill.

Washington, April 29.—The house, the general pension bill having been passed yesterday by a vote of 137 to 54, is to-day considering the bankruptcy bill, discussion on which will be continued until Saturday afternoon, when a vote will be taken on its passage. Notice has been given that one or two substitutes for the pending bill will be offered for the action of the house by friends of voluntary bankruptcy only. The opening speech of the debate was made by Gen. Henderson, rep., Ia., in support of the bill, which is practically the Torrey bill, providing for both voluntary and involuntary bankruptcy. The passage of the bill to place John N. Quackenbush on the retired list of the navy cures what has been considered by the beneficiary and his friends as a great injustice perpetrated upon him. A bill was passed directing the secretary of the interior to restore to the public domain the lands within the limits of Fort Lewis military reservation in Colorado. It is not known when the resolution directing the secretary of state to interpose in behalf of John Hays Hammond, the American citizen concerned in the Transvaal troubles, will be reported back from the foreign affairs committee, to which it was referred yesterday.

In the Senate.

The senate to-day is considering the amendment to the naval appropriation bill made by Senator Gorman, which provides for the reduction in the number of battleships from four to two. Senator Gorman's speech was almost entirely on political lines, although he did not spare members of his own party, especially the secretary of the navy, whom he ridiculed for his pretensions to become a great admiral. The amendment prohibiting retired officers of the army and navy from taking employment from any person or corporation supplying material to the government was passed.

SINKING OF THE WYANOKE.

Cruiser Columbia Will Have To Be Placed in Drydock for Repairs.

Fortress Monroe, Va., April 29.—The damage caused to the U. S. cruiser Columbia by the collision with the Old Dominion line's sidewheel steamer Wyanoke, by which the latter was sunk, will necessitate the placing of the cruiser in drydock for repairs. The damages sustained by the Columbia consist, according to Capt. Sands, of "one hole two feet in diameter on the port side ten feet above the water line, a heavy indentation two feet above the water line on the same side, an indentation of one plate on the starboard side opposite the hole, opening a seam for about six feet, and the temporary loss of one anchor and forty-five fathoms of chain." It is said that as the Wyanoke fouled the Columbia while the latter was at anchor the Old Dominion company is liable to the government for all expenses incurred in making the necessary repairs. It is considered remarkable that no one was killed, as the Wyanoke struck the Columbia with great force and sank almost immediately. The injured members of the Wyanoke's crew, who were attended by the Columbia's surgeon, will probably be able to leave the sick bay tonight or to-morrow, except two or three, who were badly scalded, one of whom is expected to die.

All Bids Rejected.

Washington, April 29.—Secretary Carlisle has rejected all the bids for erecting the additional eight stories of the appraiser's warehouse in New York city. The lowest bidder was James A. McGonigle of Leavenworth, Kan., at $384,500. The reason assigned is that the lowest bid is in excess of the amount of money available for the purpose.

Detached from South Atlantic Station.

Washington, April 29.—Rear-Admiral Borton has been detached from the command of the south Atlantic station and directed to return home, and is granted one month's leave of absence from his arrival in the United States. Commodore Howell is understood to be on the slate as his successor.

New York's New Liquor Law.

Albany, April 29.—Judge Fursman denied the motion of Alexander Balogh of New York for an injunction restraining the state excise commissioner from interfering with his saloon business after June 30 next, even though he does not procure a state license on that date.

To Evacuate Kassala.

London, April 29.—A dispatch from Rome to the Chronicle says: "The report is confirmed that the Italian government has given Gen. Baldissera, the commander of the Italians in Abyssinia, full liberty to evacuate Kassala.

Named for Factory Inspector.

Albany, April 29.—Governor Morton has nominated Daniel O'Leary of Glens Falls to succeed James Connolly as state factory inspector and Capt. Jos. Barker of New York to be assistant factory inspector.

The present Harrison boom is the part left over from 1892.

Our prejudice is always an evening to our good.—Ramshorn.

Inquiries made by the New York Herald in regard to the price charged for ice in various cities show that it varies from twenty-five cents per hundred pounds in Boston to seventy cents in New York.

Among those who are mentioned as probable delegates-at-large from this State to the Democratic National Convention are Senator James Smith, Miles Ross, Judge Howard Carrow and Allan L. McDermott.

Frederick W. Stevens, of Newark, the new Vice-Chancellor, was sworn into office on Monday by Chancellor McGill in Jersey City. He was congratulated by the members of the bar and the laymen present. Vice-Chancellor Stevens will take up the work left unfinished by Vice-Chancellor Bird.

Here is the "new" girl: Miss Mabel Kennedy, who is not yet twenty years old, is the cashier of the Merchants' Bank, of Forsythe, Mont She passes upon all the securities offered, makes the loans, receives the deposits, draws exchange, keeps the books, and, in fact, does all the work of the bank, its owner being a non-resident.

George Kirch, of Somerset street, deserves more than a passing mention for his connection with the proceedings which brought John Barry up with a round turn for cruelty to an old, defenseless and crippled horse. Many people are filled with indignity at the sight of such brutal actions on the part of a human being, but few there are who make it their business to put a stop to them. Mr. Kirch acted quickly and effectively. The credit is his.

The Press is authoritively informed by a homœopathic physician that the statement in The News last night that the rules of the Muhlenberg Hospital made no restriction as to what medical practitioners should attend paid cases, is false. In fact, the physician says that even allopathic physicians who are not members of the hospital staff, are not allowed to attend patients in that institution, though the hospital is amply paid for its services. Of the the twenty-one practicing physicians in Plainfield and North Plainfield, there are only ten who have admittance to the hospital.

There is a new terror added to life in the country. An excited pair rang the door bell of a Justice of the Peace in Hoboken at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. They asked him to marry them. At first he refused, but they said that they had missed the last train for home, and he consented. According to this precedent no suburbanite will dare to accompany a girl to the theatre in the city, unless he is prepared to become a Benedict in the event of getting mixed as to the time table.—Evening Sun.

A well-known bicyclist speaking of the road from Newark to Trenton, via Millburn, Elizabeth, Plainfield, Metuchen and Kingston, says he is "perfectly delighted with the strides made from year to year in the improvement of the highways in this section of New Jersey. Of those seventy miles, not more than seven can be called 'poor,' and five of these are now in the hands of the contractor." Reference is here made to part of the distance between here and Princeton.—Trenton Times.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstreng's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

We might tell you more about One Minute Cough Cure, but you probably know that it cures a cough. Everyone does who has used it. It is a perfect remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness. KIND WORDS FOR MR. CRANE.

A North Carolia Paper Writes of His Successful Evangelistic Work.

The Elizabeth, (N. C.,) Weekly last week published the following about Rev. Arthur Crane, of this city, who has been conducting a series of revival meetings in that place:

Rev. Arthur Crane and H. A. Wolfsohn have just closed a two weeks' revival meeting at the Baptist church. About forty persons professed conversion, or sought restoration to the different churches as a result of the work. But the work cannot be so well measured by the additions made to the churches, as by the conditions changed in the churches. As a matter of fact all the material that is impressible by personal and emotionable motives has been gathered into the several churches during the revivals in recent years. Only the gospel hardened element is left. In this meeting many cases noted for strong resistance in the past yielded and were happily converted at this meeting. Animal excitement and emotional effects are crupulously avoided by Mr. Crane. He is an expert expounder of God's word. His method is to take some great fact in experience, like "Sin," "Responsibility," "The Atonement," "Procrastination," the "Throlldom or Character," etc., and expound and apply God's word of promise or punishment to the condition, and then leave the question of action upon the will and conscience of the hearer. He does this work with keen anglitical insight into human nature, and rare adaptation of the divine law and testimony. In speech he is plain, pointed, graphic, and at times startling in vividness, but never a word of slang. He is always chaste and frequently classic. He never poses for effect. He fears not the face of man, though he depends for his financial support upon the voluntary offerings of the people night after night. His scathing rebuffs of popular and social sins and shams fall without mercy and irrespective of persons. The tonic effect upon the soul life in all churches cannot fail to be uplifting. The building was full, crowded and thronged from first to finish. The meeting closed at high tide with several conversions the last night.

The singing of H. A. Wolfsohn was marked by the devoutest spirit, and executed with tenderness and almost irresistable pathos of appeal. The Spirit of the living God breathes through every note of his sweet songs.

1,001 RARE SIGHTS.

Features in Barnum & Bailey's Show For This Season.

Go and see Johanna, the giantess gorilla, with the Barnum & Baily Greatest Show on Earth. Take the children with you, and amaze them and yourselves by a sight of the most wonderful, human-like creature known to exist. It, together with the circus, will be here on Wednesday, May 6, when a visit will repay every one. This giant of the jungle and forest is so nearly allied to some races of human beings as to startle every one with the remarkable similarity, and some zoologists, like Garner, claim that it has a language. Go and see the young lady shot from a crossbow away up into the air; the 50 trained horses performing in one ring, the 24 elephants, blue-nosed mandrill, 400 horses, 40 ponies, lady clowns, new woman on horseback and the numberless other features. The performances in the main tent—which is waterproof by the way—in addition to the equestrian feats by 12 champion riders in three rings, the specialists on three stages, the trapeze artists, the racing on the track, are supplemented by a trained animal exhibition of most wonderful performances, including 50 trained horses and 24 elephants. By all means see the charming entertainment given by the strange natives in Oriental India, as it is one of the most picturesque and delightfully refreshing exhibitions ever offered. Men, women and beautiful maidens dance before Buddist priests in real temples, while jugglers, tree climbers and others, offer various sights of an interesting and instructive character. The show in its entirety is so meritorious and wonderful withal, that all should see it this year. A new street parade will be given on the morning of arrival, with living reproductions of the crowned heads of the world, the military uniform of all nations, and the horseless carriage.

A Pleasant Event.

A very pleasant euchre party was given last evening by Miss Ernestine Smith and Frank Smith at their home on Madison avenue, in honor of their guest, Miss Bentley, of Westerley, R. I. The first part of the evening passed very enjoyably with euchre at which Miss Maud Mosher and Frank Randolph won first prizes. There were six tables. Dancing and conversation concluded the delightful evening toward the close of which dainty refreshments were served.

Mr. Pangborn's Actions.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Upon the public streets of the borough I have been criticised in reference to my action in defending the State against John Barry for cruelty to animals. I leave my actions in said case with the people for a better government of the people.

A Queer Character.

One of the queerest characters in Hunterdon County is William Updyke, who lives near Bethlehem on a farm all alone. His large barns are filled with crops. The wheat has not been threshed in five years, but lies as it was gathered, except that which has been devoured by the rats. Last year's corn is still unhusked and going to ror.

Green and White Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, gave a charming green and white dinner last evening to Doctor Rodman, the vestry and their wives. There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

A Fact for an Argument.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Below is an article taken from the New York Times of the 27th inst., which is a reply to X's strictures on what I read in regard to the admission of foreign tramps and beggers, which is as follows:

Crouched on Park Row, with infants in their arms, Emelia Remma, of 23 Cherry street, and Cornelia Spero, of 34 Cherry street, were found at 1 o'clock yesterday morning by six Gerry Society agents. With them was twelve-year-old Marie Branda. All were begging. When Agent Pisarro talked with them in Italian, the women told a story of poverty. When placed under arrest by the agents, their lamentations turned into a choice assortment of Italian profanity. An investigation showed that the women had as good a home as the average Italian, and had been in the country but ten days. The women were sent to the workhouse by Magistrate Simms, in the Centre Street Police Court, and the little girl and the two infants were turned over to the care of the Gerry Society.

GEN. WILLIAM BOOTH.

The Salvation Army's Founder Is Something of an Autocrat.

Gen. William Booth, the founder and head of the Salvation Army, has just returned from India, and said on his arrival, concerning the defection of his son, Ballington Booth in America, that although his heart was torn and he was sorely wounded, he was nevertheless determined to conduct the government of the army irrespective of persons. If he had been willing to make an exception in favor of one person, in order to retain the loyalty of that person, he would deservedly have lost forever the confidence and respect of all honest-hearted men and the approval of his own conscience.

The Salvation Army is an absolute despotism as regards government. A though America is its most promising field, it will not modify its methods to conform to American life and American spirit. That is why the new movement of Ballington Booth, adapted to this country, has a bright outlook. Gen. William Booth was born April 10, 1829, at Nottingham, England, was brought up in the Church of England, was converted at Wesleyan chapel, and broke away early in life from the Methodist church to inaugurate the Salvation Army work. His wife, Catherine Mumford, who died some years ago, was a remarkable woman, whose religious experiences were much like the general's own.

"GEN." WILLIAM BOOTH.

The new couple in command of the army in the United States are Commissioner and Mrs. Booth-Tucker. Pending their appointment, Miss Eva Booth, who was sent from England as a commissioner, was at the head of the organization.

THE KHALIFA ABDULLAH.

He Is Not as Great a Leader of Men as Was the Mahdi.

Khalifa Abdullah, the Soudanese potentate against whom the Egyptian army is now marching, and against whom England will send more troops, is the successor of the mahdi, whose name was upon everybody's lips a few years ago. That the sway which the great religious soldier held at his death has gradually shrunk under the rule of the present khalifa there is no doubt. The present ruler assumed all the power and authority attaching to the position of his predecessor, but he never proclaimed himself mahdi or prophet. The fanaticism which blinded the Soudanese to the deception practiced upon them has lost much of its influence. Abdullah's rule has been as tyrannical and rapacious as that of the mahdi, but the Soudanese have been by no means as patient with him as they were with his predecessor. Slatin

KHALIFA ABDULLAH.

Pasha, who will accompany the English expedition up the Nile, says that the extent of the territory now governed by Abdullah is little altered in extent from what it was under Egyptian rule, but the condition of the country is very different. Prosperous districts teeming with population have been reduced to barren, hateful deserts, and the fertile plains over which the western Arabs roamed are now occupied by wild animals. Homesteads of the Nile dwellers are now tenanted by nomad tribes, who have enslaved the rightful owners to till the soil for the new masters; or so says Slatin. Many of the tribes, weary of Abdullah's cruel rule, have revolted and become independent, but the khalifa has sufficient friends left to make him a powerful enemy and to give the invading expedition all it can do to reconquer the territory in question.

Remarkable Exodus of Dunkards.

An exodus of Dunkards from Indiana and other states to North Dakota is taking place, the Great Northern railway the other day hauling on one train from St. Paul 1,036 of these people to points on its line to the North state. It is doubtful if as large a number of actual settlers was ever before moved at one time by any railway in this country. So far over 3,000 of them have been taken to North Dakota and the movement seems to be gaining strength every day.

Torpedo Boat by Rail.

A torpedo boat was successfully transferred by rail from St. Petersburg to Sebastopol a little while ago, and a number of others will now be sent in the same way to the Black sea fleet.

A Lovely Disposition.

For several weeks past Mrs. Murray Hill, of New York, has been visiting some friends in Philadelphia. A few days ago the Philadelphia lady said to her guest:

"So you expect your husband over from New York on the next train. Are you going back to New York with him?"

"That all depends. If he looks happy and jolly, then I'll know that he is having a good time while I am away, and then I'll go back with him and put a stop to it."

"But suppose he looks sad and miserable?"

"Then I'll know that the miserable hypocrite is making that kind of a face to fool me, and you can bet I'll go back with him."—Alex Sweet, in Texas Siftings.

Subtle But Costly Vengeance.

Mrs. Nayborly—What on earth are you going to invite that odious Mrs. Smithlins to your swell dinner for? I thought you hated her.

Mrs. Sweething—Do you suppose I'm going to give a $20 a plate dinner and not make her see me act as hostess at it?—Chicago Record.

How It Strikes a Man.

Mrs Lovesales (to her husband)—O Edgar, look at the bargains in this advertisement! Smithson has bought the whole bankrupt stock of Mulhooly, and just see what he advertises:

"Silks, Mulhooly's price $9 a yard, our price 19 cents."

"Lace curtains, Mulhooly's price $18; our price 79 cents."

"Tablecloths, Mulhooly's price $7.50; our price 61 cents."

Aren't these real bargains?

Her Husband (meditatively)—What an awful villain Mulhooly must have been!—Truth.

Some say that the hypophosphites alone are sufficient to prevent and cure consumption, if taken in time. Without doubt they exert great good in the beginning stages; they improve the appetite, promote digestion, and tone up the nervous system. But they lack the peculiar medicinal properties and the fat found in cod-liver oil. The hypophosphites are valuable, and the cod-liver oil is valuable.
Scott's Emulsion
of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites contains both of these in the most desirable form. The oil is thoroughly emulsified; that is, partly digested. Sensitive stomachs can bear an emulsion when the raw oil cannot be retained. As the hypophosphites, the medicinal agents in the oil, and the fat itself are each good, why not have the benefit of all?
SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

CHAPTER V.

A PRIEST AND A WOMAN.

"He is my husband!"

The statement was made in the purest innocence; yet never, as may well be imagined, did words fall with more stunning force. Not one of us answered, or, I believe, moved so much as a limb or an eyelid. We only stared, wanting time to take in the astonishing meaning of the words, and then more time to think what they meant to us in particular.

Louis de Pavannes' wife! Louis de Pavannes married! If the statement were true—and we could not doubt, looking in her face, that at least she thought she was telling the truth—it meant that we had been fooled indeed! That we had had this journey for nothing, and run this risk for a villain. It meant that the Louis de Pavannes who had won our boyish admiration was the meanest, the vilest of court-gallants. That Mlle. de Caylus had been his sport and plaything. And that we in trying to be beforehand with Bezers had been striving to save a scoundrel from his due. It meant all that as soon as we grasped it in the least.

"Madame," said Croisette, gravely, after a pause so prolonged that her smile faded pitifully from her face, scared by our strange looks, "your husband has been some time away from you? He only returned, I think, a week or two ago?"

"That is so," she answered, naively, and our last hope vanished. "But what of that? He was back with me again, and only yesterday—only yesterday!" she continued, clasping her hands, "we were so happy."

"And now, madame?"

She looked at me, not comprehending.

"I mean," I hastened to explain, "we do not understand how you come to be here. And a prisoner." I was really thinking that her story might throw some light upon ours.

"I do not know, myself," she said. "Yesterday, in the afternoon, I paid a visit to the Abbess of the Ursulines."

"Pardon me," Croisette interposed quickly, "but are you not of the new faith? A Huguenot?"

"Oh, yes," she answered, eagerly. "But the abbess is a very dear friend of mine, and no bigot. Oh, nothing of that kind, I assure you. When I am in Paris I visit her once a week Yesterday, when I left her, she begged me to call here and deliver a message."

"Then," I said, "you know this house?"

"Very well, indeed," she replied. "It is the sign of the 'Hand and Glove,' one door out of the Rue Platriehe. I have been in Master Mirepoix's shop more than once before. I came here yesterday to deliver the message, leaving my maid in the street, and I was asked to come upstairs, and still up until I reached this room. Asked to wait a moment, I began to think it strange that I should be brought to so wretched a place, when I had merely a message for Mirepoix's ear about some gauntlets. I tried the door; I found it was locked. Then I was terrified, and made a noise."

We all nodded. We were busy building up theories—or it might be one and the same theory—to explain this. "Yes," I said, eagerly.

"Mirepoix came to me then. 'What does this mean?' I demanded. He looked ashamed of himself, but he barred my way. 'Only this,' he said at last, 'that your ladyship must remain here a few hours—two days at most. No harm whatever is intended to you. My wife will wait upon you, and when you leave us all shall be explained.' He would say no more, and it was in vain that I asked him if he did not take me for some one else; if he thought I was mad. To all he answered: 'No.' And when I dared him to detain me he threatened force. Then I succumbed. I have been here since, suspecting I know not what, but fearing everything."

"That is ended, madame," I answered, my hand on my breast, my soul in arms for her. Here, unless I was mistaken, was one more unhappy and more deeply wronged even than Kit; one too who owed her misery to the same villain. "Were there nine glovers on the stairs," I declared roundly, "we would take you out and take you home! Where are your husband's apartments?"

"In the Rue de Saint Merri, close to the church. We have a house there."

"M. de Pavannes," I suggested, cunningly, "is doubtless distracted by your disappearance."

"Oh, surely," she answered, with earnest simplicity, while the tears sprang to her eyes. Her innocence—she had not the germ of a suspicion—made me grind my teeth with wrath. Oh, the base wretch! The miserable rascal! What did the women see, I wondered—what had we all seen in this man, this Pavannes, that won for him our hearts, when he had only a stone to give in return?

I drew Croisette and Marie aside apparently to consider how we might force the door. "What is the meaning of this?" I said, softly, glancing at the unfortunate lady. "What do you think, Croisette?"

I knew well what the answer would be.

"Think!" he cried, with fiery impatience. "What can anyone think except that that villain Pavannes has himself planned his wife's abduction? Of course it is so! His wife out of the way, he is free to follow up his intrigues at Caylus. He may then marry Kit or— Curse him!"

"No," I said, sternly, "cursing is no good. We must do something more. And yet— we have promised Kit, you see, that we would save him—we must keep our word. We must save him from Bezers, at least."

Marie groaned.

But Croisette took up the thought with ardor. "From Bezers?" he cried, his face aglow. "Ay, true! So we must! But then we will draw lots, who all fight him and kill him."

I extinguished him by a look. "We shall fight him in turn," I said, "until one of us kill him. There you are right. But your turn comes last. Lots indeed! We have no need of lots to learn which is the eldest."

I was turning from him—having very properly crushed him—to look for something which we could use to force the door, when he held up his hand to arrest my attention. We listened, looking at one another. Through the window came unmistakable sounds of voices. "They have discovered our flight," I said, my heart sinking.

Luckily we had the forethought to draw the curtain across the casement. Bezers' people could, therefore, from their windows, see no more than ours, dimly lighted and indistinct. Yet they would, no doubt, guess the way we had escaped, and hasten to cut off our retreat below. For a moment I looked at the door of our room, half-minded to attack it, and fight our way out, taking the chance of reaching the street before Bezers' folk should have recovered from their surprise and gone down. But then I looked at madame. How could we insure her safety in the struggle? While I hesitated the choice was taken from us. We heard voices in the house below, and heavy feet on the stairs.

We were between two fires. I glanced irresolutely round the bare garret, with its sloping roof, searching for a better weapon. I had only my dagger. But in vain. I saw nothing that would serve. "What will you do?" Mme. de Pavannes murmured, standing pale and trembling by the hearth, and looking from one to another. Croisette plucked my sleeve before I could answer, and pointed to the box bed with its scanty curtains. "If they see us in the room," he urged, softly, "while they are half in and half out, they will give the alarm. Let us hide ourselves yonder. When they are inside—you understand?"

He laid his hand on his dagger. The muscles of the lad's face grew tense. I did understand him. "Madame," I said quickly, "you will not betray us?"

She shook her head. The color returned to her cheek and the brightness to her eyes. She was a true woman. The sense that she was protecting others deprived her of fear for herself.

The footsteps were on the topmost stair now, and a key was thrust with a rasping sound into the lock. But before it could be turned—it fortunately fitted ill—we three had jumped on the bed and were crouching in a row at the head of it, where the curtains of the alcove concealed, and only just concealed, us from anyone standing at the end of the room near the door.

I was the outermost, and through a chink could see what passed. One, two, three people came in, and the door was closed behind them. Three people, and one of them a woman! My heart—which had been in my mouth—returned to its place, for the vidame was not one. I breathed freely; only I dared not communicate my relief to the others, lest my voice should be heard. The first to come in was the woman, closely cloaked and hooded. Mme. de Pavannes cast on her a single doubtful glance, and then to my astonishment, threw herself into her arms, mingling her sobs with little joyous cries of "Oh, Diane! oh Diane!"

"My poor little one!" the newcomer exclaimed, soothing her with tender touches on hair and shoulder. "You are safe now. Quite safe!"

"You have come to take me away?"

"Of course we have!" Diane answered cheerfully, still caressing her. "We come to take you to your husband. He has been searching for you everywhere. He is distracted with grief, little one."

"Poor Louis!" ejaculated the wife.

"Poor Louis, indeed!" the rescuer answered. "But you will see him soon We only learned at midnight where you were. You have to thank M. le Coadjuteur here for that. He brought me the news, and at once escorted me here to fetch you."

"And to restore one sister to another," said the priest silkily, as he advanced a step. He was the very same priest whom I had seen two hours before with Bezers, and had so greatly disliked. I hated his pale face as much now as I had then. Even the errand of good on which he had come could not blind me to his thin-lipped mouth, to his mock humility and crafty eyes.

"I have had no task so pleasant for many days," added he, with every appearance of a desire to propitiate.

But, seemingly, Mme. de Pavannes had something of the same feeling towards him which I had myself; for she started at the sound of his voice, and disengaging herself from her sister's arms—it seemed it was her sister—shrank back from the pair. She bowed indeed in acknowledgment of his word, but there was little gratitude in the movement, and less warmth. I saw the sister's face—a brilliantly beautiful face it was—brighter eyes and lips and more lovely auburn hair I have never seen—even Kit would have been plain and dowdy beside her—I saw it harden strangely. A moment before the two had been in one another's arms. Now they stood apart, somehow chilled and disillusioned. The shadow of the priest had fallen upon them—had come between them.

At this crisis the fourth person present asserted himself. Hitherto he had stood silent just within the door—a plain man, plainly dressed, somewhat over 60 and gray-haired. He looked disconcerted and embarrassed, and I took him for Mirepoix—rightly as it turned out.

"I am sure," he now exclaimed, his voice trembling with anxiety, or it might be with fear, "your ladyship will regret leaving here! You will indeed! No harm would have happened to you. Mme. d'O does not know what she is doing, or she would not take you away. She does not know what she is doing!" he repeated, earnestly.

"Mme. d'O!" cried the beautiful Diane, her brown eyes darting fire at the unlucky culprit, her voice full of angry disdain. "How dare you—such as you—mention my name? Wretch!"

She flung the last word at him, and the priest took it up. "Ay, wretch! Wretched man indeed!" he repeated slowly, stretching out his long thin hand and laying it like the claw of

"There is no man in Paris, do you hear—or woman, either—shall thwart me to-night."

some bird of prey on the tradesman's shoulder, which flinched, I saw, under the touch. "How dare you—such as you—meddle with matters of the nobility? Matters that do not concern you? Trouble! I see trouble hanging over this house, Mirepoix! Much trouble!"

The miserable fellow trembled visibly under the covert threat. His face grew pale. His lips quivered. He seemed fascinated by the priest's gaze. "I am a faithful son of the church," he muttered; but his voice shook so that the words were scarcely audible. "I am known to be such! None better known in Paris, M. le Coadjuteur."

"Men are known by their works!" the priest retorted. "Now, now," he cotinued, abruptly, raising his voice and lifting his hand in a kind of exaltation, real or feigned, "is the appointed time! And now is the day of salvation! And woe, Mirepoix, woe! woe! to the backslider, and to him that putteth his hand to the plow and looketh back to-night!"

The layman cowered and shrank before his fierce denunciation; while Mme. de Pavannes gazed from one to the other as if her dislike for the priest were so great that seeing the two thus quarreling, she almost forgave Mirepoix his offense. "Mirepoix said he could explain," she murmured, irresolutely.

The coadjutor fixed his baleful eyes on him. "Mirepoix," he said, grimly, "can explain nothing! Nothing! I dare him to explain!"

And certainly Mirepoix, thus challenged, was silent. "Come," the priest continued, peremptorily, turning to the lady who had entered with him, "your sister must leave with us at once. We have no time to lose."

"But what—what does it mean?" Mme. de Pavannes said, as though she hesitated even now.

"Is there danger still?"

"Danger!" the priest exclaimed, his form seeming to swell, and the exaltation I had before read in his voice and manner again asserting itself. "I put myself at your service, madame, and danger disappears! I am as God to-night with powers of life and death! You do not understand me? Presently you shall. But you are ready. We will go then. Out of the way, fellow!" he thundered, advancing upon the door.

But Mirepoix, who had placed himself with his back to it, to my astonishment did not give way. His full bourgeoise face was pale; yet peeping through my chink, I read in it a desperate resolution. And oddly—very oddly, because I knew that, in keeping Mme. de Pavannes a prisoner, he must be in the wrong—I sympathized with him. Low-bred trader, tool of Pavannes though he was, I sympathized with him, when he said firmly:

"She shall not go!"

CYCLING COMMENT.

Will Titus, of Mountain avenue, has purchased a new United States wheel.

W. J. Cadmus, of Somerset street, has just received a new Wilhelm wheel.

Theodore Kurzhals, Jr., of West Second street, now rides a wheel that he thoroughly enjoys.

The Riverside Wheelmen will have seven tandem teams in the field during the coming season.

Miss Morgan, of East Ninth street, has purchased a Hartford wheel of the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

Charles Butts, of East Front street, received his new Relay wheel yesterday, and a drop in records is looked for.

Charles Smith, of the West End, has purchased a Remington wheel from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle company.

Fred Richt, of the Brooklyn Bicycle Club, who won the Irvington-Milburn road race last year, is now in training to compete in this event again on May 30th.

There is some talk of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs combining with the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey in the century run of the latter on June 20th.

G. Sutphen Martin, a member of the staff of the composing room of The Daily Press, while not on duty at the office, can be seen scorching on the county roads. Gil says that he will play second fiddle to no one in the racing business this season.

Every wheelman should learn to use the foot as a brake in these days. It will be very convenient even when a handbrake is attached to a wheel, as the appliance may get out of order at a critical time, when knowledge of braking with the foot may prevent injury to both wheel and rider.

Here is a little law worth remembering: "When persons meet each other on bridge or road, traveling with carriages, wagons, sleds or sleighs, or other vehicles, each person shall reasonably drive his carriage or other vehicle to the right of the middle of the traveled path of such road or bridge."

At the beginning of this season there are 155 wheel clubs within the Metropolitan District whose combined membership is about 9,000. This city has sixty one clubs; Brooklyn, forty-six clubs; towns on Long Island, seven clubs; suburban New Jersey, forty-one clubs. This is a gain over a year ago of ten for New York city, nine for Brooklyn, and ten for New Jersey.

Manufacturers are decreasing the number of forgings in a wheel each year—says The Commercial Advertiser. It is the forgings in bicycles that develop flaws and cause fractures; they are not always reliable. The metal undergoes considerable "torture" under the hammer, and after being reduced to the extreme limit for lightness it is impossible to foresee when or where a flaw or fracture will develop.

The middle of next month if the weather permits there will be a race between a sextet cycle and the Empire State Express near Albany. A track six miles in length is now being prepared parrallel with the Central tracks, and the wheel has been built, geared at 196. There are four sprokets used in gearing, so that at every turn of the pedals the wheels cover forty-two feet. The record of the express for a mile is 37 1-5 seconds. The riders have not yet been decided upon, but every effort will be made to get the fastest in the country.

Minneapolis is excited over the women racers. Helen Baldwin has challenged Dottie Farnsworth to a race for $500 to $1,000, and Dottie Farnsworth has challenged Helen Baldwin to a race for any distance. Both are waiting for the other to accept the challenge. The whole trouble is caused because Helen beat Dottie in a race the other day. The local papers say that Dottie would undoubtedly have won had she not "slowed up when Helen made her sprint." In other words, the only reason that Dottie did not win was because Helen rode faster.—The American Wheelman.

One of the most interesting events of the theatrical season is announced for Thursday night at the ushers benefit in Music Hall, in C. E. Callahan's big production, "A Romance of Coon Hollow," with the same scenery and effects used during its triumphant season at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York. All of the scenery and effects are carried, and besides a strong company, the organization includes the Coon Hollow serenaders, a troupe of colored singers and dancers, boys and girls. Unique electric and calcium displays are also features, but the play depends rather on vigorous plot and well portrayed characters true to nature, than its scenic features. It has been a great success in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and all the leading cities east and west. An additional feature this season is two quartettes of singers.

Evidently this will be a banner year for tandems. Straws indicate this, and a well-known observer in the trade says there will not be enough double machines on hand this season to supply the demand. "So hard are the manufacturers of America now striving to supply the public with single wheels," he says, "that few of them have had opportunities to turn their attention to the manufacture of the two-seated machines. From every part of the Union comes the cry for two-seaters. It is universal, and still there are not enough machines on the market. As a big manufacturer put it recently. 'We are head and heels in work getting out the single wheels; and although our dies and gauges for tandem construction are ready, we cannot take our workmen off their present labors to build tandem machines.' It is the spirit of the times. The companionable tandem is the thing of the hour.—New York Times.

Pumping up a tire is a very simple, albeit occasionally a very tiresome, operation, the labor of which can be considerably lessened by a little knowledge. Before attaching the rubber connection with the valve the piston should be worked briskly a few times in order to expel any foreign particles that may have lodged in the hose attachment, as any intruding substances blown into the valve will prevent its tight closing after inflation. In filling the rear tire screw the fixture to the valve and turn the wheel so that you can rest one of the finger-pieces of the pump against the back brace of the machine. You can then pump away to your heart's content without blistering your fingers or stretching the rubber attachment all out of shape and spoiling its wind-holding qualities. For the front tire brace the pump against the front fork. A dry and shrunken piston is rather discouraging, but can be prevented by using a drop of oil on the packing now and then. Packing a year old usually need renewing.

LAWN TENNIS.

The tennis courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Clubs, situated on Watchung avenue, have been put in very fine condition and are now ready for use. Within a few days the golf course on Sherman and Plainfield avenues will be ready for players. The formal opening will not occur until later in the season. The club is to be congratulated upon the fine condition of the golf "links." The "greens" are in beautiful order and the grounds as a whole present a most picturesque appearance. Much interest will no doubt be taken in golf during the coming summer and the membership of the club, which now numbers about one hundred and twenty, will be added to considerably. New members will be elected at the next regular meeting of the governors, which occurs on Wednesday evening, May 6th. Communications regarding club membership may be addressed to J. Doull Miller, secretary.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The Elizabeth Athletic Club will be represented by an amateur baseball team this year. The team will be made up of ex-college players and the amateur members of last year's team. The season will be opened by the game with the Yale Law School team at Elizabeth next Saturday afternoon.

Ninger Probably Indicted.

The United States Grand Jury has been in session for several days at Trenton. The most important case considered was that of Emanuel Ninger, the Flagtown counterfeiter. It is said that the jury has found a true bill against him.

WHIST.

An interesting contest is being waged in the Park Club for the championship of the club and the honor of representing the Park Club at the National Whist Congress, to be held at Coney Island in June, where several hundred of the best whist players in the country will contend for the championship of the United States. The Park Club has heretofore been represented in important contests by Messrs. McCutchen, Townsend, Howell and Rogers, who are known as the "Big Four, and who are firm believers in the "long suit" game. They have accepted a challenge from Messrs. Henry McGee, Chas. A. Reed, P. B. Matthews and H. B. Reed, who are believers of the "short suit" game, and are known in the Park Club as the "Short Suiters." The contest is therefore a test of the relative merits of the two systems of play as well as of the strength of the respective teams, and is to be decided by a series of five match games. The first was played last night and resulted in a victory for the Short Suiters by the following score:

"Short Suiters" total gain	15
"Big Four" total gain	11
"Short Suiters" win by	4

The second match will be played next Tuesday night.

Death Sentences Commuted.

Pretoria, South Africa, April 29.—The sentences of death imposed upon John Hays Hammond, the American engineer; Col. Francis Rhodes, a brother of the former Premier of Cape Colony; Lionel Phillips, President of the Chamber of Mines of Johannesburg, and George Farrar, proprietor of Country Life, of Johannesburg, have been commuted.

—There will be initiation at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., tomorrow evening.

—The quarantine sign has been removed from the home of Rev. T. Logan Murphy, of Washington avenue, as his son Arthur has completely recovered from an attack of the scarlet fever.

—Co-operative stores in this country which have been successful, have divided from six to twelve per cent. to their members on their purchases. A dividend of eight per cent. provides against a month's forced idleness in a year.

—The Independent Fife and Drum Corps held a business meeting last night. A communication was received from a Camden club asking for an estimate for the cost to have the corps turn out with the club on Decoration Day.

Ethel Mattison, of New Brunswick, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Mattison, of Church street.

W. H. Addis, Jr., and family, have moved from 144 East Frourth street to the VanSickle building, 124 North avenue.

The condition of Mrs. George Fairchild is reported today as not being so well. Mr. Fairchild went to Trenton this afternoon.

SIX AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

BUT NOW THEIR HEARTS BEAT AS ONE, SO TO SPEAK.

Two Church and One Home Wedding Solemnized Last Night—Names of the Bridal Parties and Those Present.

A very pretty wedding took place in St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon at 5:30, when Miss Katherine Agnes Mahoney and James J. Strappe were united in marriage by Rev. Father Murphy. The bridemaid was Miss Margaret Strappe and the best man P. J. Mahoney, a brother of the bride, of New York. The bride was attired in a blue cloth traveling suit, trimmed with silk and spangles, and carried a bouquet of white bridal roses. The bridemaid wore a gown of brown silk, trimmed with lace and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The church was filled to the doors with the friends and relatives of the happy couple. The ushors were Michael Mack and Thomas Strappe. Miss St. Leger, organist of the church, was unavoidably absent, and Miss Teanie Smith, organist of St. Joseph's church, kindly volunteered to officiate at the organ.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party proceeded to the future home of the newly married couple, 57 Brook avenue, where a reception was held from six until nine o'clock. Two rooms were necessary to hold all the valuable and handsome presents which the couple received.

The house was completely filled with invited guests, among whom were the following: Miss Margaret Strapp, Miss Mary Hines, Miss Minnie Charles, Miss Lizzie McInerney, Miss Josephine Hayes, Miss Kate Dargan, Miss Kate Savard, Miss Minnie Walsh, Misses Margaret, Julia and Lizzie Day, Miss Ellen Reilly, Misses Mamie and Kittie Lehay, Miss Nellie Kelly, Miss Katie Whalen, Miss Kate Kiely, Miss Nellie Bagley, Miss Mary Burke, Misses Margaret and Agnes Mahoney, Mr. and Mrs. James Mahoney, Mrs. Ella Mahoney, Mrs. Margaret DeMott, Mrs. Mary Farley, Mr. and Mrs. James Whalen, Mr. and Mrs. Lehay, and Mr. and Mrs. Burns, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Staats, Mr. and Mrs. Guise, Mr. and Mrs. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. T. McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Day, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Day, and Messrs. Harry Weirenger, M. J. Cashin, Dennis Bagley, Michael Higgins, Con Guinee, William Winn, Patrick Mahoney, James Mahoney, Charles Gillmore, Michael Mack, Thomas Strappe and Patrick Revelle. Father Murphy and a section of the Catholic Club also visited during the evening.

After nine o'clock dancing began, and continuued throughout the evening, music for which was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Prof. O'Reilly.

Mr. and Mrs. Stappe will be at home on Thursday, May 28th, from six to nine.

The Mt. Olive Baptist church was the scene last evening of one of the most fashionable weddings that has ever been witnessed there. The happy couple were Miss Hattie Bailey, of East Sixth and Washington streets, and John W. Murray, of the Hotel Albion. Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

The appointed hour, 8:30 o'clock, did not bring the bridal party and the guests became anxious, but their anxiety was somewhat subdued by the rendition of several classical selections on the organ by Thomas Marsh, of New Brunswick. The party arrived soon after 9 o'clock and while they entered the church the Lohengrin wedding march was executed. The ushers, Alfred White, Frank Kelcey, George Anderson and Mr. Johnson, of New York, preceded the party and before reaching the altar faced inward to allow the maid of honor and bridemaids to pass through. The bride followed leaning on the arm of William J. Douglass who gave her away. After a circle was formed about the altar the groom and best man, Frederick Boughton, of New York, entered from a side room and joined the party.

The bride was gowned in white silk trimmed with lace. She wore a wreath of orange blossoms, a tulle veil and carried white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Lulu Douglass, wore a gown of white China silk, decollette, trimmed with lace, ribbons, roses and smilax and carried a basket of pink and yellow roses. The bridemaids, Miss Lina Coles, Miss Minnie Harris, of Elizabeth, Miss Murray, of Brooklyn, and Miss Carrie Johnson, of Jersey City, were all gowned in white, except Miss Coles who wore pink. They carried pink roses. The Mendelssohn wedding march was rendered while the party were leaving the church.

A reception followed at the home of William J. Douglass, 525 East Third street, which was largely attended. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Murray left for New York where they make a short visit. They will reside in this city. They were handsomely remembered with presents from their many friends with whom they are very popular.

Miss Anna Elizabeth Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Johnson avenue, and John Hewitt, of East Third street, were quietly married last evening at 7:30, by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, at the home of the latter. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt went to 126 Johnson avenue, where they will reside. Owing to the illness of the bride's mother, the wedding was a quiet one. Mr. Hewitt is a machinist and is employed at Scott's Printing Machine Works.

A Spring Rally.

Preparations for the spring conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Society to be held in the latter part of May, were begun at a meeting of the county executive committee Tuesday night, and an invitation was accepted from the Greystone Presbyterian church of Elizabeth as the place for holding. Simon Lirch, of the Greystone church, was appointed chairman of the committee of arrangements, and Mrs. Lowry, of Plainfield, the county junior superintendent, was selected as one of his associates. It will be the annual rally, and an election of officers will take place. The nominating committee are Spencer A. Van Derveer, Mrs. L. D. Williams and Clifford Willis, of Elizabeth, A. B. Wilson, of Rahway, and W. J. Harris, of South Plainfield.

Death of Mrs. Phebe J. Hoyt.

The death of Mrs. Phebe J. Hoyt, aged seventy-three years, wife of the late J. K. Hoyt, occurred this morning at her residence on North avenue. She has been feeble for several years, but it was only a week ago that her illness took a serious turn. She has been living in this city about fifteen months. Her husband, who was a well-known journalist, died in Plainfield sometime ago. Both were former residents of Newark where they had a very large circle of friends and acquaintances. She laves one child, a son, who is living in Florida. Her funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the home of sister, Mrs. Matilda Rushmore, of 113 East Fifth street.

Sprained Her Ankle.

Early this morning Miss Grace Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, was riding through Somerset street toward Front street on her wheel. When opposite H. N. Spencer's store she attempted to cross the street railway tracks, which had previously been moistened by the sprinkling cart. The wheel slipped causing her to fall heavily to the ground. Mr. Spencer assisted her to his porch where she sat down for awhile. It was learned that her ankle was sprained and she was unable to use it. A carriage was secured and she was taken home. It will probably be some time before she can use her foot again.

Temperance Lecture.

The temperance society connected with St. Mary's church have secured J. W. O'Brien, of New York, editor of the Sunday Union and Catholic Times, to deliver a free temperance lecture in T. A. B. hall, West Fourth street, this evening, at eight o'clock. Everyone who has the interest of temperance at heart is invited to be present. Mr. O'Brien is spoken of as a very able speaker, and it is the wish of the above society that the hall be crowded.

Assisting the Board of Missions.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Missions of the Episcopal church was held in Trinity church, Elizabeth, yesterday. The Bishop of the diocese presided. Many ladies, representing the different church in this city, were present.

—The case of Frazee against DeMeza did not come up for trial in the Chancery Court at Jersey City this morning, as a settlement was effected beforehand.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

REMEMBERING THE DEAD

JOINT DETAIL ARRANGE THE PROGRAMME FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Col. Mason W. Tyler Will Act as Chief Marshal—Gen. Negley, a Veteran of Many Battles, to Deliver the Memorial Address.

The Joint Memorial Detail from the G. A. R. posts, Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterns met last evening and about completed arrangements for the Memorial Day celebration. Col. Mason W. Tyler was selected as marshal of the day.

The line of march will form in the morning at 8:30 on East Front street, with the right resting on Watchung avenue, and the parade will be a short one. The Plainfield Cornet Band will head the line as usual. They will escort the Sons of Veterans camp to Scotch Plains in the morning after the parade in town. At Scotch Plains special exercises will be held at the Baptist Cemetery.

The children from the public schools will parade and each one will receive as a gift a handsome flag to carry. Captain Edwards and the Third Regiment Cadet Corps will also parade In the afternoon at 2 o'clock the G A R, S. of V., and escorts will meet and proceed to Music Hall where interesting exercises will be held.

Both the Plainfield and North Plainfield Common Councils, city officials and members of the Board of Education will occupy private boxes. The opening prayer will be offered by Rev. Father Smyth, of St. Mary's church, and the oration of the day by Brigadier-General James S. Negley who led the famous Pennsylvania brigade. He was a veteran in the Mexican War while yet in his teens. In speaking at one time of General Negley, General Grant said that the former's use of steamboats for the transportation of his brigade from Pittsburg during the war taught him a lesson that he never forgot. He performed splendid service during the war and was a warm personal friend of General Grant.

In addition to the oration, there will be music by the band and singing by a large chorus of shool children.

Of course, the various cemeteries about the city will be visited in the morning, as usual, and flowers will be placed on the graves.

Col. Tyler will appoint his aides at an early date, and they will then be published. The detail will hold another meeting, subject to the call of the chair.

A Narrow Escape.

Mrs. W. R. Richards, of East Front street, narrowly escaped serious injury at the North avenue station this morning, while attempting to board the 8:32 train for New York. Edward Martin, train caller, warned Mrs. Richards about getting on the train as it was moving out, but after he turned his back, she tried it. Her feet slipped and she was holding on with one hand. Mr. Martin ran to her assistance and by using all his strength, succeeded in getting her on the train. At the same time Mr. Richards dropped her purse and that was picked up and handed to her. Mr. Martin risked his own life and his brave act deserves commendation.

School Tickets Are on Sale.

Superintendent Adleman of the street railway called at The Press office this morning and stated that the statement printed in the News last night that the railway company do not provide school tickets, as the law requires, and which made children pay full fare, was unqualifiedly false in every particular. Mr. Adleman states that tickets have always been on sale at his office on West Fourth street, and that when he is not there personally to attend to customers for school tickets, his clerk, Harry C. Page, is there.

Sheriff Kyte for Senator.

As Senator Voorhees persists in his purpose of retiring, and as ex-Assemblyman Codding declines to permit the use of his name, the chances grow that Sheriff Kyte will be the probable Republican candidate for Senator, says the Newark Advertiser. In this case the Shrievalty nomination will doubtless go to W. H. Hulskamper, of Elizabeth, who, in the recent election distinguished himself by running two hundred votes ahead of Mayor Rankin.

Westfield Women Working.

The Westfield Woman's Club has voted to memoralize the Township Committee with two petitions. One of these is that a town ordinance shall be passed forbidding the defacement of shade trees with advertising signs, and the other is that the present law in regard to dumping-grounds shall be enforced. The club has also voted to become a member of the State Federation of Woman's Clubs, and has re-elected the former officers for another year.

CHARADES THE FEATURE.

Women of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Give an Entertainment.

The mere mention of a sociable under the auspices of the Woman's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church always signifies a pleasant and enjoyable evening, and the one held by that society last evening was no exception to the rule. A delightful supper was served in the church parlors from 6:30 to 8:30 o'clock, under the charge of Mrs. J. D. Titsworth and Mrs. John Mosher, and then the visitors seated themselves in the main Sunday-school room to enjoy the informal programme that had been arranged.

The programme consisted of three selections by a ladies' chorus, "The Primrose," "The Angel" by Rubinstein and a lullaby, and several charades. The first word to be acted out was "Inaugurate" and it was divided as follows: "inn-auger-eight." "Ingratiate" was given in one scene when one of the ladies, dressed in a gray gown, ate a sandwich on the little improvised stage at one end of the room making "in-gray-she-ate." "Defalcation" was divided into four syllables, "deaf-all-k-shun" The second scene, representing "all" was particularly good. Frank J. Hubbard was supposed to be the census-taker in search of "all" of the details of Mr. Peters' family while "Mrs. Peters, otherwise Miss Grace Lewis, did all she could to prevent him from ascertaining it. The principal actors in the charades were the Misses Grace Lewis, Lulu Lewis, Lizzie Allis and Lulu Clawson, Mrs. Charles Dunham, Dr. Frank Clawson, Sydney R. Titsworth, Arthur J. Spicer and Robert Randolph. Miss Mabel Maxson acted as accompanist for the ladies' chorus.

The sociable was given by the regular entertainment committee of the society of which Mrs. D. E. Titsworth is chairman. Miss Ida Spicer had especial charge of the programme.

PITY FOR HIS FAMILY.

That is the Reason Why John Barry's Sentence Was Reduced.

Justice Mattison desires The Daily Press to state that the only reason why he remitted the sentence of three-months imprisonment in the case of John Barry for cruelly treating a horse was on account of his wife and children. He does not think the sentence was too heavy as might be imagined. The fine of $50 has been paid, and $25 of the amount goes to the State. The balance goes to the complainant. In connection with this the Justice says that a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals should be organized in the borough, and thus the work could be carried on more successfully. He is very anxious that a society should be formed, and all persons interested should call on him. The $25 that now goes to the State would be placed in the treasury of the society if there was one, and there is no reason why such a society can not be started.

The Pedestrian Point of View.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Having had my attention called to the new bicycle ordinance, proposed by the Common Council, I would like to say a few words from a pedestrian's point of view. I do not own a wheel or know how to ride one, so my sympathies are with those who walk and I am always glad when a bicyclist passes me on a crossing without ringing a bell. Under these circumstances he has nothing to think of but steering clear of me, while I, unconscious of the presence of his silent steed, keep on my way. When, however, the sound of a warning bell greets my ears, my first impulse is to stand still and look first one way, then another, to see from whence comes the sound, confusing me and jeopardizing my own safety. In my experience quite as many accidents have been due to the indecisive of the pedestrian as to the carelessness of the bicyclist. Pedestrian.

Hard to Get a Proper Grade.

Chandler Riker, secretary and treasurer of the Street Railway Company, was in town yesterday on business connected with the extension of the trolley road to the Moutain Park Inn. The one great difficulty encoutered in getting a route for the road is the grade. So far they have not been able to get a grade less than eight feet to the hundred feet.

A May Walk.

A number of young people from this city and the borough will take part in a "May walk" on Sunday, May 9th, to see the sun rise. The affair is being gotten up by the "Jolly Four."

—The male quartette who will sing at the King's Daughters' Violet Festival in Trinity Reformed church tonight are young men from Somerville, and their reputation as vocalists is first-class. Admission only ten cents.

MARY AND THE GROWLER GOT AWAY

But Her Friends Scouted and Found Her—All in City Court.

A growler party was one of the diversions on Cottage row last evening. Mrs. Mary Radin, who has figured in similar events with great frequency, was the hostess. The guests were Maggie Benford, John Scudder and Mrs. Brown. Each took turns at chasing the growler, but by the time it came Maggie's turn she had become somewhat hazy. The party made up the required ten cents and sent Maggie for the amber colored fluid. Maggie became absent minded after this and meandered to her own domicle, where she imbibed the contents of the can to her supreme satisfaction. The rest of the party waited wearily and athirst for sometime, and then descended upon on Maggie's fireside. All that Maggie had was the growler. This she tended to her erstwhile friends but it had no pacifying effect. John Scudder pulled a revolver and nearly frightened the life out of Maggie. Of course Maggie screamed and then there was a general rumpus. Mrs. Brown ran down the street giving the war cry of Paradise Alley. She was met by Policeman Flynn who continued her trip to the rookery. Then Sergeant Kiely and Policeman Flynn returned to the scene of the trouble. They arrested Maggie and Mrs. Radin. Scudder saw the blue coats before the officers saw him and he made a break for liberty. He got away. The officers, however, kept a watch on Babbitt's pool room this morning and at five o'clock they captured the wary John as he was entering Babbitt's place. The party will be continued at four o'clock this afternoon before City Judge DeMeza.

PLACE FOR THE RELICS.

President Saltzman Makes the Exempt Association a Present.

A regular meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association was held last evening and the following officers were elected: President, Auguste Saltzman; vice president, Alex. Titsworth; secretary, G. Thorn; treasurer, E. M. Laing; financial secretary, Geo. Clark; board of trustees, D. W. Littell, E. M. Laing, W. A. Woodruff, Edward Vermeule, J. A. Hubbard; representatives to relief association, Auguste Saltzman and G. Thorn; delegates to State Convention, to be held at Hackensack, May 20th, E. M. Laing, D. W. Littell, W. A. Woodruff, Jos. Blimm and Frank Schuck.

A resolution was received from Gazelle Engine Company, signed by the officers, relinquishing all right and claim to the old fire bell, which is now in possession of the Exempts, and which hung in the old fire house on Park avenue forty years ago. The bell is now the property of the Exempts. President Saltzman presented the association with a large and handsome book-case, which will be kept in the rooms. The relics now owned by the association will be placed in it for safe keeping.

Not as Bad as Pictured.

The report of an accident on the Jersey Central railroad last Saturday, which was published in the New York papers on Sunday and in the local papers on Monday, was greatly exaggerated. The startling reports about the hair breadth escapes and hysteric passengers were coined by a sensational New York reporter, who by clever writing, made them appear plausible. Very naturally, The Prees used the story because of the local flavor and the fact that at the time it believed it was true. The story caused quite a good deal of comment among timid people. Later investigation, however, proved that it was untrue, and was an unjust reflection on the management of the Central, who use every precaution to protect its patrons, and who are wonderfully successful in that direction.

Illustrated Lecture on Italy.

The Rev. T. Logan Murphy will give an illustrated lecture on Italy in the Holy Cross parish building tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock, under the auspices of the Willing Circle of King's Daughters. Those who had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Murphy lecture on Ireland last year will welcome the opportunity of hearing him again, and those who were not so fortunate should not lose this chance. After the lecture ice cream and cake will be served by the King's Daughters at a moderate price. Tickets may be obtained of Horsley Barker, Front and Grove streets.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

NATIONAL ENDEAVORERS

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF UNITED SOCIETIES TO BE HELD IN JULY.

They Will Meet in Washington—A Big Programme Arranged for Them—President Cleveland to Address Them.

The annual convention of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, which will be held at Washington, D. C., beginning on July 8th, is only a little more than two months away, and many Plainfield Endeavorers are preparing to attend.

The reception committee expects that fully 60,000 will attend. On every morning of the convention there will be held at 6:30 o'clock from twenty to thirty early morning prayer meetings in as many churches. The formal opening of the convention will occur on Thursday morning, July 9th, in the three great tents which will be pitched upon the White lot, south of the executive mansion. These will seat 10,000 persons each, including a chorus of 1,000 voices. On Thursday afternoon there will be held about thirty denominational rallies. The rallies of Presbyterians, Baptists and Congregationalists will be held in the three tents, and the others will be held in large churches. The topic for consideration Thursday evening will be "Christian Citizenship," the feature which has become very prominent since the last meeting. The topic for Friday is "Saved to Serve."

Saturday will be outdoor day. An open-air praise service will be held at the Washington monument, and it is hoped brief addresses will be delivered from the steps of the Capitol. Saturday evening will be devoted to receptions of the State delegations.

The New Jersey delegates will hold their reception in the First Presbyterian church, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, a native of this State, will be present. President Cleveland has promised to accept the invitation to attend, if possible, he also being a Jerseyman.

No service will be held on Sunday morning or evening in the tents, everyone attending the regular services in the churches. In the afternoon there will be held denominational missionary rallies. On Monday morning the World's Christian Endeavor Union, formed last year in Boston, will hold its first annual convention.

A special train will leave Jersey City two days before the beginning of the Washington convention in order to give the delegates a chance for sightseeing. The total expense for each New Jersey delegate to the Washington convention will not be more than $22.50 from New York city.

A Good Thing Appreciated.

The new through train between Somerville and Newark yesterday, was on time and liberally patronized by forty-six passengers, besides a large number using it as a way train. On the return trip in the evening thirty-five took advantage of the train, and it looks as if it had come to stay.

IT IS NIP AND TUCK

Great Struggle To-day Among the Illinois Republicans.

CULLOM-M'KINLEYITES' HOT FIGHT

The Ohio Man's Forces Believed To Have Lost Some Ground Since Last Night—Vermont Republicans Favor McKinley.

Springfield, Ill., April 30.—It is nip and tuck in the republican state convention to-day between the supporters and opponents of the McKinley instructions with the chances, unless there is another change in the situation, in favor of the opposition. There was a time on the floor of the convention yesterday afternoon when the machine was inclined to admit its defeat. This was before the second ballot for lieutenant governor had been ordered. The closeness of the contest for this nomination, however, enabled the anti-McKinleyites and Cullomites to make a number of deals with uninstructed delegates and some of those whose conventions had simply indorsed, instead of instructing for the Ohio candidate, and this morning they are pursuing the same tactics with the supporters of candidates for other offices yet to be chosen. They are strengthened in their position, moreover, by the development that the committee on delegates to the national convention, the members of which were selected at the meetings of the various congressional district delegations, turned out to be overwhelmingly anti-McKinley, the tickets elected by votes ranging from 18 to 5 and 19 to 3, being composed of ex-Gov. Fifer of Bloomington, William Penn Nixon and R. W. Patterson of Chicago, and David Littler of Springfield. Mayor Swift of Chicago received but five votes, Gen. McNulta, the Chicago McKinley leader but three, while ex-Gov. Oglesby was shelved by unanimous consent on the ground of his advanced age and physical infirmities.

Contentions of McKinleyites.

The friends of ex-Gov. McKinley insist, however, that the make-up of this body has no bearing on the ultimate result, inasmuch as the votes of this and other committees were parcelled out with the view of giving each county a fair showing on all committees rather than with reference to an expression of opinion on presidental preferences, and they point to the fact that the committee on resolutions selected in the same way and at the same district meetings contains two friends of McKinley to every opponent. At the same time they are forced to admit that under the influence of Senator Cullom's arguments and pleadings, some of the instructed delegations are getting restive and inclined to break away. This was clearly evidenced in the case of the delegation from Sangamon county, Senator Cullom's home. It had been given ironclad McKinley instructions but nevertheless by a vote of 32 to 26, it sent a Cullom delegate to the committee on national delegates.

Total of First Day's Work.

The nomination of Capt. J. R. Tanner of Clay county for governor on the first ballot, and of William A. Northcott of Greenville, for lieutenant governor on the second ballot, was the sum and total of the work accomplished by the convention in a session of nearly six hours. This showing was due, in part, to the dilatory methods of the machine managers who were anxious to secure whatever could be gained by another night of missionary effert. The action of the Vermont convention as announced in the dispatches of the United Press, was circulated over the floor and employed as an argument by the McKinleyites with the uninstructed delegates.

VERMONT REPUBLICANS.

Resume of the Work Transacted at the Montpelier Convention.

Montpelier, Vt., April 30.—The action of the republican convention in adopting a resolution declaring McKinley to be the first choice of Vermont republicans for the presidency was not prearranged but a spontaneous move. The motion later to lay the resolution on the table and which was passed was done with the intention of preventing it from being referred to the resolutions committee and being embodied in the platform. The resolution, which read as follows, was presented by Mr. Henry of Chester: "While we recognize the wisdom of the precedent which has heretofore sent our delegates to national conventions without tying their hands with positive instructions, and would not break that precedent, yet we feel we will be untrue representatives of those who sent us here did we fail to give voice to their convictions: therefore, be it resolved, that in the great apostle of protection, William McKinley of Ohio, we recognize the first choice of the republicans of Vermont for their presidential candidate." The platform declared for sound money, protection, reciprocity and a firm foreign policy based upon the Monroe doctrine. The following delegates at large were elected: Senator Proctor, Dr. H. D. Holton of Brattleboro, Col. Smith of St. Albans and Charles A. Prouty of Newport. The alternates selected were Phillip K. Gleed of Morrisville, James F. Pollard of Chester, Martin F. Allen of Ferrisburg and Dr. L. W. Hubbard of Lyndon.

Favor McKinley.

Montpelier, Vt., April 30. — The second district republican convention adopted the platform of the state convention and elected these delegates to St. Louis: James W. Brock of Montpelier and Victor I. Spear of Braintree. While not instructing its delegates, a resolution was adopted expressing its strong preference for McKinley.

CRIPPLE CREEK WIPED OUT.

Three People Killed and Many Injured During the Great Conflagration.

Denver, April 30.—All of the business district of Cripple Creek was burned yesterday afternoon and three lives were lost and fifteen persons were badly injured in the wreck of the dynamited buildings. Relief trains with fire apparatus and dynamite were sent from Denver. There is nothing left in Cripple Creek but the houses on the hill. The town is wiped out. Many of the people slept out last night on the cold hills or grouped about bonfires.

NO HOPE FOR HOLMES.

Gov. Hastings Promptly Denies His Application for a Reprieve.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 30.—When Gov. Hastings received the petition of H. H. Holmes late yesterday afternoon praying for a respite in order to allow him to attend to a lot of business, which he alleges he must transact before the day of execution, he was not slow in endorsing the petition "application refused." Holmes will surely hang on the 7th of May, and he can hope for no interference on the part of the governor. The communication to the governor was written by Holmes and is in the form of a petition with many whereases, setting forth the reasons which prompt the appeal for a respite. He rails against District Attorney Graham, and protests that he is innocent of all but two of the deaths charged against him, and these two were due to criminal operations which he performed in his capacity as a physician; but in another part of the petition he says he killed five and not twenty men. He says he wants to arrange his business matters that those near and dear to him will not be left wholly without means of support. He also intimates that he will have some important matters to reveal with the aid of the chief of police of Chicago, who is understood to be coming on to see him. He says he only wants to have his life prolonged a reasonable limit of time beyond May 7. He professes to be willing to die after he has arranged the matters of which he speaks in his communication. The governor also got a letter from the father of Mrs. Pietzel, at Galva, Ill., and a petition signed by 9,000 citizens of that town urging the governor not to interfere with the course of justice.

ADJOURNED SINE DIE.

Close of the New York Legislature This Afternoon.

Albany, April 30.—The legislature of 1896 will adjourn sine die at 2 o'clock this afternoon, a somewhat unusual course, the usual hour for adjournment being at 12 o'clock, noon. Although each house has an increased membership over that of last year, the volume of business this year on the whole does not exceed that of last year. In the senate there were 1,253 bills introduced as compared with 992 last year. The senate sent 457 bills to the assembly for passage last year, while this year 631 bills were sent. In the assembly 1,703 bills were introduced this year as compared with 1,752 last year. The assembly sent 1,092 bills to the senate last year for passage, as compared with 959 this year. At the adjournment of the last legislature there were 698 laws upon the statute books, while this year the laws number 414. The calendars in each house have been cleared of nearly all legislation which it has been the intention to pass. All that remained to-day to be accomplished was the introduction and passage of the annual tax levy bill and the supplemental supply bill. The rate will be in the neighborhood of 2.70 mills, while last year it was 3.24 mills. The total appropriations this year will be about the same as last.

Lumber Mills To Shut Down.

Baltimore, April 30.—Information has been received here from Norfolk that, in pursuance of an agreement signed last week nearly all manufacturers of North Carolina pine lumber have shut down their mills for an indefinite period. The mills thus suspending operations produce about 600,000,000 feet of lumber annually. The new move is said to be a preliminary step towards the formation of a strong association to maintain prices and limit the lumber output.

Spain's Crops Destroyed.

Madrid, April 30.—The crops throughout Spain, especially cereals, have been almost destroyed by drought and the government is about to organize public works for the purpose of furnishing employment to a large number of farm hands who are without work. It is calculated that unless there are heavy rains within a fortnight the losses to the farmers will amount to 900,000,000 pesetas.

No Artificial Honey Comb.

Hartford, April 30.—At the fifth annual meeting of the Connecticut Beekeepers' association yesterday eighteen topics connected with bee culture and honey making were discussed, the principal one being "Is there such an article as manufactured honey comb?" which was decided unanimously in the negative.

Track Athletic Games at Yale.

New Haven, Conn., April 30.—Coneff, the champion mile runner; J. L. Brewer, captain of the Harvard athletic team and champion in the low hurdles, and Stephen Chase, the champion high hurdler, have entered the handicap games at the Yale field to be held next Saturday.

Big Stock Farm Changes Hands.

Philadelphia, April 30.—The celebrated stock farm near Chestnut Hill on the outskirts of the city, known as "Erdenheim," containing about 250 acres, has been sold by Louis Kitson to Robert N. Carson. The price paid is said to be about $100,000.

HILDRETH TRIAL.

Testimony in the Boy Train Wrecker's Case Begun This Morning.

Rome, N. Y., April 30.—The taking of testimony in the case of J. Watson Hildreth, the 17-year-old train wrecker, was begun this morning, the last juror having been secured late yesterday afternoon. District Attorney Kleck opened the case for the people, occupying one and one half hours. He laid considerable stress on the confession made by Hildreth, and gave part of his remarks under the objection of Lawyer Sayles, counsel for the boy. Hildreth's face was as colorless as usual at the commencement, but as Mr. Kleck proceeded it became somewhat flushed. He sat through the long opening with his head resting on one hand. Hildreth, sr., who sat beside his son, did not change expression. Mr. Kleck gave a graphic narrative of the wreck and the subsequent developments and the jury was evidently impressed.

VICTIM OF MELANCHOLIA.

Probable Cause of Abram S. Cassidy's Taking of His Own Life.

Newburgh, N. Y., April 30.—Abram S. Cassidy, who shot himself last evening, death resulting, was ex-mayor of this city and a well known lawyer. He was born in Rockland county in 1833, was admitted to the bar in 1857 and was district attorney of Orange county from 1863 to 1866. He had been president of the board of education, also corporation counsel, and a director of the Quasaick bank for twenty years. In 1885 Mr. Cassidy was appointed referee in the matter of the foreclosure sale of the West Shore railroad and in November of that year he sold the road for $22,000,000 and distributed the proceeds among the creditors. Since then he had represented the New York Central railroad in Orange county. During the past few months Mr. Cassidy has suffered from nervous prostration and of late has been a victim of melancholia.

WHITE'S SLANDER SUIT.

The Court Orders the Claim for Damages Reduced to $2,500.

Boston, April 30.—In the superior court yesterday Judge Braley ordered the amount of the damages asked for by the plaintiff in the slander suit brought by Abraham White vs. Frank Fuller reduced from $10,000 to $2,500, the defendant to give bond to dissolve the attachment made upon his property. It was Mr. White who was said to have made a bid for $1,000,000 of the latest issue of United States bonds when he is said to have had only forty-four cents. When his counsel was asked by Judge Braley for the words complained of by the plaintiff, counsel replied that the plaintiff alleged that the defendant called him "a thief, a rascal," and also said that "he could not pay his bills."

REFUGEE INDIANS.

Uncle Sam To Return the Crees to the Canadian Border.

Washington, April 30.—The senate committee on foreign relations has made a favorable report on the amendment to the sundry civil bill appropriating $5,900 to enable the president by the use of the army or otherwise, to remove from Montana and deliver to Canadian authorities at the boundary line, the refugee Canadian Cree Indians, who some time ago fled from that country and took refuge in the territory of the United States.

Hood's

Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier and building up medicine leads everything ever produced. It is positively the best. Others may make the same claim. But there's this difference: We prove it. Not by antiquity, but by Merit. Not by what we say, but by what Hood's Sarsaparilla does. It has a record of Cures unequalled in medical history. It positively, perfectly and permanently cures when all other medicines fail. That the keen discrimination of the people recognizes its merit and the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla, is shown by the fact that they buy Hood's Sarsaparilla in preference and exclusion of all others. Hood's Sarsaparilla has a larger sale than all other blood purifiers. It wins confidence everywhere because the statements in its advertising and testimonials are verified by all who take it. No other medicine has ever received such praise, or so many voluntary testimonials of wonderful cures. No other medicine possesses the peculiar combination, proportion and process used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla, and which give it merit peculiar to itself. This is the secret of its wonderful power, of its wonderful sales, of its wonderful hold upon the confidence of the people. This is why it cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Catarrh, Rheumatism, all Humors, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, That Tired Feeling, builds up the nerves, creates an appetite and strengthens the whole system. Its merit, its sales, its Political Speeches Delay the Naval Appropriation Bill in the Senate—Father Marquette Statue Placed in Statuary Hall.

Washington, April 30.—Although the bankruptcy bill is under discussion in the house to-day, and will continue so until Saturday, time is found for the passage of other bills. The speech which Mr. Newlands made in opposition to the bill was an argument that free silver at 16 to 1 would alone afford substantial relief. Other members antagonized it, but it was defended by many, and it now seems probable that it will be passed. During the discussion of a bill for the erection of a lighthouse at Orient Point, Long Island, Messrs. Dockery and Dingley had quite an argument as to the expenditures authorized by the present congress. The former warned the house not to appropriate money for any improvement that was not absolutely indispensable. The direct appropriations at this term of congress, he said, would be $512,000,000, and of contracts authorized to be entered into $93,541,000, making the grand total for which this congress was responsible so far more than $605,000,000. He said that current revenue was not equal to current expenditures, and had not been for some time. Mr. Dingley responded to Mr. Dockery's statement and analyzed the figures he had given. He asserted that the appropriations at this session of congress for current expenses would not exceed $450,000,000 and the amount that must be paid by taxation would not exceed $360,000,000, the postoffice department expenses being met by the postal receipts. While it was true that more revenue was needed, he contended that congress was doing as well as it could in the matter of appropriations, in view of the needs of the country and of the government. The report of elections committee No. 3 in the contest of G. O. Pearce, independent labor, vs. J. C. Bell, pop. and dem., from second district of Colorado, confirming Bell's right to the seat, was agreed to.

In the Senate.

The senate is still engaged in considering the naval appropriation bill, the interjection into the discussion of political speeches delaying progress on the bill. Senator Teller's speech declaring that he would break away from the republican party unless that party declared for free silver at the St. Louis convention, and Senator Sherman's, in reply, declaring that he would conform to the will of the people as expressed at the polls next November, were listened to with marked attention by the other members of the senate. Several senators took occasion to deliver speeches eulogistic of Father Marquette when the statue of the Jesuit explorer was yesterday formally presented to, and accepted by, the senate. Contrary to expectation, there was no expression of opposition to the acceptance of the statue, which was placed in the national hall of statuary in the capitol.

Administrator of Stetson Estate.

Boston, April 30.—Melvin O. Adams, who was yesterday appointed special administrator of the estate of the late John Stetson, has accepted the trust and given bond with sureties for $100,000. The petition for special administration was made at the request of the widow of the deceased. The reason for asking for it was that illness has prevented the executor of Mr. Stetson's will from offering the will for probate.

WANTS THEIR BLOOD

Weyler Impatient for the Trial of the Competitor's Crew.

THEY ARE NOW IN MORRO CASTLE

Further Details of the Capture of the American Schooner by a Spanish Gunboat—First Serious Insurgent Reverse in Many Weeks.

Havana, April 30.—Spanish officials are in high spirits over the capture, by the Spanish gunboat Mesagera, near Berracos, of the American schooner Competitor, with arms and ammunition for the insurgents, and the captain and crew of the gunboat will be feted and handsomely rewarded for the important service they have rendered the government. This is really the first important success the Spaniards have gained against the insurgents in many weeks, and their rejoicing cannot be wondered at. Further details of the capture of the Competitor show that a detachment of guerrillas captured thirty-two boxes of ammunition which had already been landed and took two prisoners, apparently Americans. Shortly after discovering the schooner the gunboat opened fire upon her, killing three of her company. Many others of those on board thereupon sprang into the water and swam ashore. The fire of the gunboat was returned by the Competitor. Among those who took to the water was the leader Laborde, who was captured, however, before he could reach the shore.

Speedy Trial for Them.

The persons who were captured on board the schooner and those who were taken in the water while attempting to swim ashore have been lodged in Morro castle. They will be tried by a naval court martial. The naval commander is absent in Manzanillo and Captain-General Weyler, who is impatient for the trial of the prisoners, has requested him to delegate his authority to another official in order that the proceedings be not delayed.

Insurgent Defeats Reported.

A report has been received here that Jose Maceo with a force of 300 insurgents attacked the town of Cristo, near Santiago, but, after a sharp encounter, was repulsed with the loss of three killed. Three of their number were also taken prisoners. A party of rebels destroyed by dynamite the culvert at the entry to Guanabana, near Matanzas. Forts Limonas and Matahzas have been attacked by a body of rebels said to have been commanded by Serafin Sanchez. The attacks, however, were unsuccessful, the insurgents being repulsed and compelled to retire. During their retreat they set fire to the canefields in the vicinity, which were destroyed. A party of ten Havana volunteers of the garrison upon the estate Las Canas, near Bolondron, in the Matanzas province, while on a foraging expedition were attacked by a party of rebels and five of them were killed, two were wounded and the rest disappeared. Another detachment of seventeen volunteers were surprised by a band of rebels, who had laid an ambush for them on the Barrada farm, near Colon. It is said that an expedition commanded by the insurgent leaders Monson and Aguirre has been captured and a number of important documents secured.

MAY BE REPRIMANDED.

Commander Hoff Detached from the Newark as a Result of Trial.

Washington, April 30.—Commander William Bainbridge Hoff has been detached from the command of the Newark as the result of an investigation held by a court of inquiry. The findings of the court were approved by the navy department and will be made public to-day. It is understood that the court recommended Hoff to be reprimanded. Hoff, in command of the Lancaster, was ordered to Montevideo to relieve the Newark. He cabled the department announcing his arrival at Fayal, hundreds of miles out of the regular course. A reason for this divergence was wired and an answer received from the consul at Fayal stating that the Lancaster had sailed. This was contrary to the regulations, which direct a report from her commander of the departure of a vessel. Hoff is also charged with having used steam instead of sail, contrary to orders.

Budd says that the State is making an extraordinary effort under the $100,000 appropriation to secure good roads, but that there are already more roads petitioned for in Essex, Mercer, Burlington and Atlantic counties than can be built under the present appropriation. Altogether there are about 1,000 miles of good stone roads in the State and Mr. Budd said he knew of no road that was not in good condition.

The Newark Advertiser says that John Kean is a candidate for the chairmanship of the Republican State Committee, and if reports are true he stands a very good chance. In Union county, Mr. Kean's friends say they think he is laying his pipes again for the gubernatorial nomination, but the politicians in other parts of the State say that he is really in the fight for United States Senator, independent of any consideration for Garret A. Hobart, says this paper. He is in favor of Mr. Hobart for a second place on the National ticket, and is using his influence to create a sentiment for him in New York, where he has many political friends, and even in other parts of the United States.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills.

For thirty years Dr. Deane has made a study of dyspepsia, and in thirty years has cured more cases of it than probably any other fifty physicians combined. He gave up the study of theology and took to medicine, because the most eminent physicians of that day gave him up as a chronic dyspeptic, with only a short time to live.

Result of this change—a hearty, healthy, useful life, an enormous practice, and a demand for his pills greater than for all others combined wherever known. For sale at all druggists'. Send for a free sample. White wrapper if constipated, yellow if bowels are loose.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U.S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

THEATRICAL.

In the hilly region of East Tennessee lies a romantic glen known as Coon Hollow. Some years ago a bursting dam made this hollow the scene of an inundation of almost the dimensions of the Johnstown horror, though of course not so fatal to buman life. This freshet forms one of the principal incidents of Mr. Chas. Callahan's new comedy-drama, "A Romance of Coon Hollow," which also contains a cotton compress sensational effect and the historic race on the Mississippi river between the steamboats Robert E. Lee and Natchez. There are also unique electrical effects and a strong plantation scene by darky boys and girls. The company also carries two quartettes. An elaborate scenic production of "A Romance of Coon Hollow," with the same effects and cast originally seen at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York, is announced to be given at the ushers benefit at Music Hall tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wayne at opera house all next week. The Detroit Free Press says of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wayne in the comedy drama "From Sire to Son." The play has an interesting plot and was well put on by the company, which is justly claimed to be one of the best dramatic organizations on the road. The audience was agreeable surprised by the excellence of the performance, which was equal to many of the high priced attractions. The scenic appointments were especially fine. Mr. Wayne is a finished actor, and is well supported by his wife, the leading lady. Frank Bouman and Rosa Adella gave a musical specially which was well encored. The company appears in "La Belle Marie" at opera house for one week beginning Monday, May 4th, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Popular prices 10, 20 and 30 cents. Ladies admitted free, on opening night.—see adv. in newspapers.

Love Songs.

"Love Songs of Great Writers" is the title of an entertainment to be given in the Casino on Thursday evening of next week. Mrs. Bermann will give a short talk with musical illustrations by Miss Marguerite Hall and Nicholas Danty. The following are the patronesses: Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, Mrs. C. H. McCutchen, Mrs. J. H. Reinhart, Mrs. J. G. Foster, Mrs. J. D. Miller, Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Mrs. Irving Brown, Mrs. Hugh Hastings, Mrs. C. L. Case, Miss Cock.

Work Again Resumed.

A small gang of men resumed work on the Dunellen extension of the street railway this morning after the delay occasioned by the lack of ties. The full force will be on duty in a short time and it is expected that the Dunellen extension can be completed inside of two weeks. The wires are now being strung on the Netherwood extension, and that part of the work is going on rapidly. There is no doubt but that the system will be complete long before May 30th

Mrs. Perry's Side of the Story.

Mrs. Mattie Perry, who made a complaint against her husband, Lemuel Perry, for non-support, states to The Press that she did not leave her husband, but that he refused to live with her after she recovered from her sickness at New Brunswick. THE BOERS' LENIENCY Anxiety in England as To How Far It May Be Extended.

PRAISE FOR KRUGER'S HUMANITY

His Action in Sparing the Lives of the Reform Union Leaders Expected To Result in Increased Friendship.

London, April 30.—The action of President Kruger in commuting the sentence of death imposed upon the leaders of the Johannesburg Reform Union, although such action was confidently expected, has caused a most kindly feeling to prevail in official circles for the Boers, and it is confidently believed that closer and more friendly relations will henceforth exist between England and the Transvaal government. Just how far President Kruger intends to extend his clemency to the convicted men is not known, but it is confidently believed their terms of imprisonment will not be long.

The Judge Gave Them Hope.

Even the judge who passed sentence upon the men expressed the hope that the sentence would not be carried out. He said he had no option but to pass sentence according to the Roman-Dutch law. He said that although Dr. Jameson must have come into the country against the wish of the prisoners and for his own purpose or for the purposes of the British Chartered South African company, the fact remained that he came to the border at the invitation of the reform committee, and if they had not invited him there would not have been an inroad in another country. Could the prisoners reasonably expect mercy for such a serious crime as high treason? However, he said he hoped that the executive would exercise the same degree of clemency towards the prisoners that he had shown at the beginning of the year. John Hays Hammond's physician stood by him while the sentence of death was being pronounced. Hammond was weak in health, but firm and strong in spirit, and showed not the slightest sign of fear.

Kruger on the Judgment.

A dispatch from Pretoria under yesterday's date gives the substance of an interview with President Kruger, in which the Boer president said in regard to the sentences passed upon the leaders of the Johannesburg Reform union that he was earnestly weighing in his mind the developments of the day. He trusted, he added, that the people of Johannesburg would calmly await the decision of the government. The judgment of the court would be presented to the executive in writing on April 30, when the matter would be promptly dealt with.

No Previous Agreement.

Pretoria, April 30.—The state attorney has officially denied the statement that any agreement had been made in accordance with which lighter penalties would be imposed upon the leaders in the reform movement in consideration of their pleading guilty to the charges against them.

Kruger's Diplomatic Game.

Washington, April 30.—The impression holds at the state department that President Kruger will hold the sentence of imprisonment over the heads of Rhodes, Hammond and their associates in order to force the hand of Chamberlain and the British government and compel the acceptance of whatever terms he may name in the settlement of the differences between Great Britain and the Transvaal.

Olney Working for Hammond.

Washington, April 30.—Secretary Olney is in telegraphic communication with the British foreign office with regard to securing the most favorable treatment of Hammond by the Boer authorities. This line of action is made necessary by the fact that the United States government has no diplomatic officer near the South African republic, its only representative being a consular agent at Johannesburg and a vice consul at Cape Town. Vice Consul Knight wired that he would send further particulars of the commutation of the death sentence, but did not do so for the reason, undoubtedly, as shown in the United Press dispatches from London, that the clemency granted was indefinite and did not indicate how far the commutation went.

Barnato Threatens To Close All His Mines.

Johannesburg, April 30.—The Diggers' News says that Barney Barnato, the "Kaffir King," is very bitter in his feelings and expressions concerning the sentences imposed upon Rhodes, Hammond and others at Pretoria yesterday and is showing his resentment by closing all his mines and selling all his landed properties in the Rand. The people are paralyzed at the prospect, as the closing of the Barnato mines will throw thousands of men into the already overflowing ranks of the unemployed.

Predicts Serious Trouble for England.

Paris, April 30.—The Figaro, in an article upon the European situation, dwells upon the many difficulties which are besetting England, and predicts serious trouble for her in the Transvaal.

Russian Warship in Collision.

London, April 30.—The Russian warship Rasboynik was in collision off Margate yesterday with the German bark Dorade, Capt. Anderson, bound from Shields for Iquique. The warship had her mast broken and boats smashed. The fate of the Dorade has not been learned.

Yale Not To Take Part.

New Haven, April 30.—Yale will not take part in the spring shooting match with Harvard and Princeton, as members of the Yale club have been unable to practice.

CHEAP PAINT.
The Kind That Soon Fades and Rubs Off.
Good Paint That Should Be Put On from the Inside, Instead of from the Outside.
You can make a very cheap paint by using an ordinary whitewash. It will cling to the house and barns just as well as it does to the upper walls of your rooms. To be sure it does not last very long and it rubs off. Perhaps you have seen young girls, and some not quite so young, try the trick of putting the color of health on their cheeks by using some red powder or paste. But it does not last long and it rubs off. Yet we can hardly blame them, for who does not like to see the rosy color of robust health, and who is not pained at the sight of the white lips and colorless cheeks? We advise all girls, whether old or young, to paint their cheeks if they are pale. But be sure to paint them with something which will last and will not rub off. Put the paint on from the inside, not from the outside.
The elements which give color to the blood are minute bodies, called the red blood corpuscles. If there is not enough of these in your blood, then you are pale, weak, without appetite, probably thin in flesh and quite nervous. In fact, everything seems to go wrong in the body when there is a deficiency in these life-giving red blood corpuscles. An abundance of these little bodies make rich blood, red blood. The circulation is improved and the bright tinge of color comes again to the lips and cheeks.
You have only to consult medical works to learn that cod-liver oil is one of the best remedies known to increase the number of these red corpuscles of the blood. Eminent medical writers declare that this is one of the most marked features of cod-liver oil. We prefer to recommend to you the oil after it has been broken up into minute particles, as in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites. The stomach bears it better in this form, and it makes the oil very palatable also. The hypophosphites are added because the nervous system needs a tonic, something to build it up on a permanent basis. If you are pale, do not get much benefit from your food, mentally and physically unable to work, simply dragging along day after day, take Scott's Emulsion. It puts color on the cheeks. It is a color that comes to stay, and you cannot rub it off.
Scott's Emulsion has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. Ask your doctor. Because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. Insist on Scott's Emulsion with trademark of man and fish. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby.

"I say she shall!" the priest shrieked, losing all control over himself. "Fool! Madman! You know not what you do!" As the words passed his lips, he made an adroit forward movment, surprised the other, clutched him by the arms, and with a strength I should never have thought lay in his meager frame, flung him some paces into the room. "Fool!" he hissed, shaking his crooked fingers at him in malignant triumph. "There is no man in Paris, do you hear— or woman either—shall thwart me to-night!"

"Is that so? Indeed?"

The words, and the cold, cynical voice, were not those of Mirepoix; they came from behind. The priest wheeled round, as if he had been stabbed in the back. I clutched Croisette, and arrested the cramped limb I was moving under cover of the noise. The speaker was Bezers! He stood in the open doorway, his great form filling it from post to post, the old gibing smile on his face. We had been so taken up, actors and audience alike, with the altercation, that no one had heard him ascend the stairs. He still wore the black and silver suit, but it was half-hidden now under a dark riding cloak which just disclosed the glitter of his weapons. He was booted, spurred and gloved as for a journey.

"Is that so?" he repeated mockingly, as his gaze rested in turn on each of the four, and then traveled sharply round the room. "So you will not be thwarted by any man in Paris, to-night, eh? Have you considered, my dear coadjutor, what a large number of people there are in Paris? It would amuse me very greatly now—and I'm sure it would the ladies too, who must pardon my abrupt entrance—to see you put to the test; pitted against—shall we say the duke of Anjou? Or M. de Guise, our great man? Or the admiral? Say the admiral foot to foot?"

Rage and fear—rage at the intrusion, fear of the intruder—struggled in the priest's face. "How do you come here, and what do you want?" he inquired, hoarsely. If looks and tones could kill, we three, trembling behind our flimsy screen, had been freed that moment from our enemy.

"I have come in search of the young birds whose necks you were for stretching, my friend," was Bezers' answer. "They have vanished. Birds they must be, for unless they have come into this house by that window, they have flown away with wings."

"They have not passed this way," the priest declared stoutly, eager only to get rid of the other—and I blessed him for the words! "I have been here since I left you."

But the vidame was not one to accept any man's statement. "Thank you; I think I will see for myself," he answered, coolly. "Madame," he continued, speaking to Mme. de Pavannes as he passed her, "permit me."

He did not look at her, or see her emotion, or I think he must have divined our presence. And happily the others did not suspect her of knowing more than they did. He crossed the floor at his leisure, and sauntered to the window watched by them with impatience. He drew aside the curtain, and tried each of the bars, and peered through the opening, both up and down. An oath and an expression of wonder escaped him. The bars were standing, and firm and strong; and it did not occur to him that we could have passed between them. I am afraid to say how few inches they were apart.

As he turned he cast a casual glance at the bed—at us; and hesitated. He had the candle in his hand, having taken it to the window the better to examine the bars; and it obscured his sight. He did not see us. The three crouching forms, the strained white faces, the starting eyes, that lurked in the shadow of the curtain escaped him. The wild beating of our hearts did not reach his ears. And it was well for him that it was so. If he had come up to the bed I think we should have killed him, I know that we should have tried. All the blood in me had gone to my head, and I saw him through a haze—larger than life. The exact spot near the buckle of his cloak where I would strike him, downwards and inwards, an inch above the collar-bone—this only I saw clearly. I could not have missed it. But he turned away, his face darkening, and went back to the group near the door, and never knew the risk he had run.

CHAPTER VI.

MADAME'S FRIGHT.

And we breathed again. The agony of suspense, which Bezers' pause had created, passed away. But the night already seemed to us a week of nights. An age of experience, an aeon of adventures cut us off—as we lay shaking behind the curtain—from Caylus and its life. Paris had proved itself more treacherous than we had ever expected to find it. Everything and everyone shifted, and wore one face one minute and one another. We had come to save Pavannes' life at the risk of our own; we found him to be a villain! Here was Mirepoix owning himself a treacherous wretch, a conspirator against a woman; we sympathized with him. The priest had come upon a work of charity and rescue: we loathed the sound of his voice, and shrank from him, we knew not why, seeming only to read a dark secret, a gloomy threat in each doubtful word he uttered. He was the strangest enigma of all. Why did we fear him? Why did Mme. de Pavannes, who apparently had known him before, shudder at the touch of his hand? Why did his shadow come even between her and her sister, and estrange them, so that from the moment Pavannes' wife saw him standing by Diane's side, she forgot that the latter had come to save, and looked on her in doubt and sorrow, almost with repugnance.

We left the vidame going back to the fireplace. He stooped to set down the candle by the hearth. "They are not here," he said, as he straightened himself again, and looked curiously at his companions. He had apparently been too much taken up with the pursuit to notice them before. "That is certain, so I have the less time to lose," he continued. "But I would—yes, my dear coadjutor, I certainly would like to know before I go what you are doing here. Mirepoix—Mirepoix is an honest man. I did not expect to find you in his house. And two ladies? Two! Fie, coadjutor. Ha, Mme. d'O, is it? My dear lady," he continued, addressing her in a whimsical tone, "do not start at the sound of your own name! It would take a hundred hoods to hide your eyes or bleach your lips to the common color; I should have known you at once, had I looked at you. And your companion? Pheugh!"

He broke off, whistling softly. It was clear that he recognized Mme. de Pavannes, and recognized her with astonishment. The bed creaked as I craned my neck to see what would follow. Even the priest seemed to think that some explanation was necessary, for he did not wait to be questioned.

"Mme. de Pavannes," he said, in a dry, husky voice, and without looking up, "was spirited hither yesterday, and detained against her will by this good man, who will have to answer for it. Mme. d'O discovered her whereabouts, and asked me to escort her here without loss of time to enforce her sister's release."

"And her restoration to her distracted husband?"

"Just so," the priest assented, acquiring confidence, I thought.

"And madame desires to go?"

"Surely! Why not?"

"Well," the vidame drawled, his manner such as to bring the blood to Mme. de Pavannes' cheek, "it depends on the person who—to use your phrase, M. le Coadjuteur—spirited her hither."

"And that," madame herself retorted, raising her head, while her voice quivered with indignation and anger, "was the abbess of the Ursulines. Your suspicions are base, worthy of you and unworthy of me, M. le Vidame! Diane!" she continued, sharply, taking her sister's arm, and casting a disdainful glance at Bezers, "let us go. I want to be with my husband. I am stifled in this room."

"We are going, little one," Diane murmured, reassuringly. But I noticed that the speaker's animation, which had been as a soul to her beauty when she entered the room, was gone. A strange stillness—was it fear of the vidame?—had taken its place.

"The abbess of the Ursulines?" Bezers continued, thoughtfully. "She brought you here, did she?" There was surprise, genuine surprise, in his voice. "A good soul, and, I think I have heard, a friend of yours. Umph!"

"A very dear friend," madame answered, stiffly. "Now, Diane!"

"A dear friend! And she spirited you hither yesterday!" commented the vidame, with the air of one solving an anagram. "And Mirepoix detained you; respectable Mirepoix, who is said to have a well-filled stocking under his pallet, and stands well with the bourgeoisie. He is in the plot. Then at a very late hour, your affectionate sister, and my good friend the coadjutor, enter to save you. From what?"

No one spoke. The priest looked down, his cheek livid with anger.

"From what?" Bezers continued, with grim playfulness. "There is the mystery. From the clutches of this profligate Mirepoix, I suppose. From the dangerous Mirepoix. Upon my honor," with a sudden ring of resolution in his tone, "I think you are safer here; I think you had better stay where you are, madame, until morning! And risk Mirepoix!"

"Oh, no! no!" madame cried, vehemently.

"Oh, yes! yes!" he replied. "What do you say, coadjutor? Do you not think so?"

The priest looked down sullenly. His voice shook as he murmured, in answer: "Madame will please herself. She has a character, M. le Vidame. But if she prefer to stay here—well!"

"Oh, she has a character, has she?" rejoined the giant, his eyes twinkling with evil mirth, "and she should go home with you, and my old friend, Mme. d'O, to save it! That is it, is it? No, no," he continued, when he had had his silent laugh out, "Mme. de Pavannes will do very very well here—very well here until morning. We have work to do. Come. Let us go and do it."

"Do you mean it?" said the priest starting and looking up with a subtle challenge—almost a threat—in his tone.

"Yes, I do."

Their eyes met; and seeing their looks, I chuckled, nudging Croisette. No fear of them discovering us now. I recalled the old proverb which says that when thieves fall out, honest men come by their own, and speculated on the chance of the priest freeing us once for all from M. de Bezers.

But the two were ill-matched. The vidame could have taken up the other with one hand and dashed his head on the floor. And it did not end there. I doubt if in craft the priest was his equal. Behind a frank brutality Bezers—unless his reputation belied him—concealed an Italian intellect. Under a cynical recklessness he veiled a rare cunning and a constant suspicion; enjoying in that respect a combination of apparently opposing qualities, which I have known no other man to possess in an equal degree, unless it might be his late majesty, Henry the Great. A child would have suspected the priest; a veteran might have been taken in by the vidame.

And indeed the priest's eyes presently sank. "Our bargain is to go for noting?" he muttered, sullenly.

"I know of no bargain," quoth the vidame. "And I have no time to lose, splitting hairs here. Set it down to what you like. Say it is a whim of mine, a fad, a caprice. Only understand that Mme. de Pavannes stays. We go. And," he added this, as a sudden thought seemed to strike him, "though I would not willingly use compulsion to a lady, I think Mme. d'O had better come too."

"You speak masterfully," the priest said with a sneer, forgetting the tone he had himself used a few minutes before to Mirepoix.

"Just so. I have 40 horsemen over the way," was the dry answer. "For the moment, I am master of the legions, Coadjutor."

"That is true," Mme. d'O said; so softly that I started. She had scarcely spoken since Bezers' entrance. As she spoke now, she shook back the hood from her face and disclosed the chestnut hair clinging about her temples—deep blots of color on the abnormal whiteness of her skin. "That is true, M. de Bezers," she said. "You have the legions. You have the power. But you will not use it, I think, against an old friend. You will not do us this hurt when I— But listen."

He would not. In the very middle of her appeal he cut her short—brute that he was! "No, madame!" he burst out violently, disregarding the beautiful face, the supplicating glance that might have moved a stone, "that is just what I will not do. I will not listen! We know one another. Is not that enough?"

She looked at him fixedly. He returned her gaze, not smiling now, but eyeing her with a curious watchfulness.

And after a long pause she turned from him. "Very well," she said softly, and drew a deep, quivering breath, the sound of which reached us. "Then let us go." And without—strangest thing of all—bestowing a word or look on her sister, who was weeping bitterly in a chair, she turned to the door and led the way out, a shrug of her shoulders the last thing I marked.

The poor lady heard her departing step, however, and sprang up. It dawned upon her that she was being deserted. "Diane! Diane!" she cried distractedly—and I had to put my hand on Croisette to keep him quiet, there was such fear and pain in her tone—"I will go! I will not be left behind in this dreadful place! Do you hear? Come back to me, Diane!"

The Metropolis Wheelmen, of New York, have arranged a run to Plainfield for August 16th.

Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, is training on the Tioga track at Philadelphia.

With the exception of club meets there will be no bicycle races at the Manhattan Beach cycle track this season.

Charles Glaentzer, of New street, has purchased a Hunter, and is attempting to learn the mysteries of the wheel.

Miss Addie Weaver, of Grove street, now rides a Lyndhurst wheel, which she purchased of Lister, the North avenue cycle dealer.

The Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs and the New Jersey Association may combine in the latter's century run in June.

Mrs. Thomas Brown, of Craig place, is one of the latest to join Plainfield's corps of wheel women. She rides a Cleveland Swell Special.

A special individual and club prize will be given by the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey on the century run to Asbury Park on June 20th.

Miss Lucy Westphal, of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, has purchased a Crescent wheel from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

At the annual race meet of the Kings County Wheelmen, to be held at Manhattan Beach on June 27th, five amateur and three professional races will be held.

Walter C. Roome will represent the Clio Wheelmen, of New York, at the Irvington Millburn road race. Roome has ridden in this city many times under the colors of the N. J. A. C.

L. D. Cabanne, the St. Louis racing man who has been suspended by the L. A. W. from its tracks for life, has filed a petition with President Sterling Elliott asking for a reduction of his suspension.

Elston Leonard is acting in the capacity of trainer for William M. McCutchen, the Crescent Wheelmen's speedy rider, and will look after him until he leaves for Belmar about the first of June.

A new cycle path is to be constructed between Asbury Park and Trenton, a distance of 45 miles. The route takes in Asbury Park, West Park, Hamilton, Farmingdale, Allentown, Yardville and Trenton.

A meeting of the Racing Board of the Crescent Wheelmen will be held this evening when the question of the preparation of the track will be discussed, and more arrangements for the Decoration Day meet made.

The grand total of membership of the L. A. W., is 38,593. During the last week the increase was as follows: New York division 638, total 12,220; New Jersey 192, total 2,562; Pennsylvania 234, total 3,448; Massachusetts 231, total 5,229, and new applications, all divisions, 2,039.

Miss Henrietta Williamson, of Newark, who is visiting Mrs. Chas. Sturtevant, of Orchard place, is establishing quite a record as a bicycle rider. Miss Williamson is a member of the Essex Cyclers, of Newark, which club offers a prize to the woman rider who rides a thousand miles the quickest in the season. Miss Williamson often takes a spin of 25 or 30 miles in the country of an afternoon, frequently riding to this city and home again in an afternoon.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle company are still selling wheels at their usual rapid rate. The most recent purchasers of Cleveland Swell Special wheels include J. C. Abbott, Harry Woltmann, R. J. Jackson and Wm. F. Stevens, two, one a lady's and the other a gentleman's wheel. Mr. Stevens also purchased a Crescent wheel. W. F. Moore also purchased a Crescent wheel.

The Jersey Wheel Company have received a shipment of sample wheels ranging in price from $25 to $80. The Jersey wheel will be ready in about two weeks and it will be a thing of beauty and joy forever. Their place on North avenue is one of the best equipped cycle repositories in the country. Commuters can leave their wheels there on their way to the train and have them cleaned everyday for the nominal price of one dollar per month. Both men and women cyclists are perfectly welcome to stop at this place and they will find toilet rooms for their accommodation and every convenience is provided for all who indulge in the popular and growing sport of wheeling. You will also find a full line of all kinds of sporting goods both for men and women at prices to suit all.

At the Crescent Whaelmen's meet on the Crescent Oval, Decoration Day Wm. H. Gardner, of the Greenwich Wheelmen, after several years' absence from the track, will make his re-appearance as a racing man. Gardner has been a rider since 1889, and has ridden at race meets in this city. As a member of the Greenwich Wheelmen he hustled for the club's interest's. He was club champion in 1892 and '93, captain in 1893, and for three years served on the Board of Governors. Last year he did considerable long-distance riding, rolling up 6,876 miles, including fifteen centuries.

There are few cycling organiza ions which have not prepared road cards of runs to suburban places for every Sunday and holiday throughout the entire riding season. It was estimated at the end of 1895 that the aggregate mileage of these runs in the Metropolitan District exceeded 3,000,000. These runs would be much more enjoyable if the "scorchers" were held in check, and not allowed to set the pace. The average run of today means a severe test of endurance and strength. The best part of a club run is companionship, and scorching will break up a run quicker than anything else.

The movement to form a Y. M. C.A cycling league, which was first told of in the Daily Press, will take definite shape at a meeting to be held at the rooms of the Westfield Y. M. C. A. tomorrow night. The following associations will be represented at the meeting: East Orange, Orange, Summit, Morristown, Rahway, Westfield, Plainfield and Newark. The delegates from this city will be General Secretary Harry Manning; Physical Director C. W. Nichols; Thomas A. Cuming, captain of the bicycling division, and Charles B. Morse, chairman of the committee on runs. The delegation will go with power to join in any organization that may be formed. The first run of the new league will probably be to Milburn on May 30th, to see the Irvington Milburn road race. They will then return to Plainfield for lunch and then attend either the Crescent Wheelmen's meet or the Y. M. C. A. baseball game.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Cap Kirkner and Charles Maltby, of this city, spent yesterday angling for the finny tribe at Bound Brook. They report a good catch.

The approach of warm weather has cause the attendance at the gymnasium classes at the Y. M. C. A. to fall off considerably. It was decided at a meeting of the business men's class last evening to discontinue the class until fall. Physical Director Nichol announces that the last of the regular evening gymnasium class until fall will be held this evening.

Unless a storm appears the Senior class of the High School will hold their field day on the Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon. It will be an informal affair, but lots of fun is looked for. There will be no prizes, except two ribbons of the class colors which the young women of the class have presented, to be awarded to the contestants scoring the first and second highest number of points. The list of events will be: 100 yard dash, 440 yard run, one-third mile bicycle race, putting the shot, running high jump, standing broad jump, pole vault. This list is subject to change. The committee in charge consists of Volney F. Green, J. Hazelwood Craig and Henry Eggerding. There will be no admission charged and a number of the students of the High School will be present.

The regular season of the business men's gymnasium class of the Y. M. C. A. ended last night with the term of C. W. Nichols, the temporary director. The members of the class decided to choose a director from among their own number and continue the work of exercise for sometime yet.

John Goff, of the New Jersey Sporting Protective and Propogating Society, has at last secured a number of Belgium hares for the use of the society.

George P. Smith has entered the games of the Columbia Grammar School at Columbia Oval, Williamsbridge, N. Y., on Friday, and will put the shot.

A large number of boys and men were seen about the edge of Tier's lake last evening, gigging for suckers and carp. The fish have a habit of going to the shallow water at the very edge of the lake and there go to sleep. They can be caught with little effort, one man getting 30 suckers and carp in two hours Tuesday night.

Take a dose of DeWitt's Little Early Risers just for the good they will do you. These little pills are good for indigestion, good for headache, good for liver complaint, good for constipation. They are good. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

GOLF.

The golf course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be formally opened for the season next Saturday. The greens are in excellent condition. The committee in charge intend giving suitable prizes for the best average scores each month. Score cards will be ready next Saturday.

LAWN TENNIS.

A window full of Wright & Ditson's tennis goods is attracting much attention at Edsall's Commercial Palace. The goods are being sold in the sporting department in the basement at cut prices.
